Raising the question of whether there is a need to re-examine basic thinking about conditions of threat in the international environment stimulates two kinds of opposition. The first comes from the quarter where, for a generation, an intense effort has been mounted in data gathering and in threat evaluation. It is an understandable reaction that individuals who have devoted whole careers to the struggle with the complexities of international politics, viewed from the angle of defense against threat raised by military opponents, would wonder what conceivable improvement could be made in the analyses of the subject. Everything useful, both in thought and practice relating to international threat, already has been gone over, analyzed, and placed in a realistic working perspective.

The second kind of resistance appears as the result of a widespread viewpoint that a chief cause of international tension is the exclusive preoccupation of some governments of nation states with military defense as the only route to national security and to the maintenance of peace. Persons of this persuasion are certain that thinking constantly about possible threats and potential dangers is the cause of the threats and dangers. The stimulating of suspicion and the discounting of the possibilities of trust and cooperation between nations put a negative cast on international affairs and have led to the creation of a world armed to the teeth, with less security for individuals and societies than existed before the arming began, and with a crushing burden of costs that cripples innovation and creativity: actions that should be reforming the world order. The worst thing that one can do is re-examine a subject that ought to be abandoned altogether and banned from the realm of active ideas.

The audience that can be engaged in further inquiry into the nature of threats and the means of guarding against them obviously must be found in the middle between the two poles of opposition. An attitude is required, on the one hand, that will accept that not everything that needs to be known already has been determined and acted upon, and, on the other hand, that will doubt that a revolution in the world order can take place by the 1990's on the required moral plane necessary to make global decency, trust, and peaceful cooperation prevail. Those in the middle need not cast disrespect or ridicule in either direction of the extremes, but they do need to maintain the position that there are some problems to be met in the here and now.

Public observers of current world affairs have not been remiss in calling attention to approaching dangers. Like the guards and sentinels of animal communities, they issue alarm signals that circulate in great numbers and large variety through the channels of public communication. Some alarms are directed to individuals and are manipulative in their demands that individuals act to increase their own personal safety. Others focus at community levels, both local and national, and still others have a world span, calling attention to possibilities of global catastrophe. To make a first exploration of the range of the threat recognition field developed by the alarm-raising practices of public communications, we asked a dozen individuals to use free association and to list as many threats in the environment as they could in an hour. Over five hundred different threat identifications resulted, running the gamut between individual and globe. Some recognized threats are immediate and are perceived to belong to next month or next year and others involve prospects remote in the time of their expected or possible devastation. There are two additional properties noticeable in the threat items reflecting an awareness of impending dangers in the environment. These have central importance in this report.

Many alarm messages call attention to conditions that, a decade back, would not have been thought about, or, if they had come to attention, would have been dismissed as fantastic, erroneous, or too remote to consider. There are, in other words, "new threats" in being whose related alarm signals convey clear and present danger. In the second place, there appears to exist a characteristic in the awareness of main threats, both old and new, that instructs individuals they are under "systemic" influences: (1) there is "no place to hide"--threat is inescapable--and (2) collective response rather than individual response (being too weak to help) is the option available for protecting against disaster.

Here, the theoretical consideration appears that the urge to mount collective action in defense against threats must be expected to be directed through political channels in the national states with mass societies. From this, follows the relevance of the idea of the "primacy of politics" and the consequence that much of international behavior will be governed according to collective reactions within nations against the presence of major threat. Foreign policy and foreign action (or, in other words, international behavior) of national governments are traced to the most prominent readings of threat perceived within national societies. Why countries act as they do in international affairs is a question answered in considerable part by a knowledge of what is on the threat agendas of countries. The agendas will be expected to vary (1) from country to country and (2) from one time to the next.

More than in any past period in history, all the lines of international behavior intertwine and interact in the complex called the international system. International behavior, analyzed from the standpoint of threat-stimulated and threat-directed activity, may be structured in a number of forms but the two conditions that give coherence to action structures and that we understand most clearly are those of invulnerability and deterrence. The condition of invulnerability affects the flow of international behavior by allowing those members of the international system who perceive themselves to be separated from and immune to the threat-driven actions of other members, to stand aside and to enjoy the fruits of non-participation in the system. The operation of the international system is simpler and more controllable when many members can stay inactive when they feel they hold an invulnerable position.

Deterrence is also a simplifying mechanism in international system action and control because it establishes self-enforcing rules of interaction.

The fundamental diagnosis of the recent changes in international politics is that the condition of invulnerability has diminished sharply while the span of control through the deterrence mechanism has not expanded to bridge the gap. It is the weakness and the incoherence in this gap between invulnerability and deterrence that generate new complexities and uncertainties in the international system and that complicate and change the problems of national defense against threat. Threat analysis in the international setting that has been geared to the maintenance of deterrence ought not to be expected to function well in the "new politics" of the gap. The intellectual task in this problem is to reconsider threat phenomena with invulnerability and deterrence removed as assumed conditions.

The most elementary and also the most fundamental analysis of threat from abroad is the investigation of the factors of capability and intent. The involved logic is simple; given a recognition that a threat is real and important, the critical questions to be answered are: (1) is the threatener determined to carry through with the sanctions imbedded in the act of threatening, and (2) does the threatener have the capacity to exact the deprivation or punishment involved in the execution of the sanctions?

A defense against threat is strongest when the defender is in the position or is able to take measures to assure that the execution of sanctions by the threatener will be to no avail—that damage cannot be effected. Threats may be ignored or rejected when the defender is certain his position is invulnerable. The condition may be identified, as Boulding has provided, by referring to it as the state of "unconditional viability."(1) The response to threat under that circumstance can be communicated in various messages whose meaning is "Go ahead however you like; do your worst." Here the capability consideration in the threat situation overrides completely the intent factor. In international politics, complete and unconditional viability as the defense against threat is realized rarely. Most cases that may be cited are hypothetical: an Albanian threat to impose an economic blockade on Brazil to drive down coffee prices would find Brazil invulnerable and, therefore, Brazil would be in a position to reject absolutely every aspect of Albania's sanction attempts, in view of Albania's incapability.

The incapability-invulnerability combination is not an interesting one except in the aspect of being an ideal type and one that national regimes try to escape. In numbers of cases, nations experience the sting of frustration and humiliation in being unable to do in international affairs what they would most like to do. The effort to reduce perceived vulnerability is an even stronger behavioral impulse when an awareness of being vulnerable dawns suddenly. It was easier for Belgium to adjust to the superpower structure of the international political system after World War II than it was for Great Britain. Not being a Great Power of the first water was a new situation for the British and coming to terms with that rude fact was difficult. The Belgians, on the other hand, already were accustomed to coping from a small power position. Similarly, the sudden American experience in realizing that, after a quarter of a century of enthusiastic advocacy of "modernization," world industrialization, energy-intensive practices, and international economic interdependence and cooperation, the substantial consequence was a circumstance of growing U.S. energy vulnerability. The immediate reaction was the establishment of a policy to try to gain "energy independence," although from the first, many saw that such a goal could not be reached within the century. Abrupt turns of history, of the type these two instances illustrate generally, lead into periods of confusion and to much working at cross purposes for a time.

The more common case of capability and intent furnishing the key factors in the analysis of problems of national defense against threat is that of the prohibiting effect of capabilities in the balance of relations between two parties bound to each other by hostility. Reference here is, obviously, to the interactive process called deterrence. One hardly wishes to redescribe the fundamental deterrence mechanism, so familiar has the concept become, but it is, in essence, that the action that a party would want to take and also would be capable of undertaking will not occur because that party is held back by the realization that the price to be paid, exacted by another party in retaliation, would be too great. An unacceptable risk arises between the desire to act and the decision to act. A deterrence system emerges when this particular kind of constraint has become mutual and two parties, two coalitions, two camps, etc. are bound together in such a relationship. The argument has been set forth that "deterrence does not deter." If a long view of experience is taken, that contention is true. Sooner or later, and for any of a number of causes, the maintenance of a system of deterrence will break down. The loss of control may come about because of a re-evaluation of the nature or magnitude of the threat. It may occur because of a change in the relationship of capabilities. Belief about the future that deterrent conditions hold is the operating factor, however, whatever the underlying complex of causes. Deterrence is a psychological phenomenon. It is not less real for being psychological in nature. One of the few genuinely powerful processes of social control, known and used again and again, it can be maintained for long periods provided it is tended carefully with reinforcing actions that nurture and support the master belief behind the system.

Attention to intent is more important in the deterrence situation than in the first-named circumstance of capability neutralized by invulnerability. The two factors of capability and intent intermingle in the deterrence relationship. As we have noted above, deterrence is based on an age-old understanding of one of the basic means of regulating relations both within human communities and between them. It becomes most prominent as a control mechanism when temporary accommodations are sought by pairs of hostile parties. The specific concept was long submerged in the lore of international politics and lacked a particular name (certain aspects of the "balance of power"-always a vague and extensive notion better utilized for rhetorical purposes than for keen analysis--was the closest reference). After World War II, the concurrent development of nuclear weapons and long distance ballistic missiles that appeared in the setting of Soviet-American rivalry brought the concept to the fore, gave it a colorful name, and stimulated the development of myriads of theoretical and doctrinal sub-concepts. Familiarization with the idea of deterrence has proceeded so far now that reviews of its complex elaboration are not required when mention is made of the concept.

Deterrence hinges on the expectation that the capability factor will govern the intent factor but not determine it. The distinction between "govern" and "determine" may seem too fine but the relevant logic is that if capability determined intent, the latter could be ignored. Intent becomes an important consideration in the analysis of threat under deterrence for the simple and disturbing reason that both parties in the relationship must comprehend and respect the capability factor in a certain way. Deterrence is likely to go wrong as a control on behavior if the set of comprehension and respect elements—an intent consideration—is not maintained and continued. The intent factor is not held entirely to this one concern but it relates mainly to evaluations of the required conditions of deterrence viability. Requisite conditions for deterrence are (1) that the structure of the defense relationship be bilateral (multiple participation must reduce by alignment to two camps or groups), (2) the perception of a paramount threat must be clear and constant, although the perception may not be the same on both sides on all counts, (3) the parties must hold the conviction that the deterrence process is working or, in other words, the "credibility" of the system and of the conduct of the principals must be high, and (4) confidence must be maintained on both sides that the "logic of the situation" will direct all relevant policy and action decisions into the channel of calculation of relative capabilities. The fourth point means that coordination and simplification will take place for both parties through constant inspections of capabilities in terms of "what we could do compared against what they could do" and of "what we have compared against what they have."

Intent analysis has two significant functions when the turn of history has produced the four fundamental attributes of deterrence noted above and when a system of international relationships founded on the deterrence mechanism has come into play.

One of these functions is to provide the indications of whether or not the opposing party is keeping up the comprehension-respect condition. It is always a possibility to be considered that the dominant viewpoint of policy-formulators in the other camp will move to another foreign policy orientation not compatible with a continuing deterrence relationship. The possibilities in this range have been well-explored; included are (1) the "madman" concept or that a power-holding group will cast "reason" to the winds and use the available capabilities to advance its purposes without regard to the retaliatory consequences, (2) the comprehension-respect factor will weaken and decay, especially after a long period of time when "nothing has happened" and when the sense of protection against the paramount threat is taken for granted, and (3) the opponent may decide to abandon deterrence, with its accommodation and equilibrium features, and begin to reshape policy goals and plans for a future confrontation whose outcome is expected to be the winning of supremacy in the system.

The second reason why intent analysis retains importance under a deterrence structure of international relations is that predatory enterprises undertaken by one or both parties are possible in secondary arenas. These activities may proceed without causing an upheaval in the main deterrence structure. "Nibbling tactics" have been described in the past to make reference to such secondary activities. Various kinds of international action may appear to be unrelated to the paramount threat and hence seem beyond deterrence. The suspicion will always be active, however, that the secondary developments could have a cumulative effect that eventually will impact on the deterrence structure or that the opponent may have discovered a means for gaining important advantages by circumventing the deterrence constraints.

As is well known, the development over the past quarter century of capabilities studies, directed essentially at the status of the military capabilities of all states, has been extensive and much more thoroughgoing than anything attempted previously along this line. The foregoing discussion, despite its being a mere sketch and awaiting a more fully argued presentation in later reporting, provides a general rationale for why this remarkable effort has been made. Under deterrence assumptions and practices, analyses of capabilities are taken, very properly, to be the dominant concern in assessing the needs of defense against paramount threat. The concern over gaining accurate and realistic readings of intent--of what others on the other side of the deterrence relationship are thinking about and are considering as undertakings in international politics--is relieved in large measure because, as we have noted, capabilities do govern intentions; in the critical relationships under an operative deterrence system. We have outlined also the main considerations that make intent analyses of substantial importance but in an ancillary role.

In identifying, by way of preview, the particular problem to which the Threat Recognition and Analysis inquiry is directed, we need to show the relationship of what is outlined above about threat, deterrence, capabilities and intent to the assumptions we are making about the current and emerging conditions in the international political system. Our prime assumptions are (1) that the structure and process of the international system have changed greatly in recent times, and (2) the sort of historical change that has been emerging is more of an adding phenomenon than a replacing phenomenon. The last point can be addressed directly: we would assume that the appearance of detente does not require the disappearance of deterrence; detente does not "knock out" deterrence. International conflict and violence would not be expected to give way progressively and in step with gains made toward international cooperation and international interdependence; indeed, conflict and violence could well become more severe with such advances. The international system does not stop being one thing abruptly and become something else just as abruptly. It would not even be correct, in our view, to say that old and new conditions or forces "coexist." The coexistence idea suggests too much compartmentalization and too little interaction and cross-effects. The correct concept is that the international system proceeds by a gradual emerging and disappearing of circumstances generated by inter-influencing activities. Sharp breaks occur at rare intervals but even these may have more appearance than reality with respect to the dynamics of system change. We argue that in the recent period the international system has been added to and not "revolutionized" by system replacement. The practical result has been a formidable expansion of the complexity of the system.

A rapid growth of system complexity, brought about by the addition of issues and the multiplication of relations in the international system since an approximate date of about 1960, appears to us to have become one of the system's leading characteristics. Backing for this observation is not hard to find. That the international relations of today present a much more intermeshed, much more complicated, and much more difficult prospect than in the late 1950's already has been documented in some detail. In Seyom Brown's NEW FORCES IN WORLD POLITICS, the extensive review and inventory of current world problems and situations not only make apparent how the intertwining of old and new factors has begun to create unfamiliar combinations of forces and relationships but also lends detailed support to the interpretation that lately the international system has become much more complex. By comparison, the structure of the Cold War era of the late 1950's appears quite simple and manageable. What impact do these historical trends extend to the identification of the paramount threat, to the deterrence system, and to the capabilities-intent approach to the analysis of threat under deterrence?

It is the TR&A contention that multidimensionality needs to be accepted as the guiding concept. In the forementioned gap between invulnerability and deterrence in the international system, it is the hallmark. The threat that gives purpose to the guarding of the strategic balance still remains much as it was. It is paramount in its sphere. New threats emerge and enter the picture of defense, also, and each of these should be seen to be paramount in its own sphere. Deterrence as a system stands, but clustering around it (and affecting it) are other action structures of different character, now entering strongly on the world scene. Multidimensionality means also that when "new threats" arise to be taken into account, a widening of the scope of surveillance, of analysis, and of evaluation needs to occur. Redefinitions of defense to include situations that have little or nothing to do with military capabilities need to be studied. There are some kinds of threat with world-scope that will have to be planned for and defended against without there being any threatening party--no deliberate instigator or opponent. Instead of a few nations that bear special watching because of their roles as potential threatener and punisher, all nations will need to be monitored in order to arrive at an estimate of current conditions that constitute a global "threat load" or burden. The whole record of international behavior, contributed to by many parties, will need to enter the net analyses of current threat status. The preoccupation with the readings of intentions behind foreign policy will be insufficient. Capability-intent evaluations for paramount threats in new spheres will require conceptual revisions and, perhaps, entirely different orientations to analysis. The capability-intent mode of analysis does, in fact, appear to be too simple to meet the contemporary condition of international system complexity.

In brief, TR&A represents an exploration seeking to come to terms with "the something extra" of the new forces of world politics by way of a reconceptualization of the tasks of recognizing and appraising threat conditions. The stating above of the basic need to do this is only a foreshortened version. The TR&A task is not just the characterization of the requirements for an enhancement of the system of control and communication focused on the defense against threat but also, it involves a demonstration of how one such enhanced system might perform in the sector of recognition and evaluation.

At the two-thirds point in the research effort, we are prepared now to describe the main elements that will be brought together in demonstration of how an analytic system, parallel to the capability-intent approach, might work. Without further identification of the rationale of the research or of the underlying conceptualization, we proceed next to a discussion of a design of the demonstration approach to threat recognition and analysis in the new international setting.

The TR&A analytic scheme provides for operations on four bodies of data: a national threat priority file for each country in the world, called for short the "country threat file," an international event flow indicator file (EFI's or event flow indicators), a current threat identification file, abbreviated to "current threats," and a current commitments file. The basic analytical problem is to integrate elements from the four data sources and to arrive at calculations and interpretations on (1) what the global threat burden is, net, expressed in comparative terms at a given date, (2) a sensitivity and load calculation for any selected country, with respect to "threat burden," (3) expected behavioral consequences from (1) and (2) above in combinations, (4) an estimate of the "spread factor" or what the sharing is of threat perception. Perception plus stimuli acting across country boundaries and through the commitment networks should result in consequences for subsequent international behavior. The task of bringing the four elements into association is, admittedly, ambitious, and the analysis of the vectors involved is challenging.

A key part of the analysis design is the "country threat file." To acquire a body of data to demonstrate the use of the country threat file, we have scanned across a list of "standard sources" to produce an intelligence surrogate of a periodic estimate. This scanning occurs every three months in order to determine in what ways the changing of "consensus on threat perception" takes place in countries. Thus, there are four updates made each year. The third update of the file has been reproduced for inclusion in this report in order to establish the general nature of the material included. We do not recommend that anyone read through the material. Purposeful selection consonant with computer analytic tasks is the method that will be demonstrated in the utilization of the country threat file.

An important consideration is the retention of earlier updates in the computer data management system. The ordinary viewpoint would be that only the most current information should be inspected. We take the contrary view: in a changed world that is now changing again, analysis needs to focus on a time series of threat sensitivity information so that the tracing of the rate and direction of change may be calculated. Comparisons of old updates against the current version are considered a most valuable way to measure and chart threat burdens, both overall for the whole international system and country by country.

It is to be emphasized that the country threat file is not a general information file. It concentrates on the threat issues that have arisen to a prominent position on the "national agenda" of a country. In the spirit of demonstration, we entered other factual information about each country when the skeleton file was first created. Arrangements were made to use some of this extraneous material for selective scans and keyword searches for characteristics across the file and also to show that it is feasible to keep modules of special kinds (here, of national threat sensitivities) within more comprehensive computer data collections. The concept must be clear and consistent from the beginning, however.

A concept paper, "Crisis and Threat in the International Setting" has anchored the country threat file to a theoretical position. By no means the only motivation of behavior, but one, nevertheless central enough to be assigned unusual weight, the recognition of a leading threat to security or survival is a driving force behind what a state will tend to do in the international system. This is the reason why the country threat file is selective in searching for the particular sensitivities to threat in each of the national societies.

If analysis attempts to identify what a member of the international system is likely to be doing externally--and one must always realize that the phenomena all around, including the operations of analysis are anticipatory--the context of what has been happening lately in the international environment will likely impact on the perception of threat. A specific event or a series of events may well act as a trigger to activate particular threat regions in a country and, thereafter produce a response to threat.

The second part of the threat analysis design makes provision for monitoring the international environment by means of international event flow indicators (EFI's). The event flow indicators derive from the ten year files which have monitored the public reports of international events, as these have passed through the filters of elite newspapers. These filters are considered to be surrogates for equal or better filters of reports used for somewhat similar purposes in different settings. The many studies already completed of various aspects and details of international event flow phenomena have demonstrated that realistic findings on the status of affairs in international politics are possible. In employing the EFI's in the analytic scheme, we are resorting to old technology. EFI's should be taken to be flexible instruments for tracing changing configurations of international system activity. International event flows act as stimuli, some of which trigger reaction and response as they strike home in the threat-sensitive areas of individual nations. The first use of EFI's is to make the systematic connections between international developments and the activation of threats in nations.

One of the old problems, still unsolved for the most part, in international event studies has been the extreme variability of effects produced by events. Very similar series of occurrences will elicit very little response at one time and very vigorous countering reactions at other times. A possible solution exists in what can be extracted from the current threat file. It will be investigated. The logic is, if impulses in the changing configurations of international event flows strike home differentially at threat-sensitive areas of nations and if these impulses appear mysterious in the effects they produce, the reason may be that the symbolisms of threat carried along with the event stream may be variable. The perception of how dangerous the developments in the international system are at a given moment may depend not only on what has been happening recently but also on readings of what have been called "atmospherics." It is this factor that the current threat file seeks to capture. Atmospherics are shared gestalts of cognition and affect, different from country to country, that put the signature of the degree of danger or cruciality in the rational evaluations of event sequences. The hunch is that the interpretation of a situation remains stable with respect to the symbolics of threat appraisal but may overturn abruptly and be attracted into a new "basin of meaning" by the rare occurrences of trigger events. The reference is to the possible applicability of "catastrophe theory" to the analysis of the interplay between event flow and threat appraisal.(5)

In any case, the current threat file will be used in tandem with the event flow indicators to analyze the hits and misses of external influences on the threat-sensitive areas of nations. A simple dynamic input-output model is conceived. Most of the threat-event instances and sequences will not strike home and will merely "bounce" away from the national system. The output of the system should be unaffected, therefore. On the other hand, the hits that penetrate to the threat sensitive portion of national system awareness would be predicted to produce change in the output of behavior. With due consideration of the way the catastrophe (or overturn) effect is supposed to work, the strategy is to take the first steps toward developing and checking the expected relationships between the incoming and the outgoing characteristics of the event-threat streams of observed activity. Thus, the inquiry is devoted to an effort to unravel and identify strands of the "new politics" of the international system with special reference to conflict-crisis-confrontation aspects.

The "spread factor" is a name for a commonly recognized effect in international politics but it is an effect that has received no systematic study. It might also be called the spillout phenomenon. Large numbers of international events and situational developments remain within the confines of national interest and action close to a point of origin. The Sino-Soviet boundary conflict is an example of a situational development that so far has stayed within local confines. The events related to it have not spread many effects, so far, into the relations with many other countries. A low value of "spread" would be connected, therefore, to that dispute. An opposite kind of case is the Greek-Turkish communal conflict on Cyprus. Here, the threat dynamic that propelled events in the Cyprus crisis in the summer of 1974 did not remain local. The threat dynamic surged outward through a complex network of relationships and produced many actions by many countries. In other words, the Cyprus situation contained a large "spread factor."

There is a basic theory and research problem for international politics in the accounting for differences in conditions that affect the spread. In fact, whether or not an international episode is recognized intuitively as a "crisis" appears to be connected with how much of the spillout phenomenon is present.

Without making a comprehensive attack on the analysis of the spread factor, the TRA design includes one of the more concrete and obvious linkages that would be expected to facilitate the rippling out of effects from a local situation. This is the network of commitments. It is logical to expect that the threat-motivated activity of one party would stimulate threat recognition and response in other parties who have commitments binding them with the first party. One of the uses of the commitment file is to provide data for studying the relationships between an existing commitment network and the international behavior that follows from the activation of a threat response in one country. The expectation is that a spreading response pattern involving commitment partners would follow along the tracks of the commitment network. The question is whether or not the spread factor works that way.

To sum up the preceding description of the plan of analysis for the forthcoming TR&A demonstration exercise:

1. Monitoring data from the event flow indicator and the current threat file are to be brought together and reduced to a vector.

2. The vector of event-threat thus becomes the input to the threat-sensitivity and response-activation phenomena reflected in the country threat file.

3. Output from the country threat site is registered, theoretically, in the subsequent event flow indication. Input and output may then be compared as a reality test and as a progressive error correction operation.

4. Commitment channel activity is expected to reflect in the event output stream, thus capturing some knowledge about the spread factor.

A diagram of the analysis sequence is:

1 EFI Input Data
2 Current Threat Data
3 Country Threat Data
4 EFI Output Data
5 "Spread" Commitment Data

TR&A ANALYSIS LOGIC
By way of recapitulation, a statement of purpose that would justify the effort to construct analytical procedures of such increased complexity as the foregoing includes these observations:

1. An operating system that has gone through a stage of growth toward greater complexity with a thickening of lines of contact and exchange, with added dimensions that complicate its previous structure of action, and with resulting processes that are not understood immediately, will require an enhanced system of surveillance with more complex analytical procedures than previously were employed.

2. This requirement holds if the purpose is to restore the level of efficiency prevailing with respect to the conditions of communication and control under the previous simpler operating system.

3. If the purpose were to reverse the growth toward system complexity and to move back purposefully toward less complex system structures and processes, the study of the conditions produced in the more complex system operation would be important in a rational and effective plan for system simplification.

4. The choices and conditions outlined in the preceding three points appear to fit and to be relevant to current problems of management in the contemporary international system.

The following pages contain displays and examples for the four data compilations discussed above. These will supply the empirical content for the forthcoming TR&A demonstration exercises. The bulk of the material militates against a presentation of the complete documentation. Data acquisition is continuing beyond the time of this writing, in any case. Electronic recording is the preferred mode of data storage and data control. Producing paper records is becoming increasingly counter-productive. It is to be emphasized again that the reading of the documentation is not advised; scanning to establish the general character of the data is all that one should undertake. Word processing is a specialty best left to computing.

ANNEX A: COUNTRY THREAT FILE AND CODEBOOK

The Country Threat File is a concise computerized data file designed to monitor each nation's domestic and international situation. The purpose of monitoring is to provide significant contextual information on a state's recent events and policy focus, major problems and active threats, and ongoing changes that may lead to major policy shifts and other such considerations for the international system. This type of data file is very informative and time-saving for analysts, for at their terminal fingertips are such nation-specific data as active and latent threats, national resources and strengths available to withstand or carry out threats and major policy changes, national dependencies that restrict policy actions and make nations economically and politically vulnerable, and the group of nations and organizations that might support and come to the aid of a specific nation.

There are numerous types of data variables in the Country Threat File since there is a wide variety of information necessary to adequately monitor a nation. For example, there is a collection of situational attribute data such as population, gross national product, memberships in international organizations and military alliances, raw material resources, military size and expenditures. Secondly, there is transactional data such as economic and military aid, trade, and raw material flows. Another data type, event-interactions, includes quarterly accounts of domestic and international agreements and treaties, visits, support statements and actions, proposals, protests, demonstrations, warnings, verbal threats, police and military actions. Finally, there is a generalized categorization of threats to and from each nation which allows easy cross-nation comparisons for analysis.

Annex A contains a description of data categories, sources, and the September update of the Country Threat File. The data are most efficiently "read" by computer. By scanning, however, their general character can be determined.
The current data categories are:

1. Nation background information which includes:
   a) nation identification: country name, 3 letter WEIS alpha code + 3 digit WEIS numeric code for that nation, month and year of update.
   b) leadership: the titles and names of the nation's leaders, head of state(HST), foreign(FOR) defense(DEF) interior (INT) and finance(FIN) ministers. Titles such as President (PRS), Premier(PR), Prime Minister(PM), and military rankings such as general(GEN) are included. The main source is the periodical CURRENT LEADERS. Changes in leadership are noted and clipped from the newspapers. These clippings and the latest CURRENT LEADERS provide the information for the Quarterly updates.
   c) area, population(POP) and borders(BOR): originally taken from INFORMATION PLEASE ALLIANCE and the WORLD ALMANAC 1974, because of the Almanacs' concise, up-to-date, and easy to read organization. For update data, check the 1975 editions.
   France EXAMPLE=AREA: 0.212,918 POP: 51,915,000 BOR: BEL BOR: LUX BOR: GHW BOR: SWZ BOR: ITA BOR: SPN
   d) gross national product(GNP): the latest figures obtainable are taken from MILITARY BALANCE 1973-1974.
   France EXAMPLE=GNP: 202,000,000,000
   e) gross national product per capita(GNPPC): this standardization figure is calculated by dividing our latest GNP/PUP, no dollar sign is necessary. Calculations are personally done by way of computer terminals using a CPS calculation program.
   France EXAMPLE=GNPPC: 3890

2. Affiliations is a category that attempts to show the nation's recent ties in terms of their organizational and alliance memberships, military commitments, and recent political commitments and agreements. It includes:
a) organizations to which the nation currently belongs. Include all types of organizations especially security or military alliances. If the organization contains less than 7 members, include the 3 letter alpha code of the members in parentheses after the organization's name. A list of organizations and member states is in EUROPA YEARBOOK 1973 vol. 1, (VKC desk ref JN 1 E85). There will be a special computer file containing all organizations and member nations so that an analyst may see the specific nation links of organizational memberships. SOURCES: WORLD ALMANAC 1974 (inhouse), DUPUY'S ALMANAC OF WORLD MILITARY POWER 1972 (VKC desk ref UA 15 D9 1972); Peru EXAMPLE=ORG:UNO; ORG: CAS; ORG: NAFTA; ORG: Andean Common Market (BOL CHL COL ECU VEN);

b) Agreements: formal treaties, formal and informal agreements of any nature—political, economic, military, scientific and cultural. Include the nation(s) and/or organizations in the agreement and a short description of its type. These are intended to show the nation's current attention focus, therefore this category will be updated quarterly. For the first pass, agreements will begin with January 1, 1974 to the obtainable present. SOURCES: KEESING'S CONTEMPORARY ARCHIVES 1974 (inhouse) use nation index summary listings of agreements, and TOL WEISCVANS for each nation. France EXAMPLE=AGREEMENTS: USR petro development, CAO CON GAB SEN cooperation, JOR compensation, SPH delimitation of continental shelf and territorial waters;

3. Dependencies is a category that attempts to show the nation's dependency links and possible vulnerabilities with other nations in trade, aid, and military affairs. It includes

a) Trade:(1) list the import and export commodities that make up approximately 2/3's of that nation's total trade. And for each commodity, list its percentage of total trade type—import or export. For example, France's number one import is machinery and transport equipment which accounts for 25% of France's total imports. And France's number one export is machinery which accounts for 25% of France's total exports. Thus, France's EXAMPLE=+machinery transport equipment 26, -machinery 25;
(2) list the major trading nations of each nation, major being 2/3's of the total trade amount. List the nation by its 3 letter alpha code and its associated percentage. For example, France's leading supplier is the EEC bloc which accounts for 50% of France's import origins. And France's leading customer is the EEC which accounts for 49% of France's export origins. Thus the French EXAMPLE= +EEC 50, -EEC 49; it is not necessary to include the percentage signs in the computer file. And the convention has been adopted of using + signs to stand for items that enter a nation such as imports, and - signs to stand for items that leave a nation such as exports. This convention is also used in aid and military dependency categories. France EXAMPLE=TRADE:+machinery transport equipment 26, manufactures 21, non-electric machinery 14, EEC 50, USA 8, UIJK 5, -machinery 25, motor vehicles 16, textiles 11, EEC 49 USA 5, SUZ 5;

SOURCES: export commodities, export and import nations were taken from INFORMATION PLEASE ALMANAC 1974 (Doheny ref rm AY 64 155) since they are listed with their percentages already calculated. Other sources such as DIRECTION OF TRADE and EUROPA YEARBOOK 1973 also give this information but not in percentages, they list the amounts in local currency and one would have to calculate the percentages personally. Therefore the Almanac was used but check calculations were made to ensure validity and reliability between the sources. Import commodities and percentages are taken from EUROPA YEARBOOKS vol. 1A2 1973 (VKC desk ref JN 1 E85) and the percentages must be personally calculated. Therefore coders must look at EUROPA trade tables by nation, determine the top 2/3's import commodities, write down their name and currency amount along with the import currency total. These figures are then calculated into percentages on the computer terminals by way of the CPS calculation programs.

b) Economic Aid: this category includes official bilateral, capital developmental and technical assistance aid, export credits, and investments. The current problem is the sparse information available. Therefore, until better sources can be found, this category will vary greatly in terms of detail in nation suppliers and receivers, and amounts. Include the 3 letter alpha code for nations involved, the type of aid and amount when given. Again the convention of + signs for that which comes into a nation, and - signs for that which leaves a nation is used. And we use a first-letter indicator to label a currency amount, such as m=million, t=thousand.

Peru EXAMPLE=ECONOMIC-AID:+GHW export credits 5m, +HTH capital aid 10m, +SUZ development project and investments;
France EXAMPLE=ECONOMIC-AID:-85% France zone former colonies -ALG 13%, -CAO !VO MOR TUN NIR GAB 33%;

SOURCES: OECD RESOURCES FOR A DEVELOPING WORLD (VKC ref rm HG4517 07 1962-1968) now inhouse on code sheets.

c) Military dependencies includes various types of information such as defense pacts, troop training, troops and bases, military aid and arm sales.
(1) For defense pacts, list the name of the pact such as NATO or the 3 letter alpha code of the nations involved.
(2) For troops and bases, we are interested in whether that nation has its own troops and bases on foreign soil, and whether there are foreign troops and bases on that nation's territory. Therefore use the + and - conventions to signify whether the nation receives(+) or sends(-) troops and/or bases, and the 3 letter alpha code for the nations involved.

(3) For troop training, again use the convention of + for a nation receiving training by another nation, and - for a nation sending training to another nation, and of course the 3 letter alpha code for the nations involved.

(4) For military aid, continue the convention of + signs for those receiving aid and - signs for those sending aid, and the 3 letter alpha codes. Include the amount when given. Thus if it is France's Country Threat File and France sends military aid to Ivory Coast worth 2 million dollars, the entry would be MILITARY-AID:+IVO2m; if it is Ivory Coast's Country Threat File, the entry would be MILITARY-AID:+FRN2m;

SOURCES: the above categories of data are found in the narrative portions of DUPUY'S WORLD ALMANAC OF MILITARY POWER 1972 (VKC desk ref Ua 15 D9 1972). DUPUY'S is organized by nations. Thus those military dependency items present are scattered throughout the narrative. The coders must copy the relevant information out of the narrative onto code sheets. And the detail of the information will vary for the different nations.

(5) Arm sales information is currently available for the USA on an inhouse zerox sheet, and for other nations if listed in KEESEING'S CONTEMPORARY ARCHIVES 1974. Again the important information is whether the arms are coming into the nation(+) for bought) or out of a nation (- for sales), the 3 letter nation alpha codes, and currency amounts or specific armament sold if available.

France EXAMPLE=DEFENSE-PACT; NATO, former colonies;
TROOPS+BASES:+GWM WGE CHA MAG SEN; MILITARY-AID:+USA;
ARM-SALES:+USA15m, -KUW SAU GRC;
Peru EXAMPLE=MILITARY-AID:+USA1.5m; ARM-SALES:+USA5m, +USR tanks, +3 FRN supersonic jets;

4. Strengths and Resources is a category that attempts to indicate the strategic capabilities of a nation particularly when it is necessary to withstand or to carry out a threat. It includes:

a) Resources: raw material and food production if the nation is one of the top 10 world producers of a specific resource. List the nation's rank in world production, the name of the resource, and that nation's percentage of world total production. For example, if Peru is the world's 7th ranked producer of copper and Peru's 1972 yearly production of copper amounts to 3% of world's total yearly production of copper, the entry would be RESOURCES:7 copper 3%; the percentage sign is included here to clarify it from the ranking number.

The above information is based on a chart ranking the top 10 nations in numerous raw materials and foods, which was zeroxed from the INFORMATION PLEASE ALMANAC 1974 and is now inhouse. To get the percentage calculations, the UN STATISTICAL YEARBOOK 1973 was used to get the nation and world totals. Percentages were then personally calculated on computer terminals using the CPS programs. Thus the 10 nations, their ranks and percentages for various raw materials and foodstuffs are now on an inhouse chart. Therefore coders need only consult this chart.

The second step of resources involves finding out to which nations the raw materials are exported and in what amount. For example, to whom does Peru export its copper and in what amount? This information is located in Seaver Science Library First Floor ref section 1971 MINERALS YEARBOOK vol. III, AREA REPORTS: INTERNATIONAL, TN 23 U612 vol:3. The book is organized by nations and contains tables on export minerals, amounts exported, and customer nations. The coder must find the specific nation tables, then the mineral entry and copy the total amount exported, the customer nations listed and their amounts. The percentages are then personally calculated on computer terminals using the CPS programs. Peru EXAMPLE=RESOURCES:1 fishmeal, 7 copper 3%(JAP 82%, SPN 7%), 4 silver 13%; Thus Peru produces 3% of the world's total copper product and of this 3%, 92% is exported to Japan and 7% is exported to Spain.

b) Military strength includes indicators of the national resources devoted to the military sector. This includes:
   (1) Total armed forces(TAF) which is the total numeric listed in MILITARY BALANCE 1973-1974(VKC desk ref UA 15 L65 1973-1974). This information has already been put on inhouse code sheets.
   (2) Total armed forces as a percentage of pop(TAF%POP) which is the personally calculated division of TAF/POP. This is used as a standardization measure.
   (3) Military expenditures(ME) is the total USA currency equivalents listed in MILITARY BALANCE 1973-1974, and is on inhouse code sheets.
   (4) Military expenditures as a percentage of gnp(ME%GNP) is personally calculated by dividing ME/GNP. Again this is a standardization measure.
   (5) The keyword nuclear will be listed only if that nation has nuclear capabilities.
France EXAMPLE=TAF: 0,503,600; TAF%POP: 00.97; ME:08,448,000,000; ME%GNP:04.20; NUCLEAR

5. Vital Concerns are brief keyword categories of a nation's salient threat situation, international and domestic. Vital concerns may contain strategic considerations, latent and active, and actual military conflict. If you ask the question, what kinds of things are the leaders and people of country X concerned about, what do they worry about, why have they been taking their recent actions and policies, some of the answers will fall under the vital concerns listing. Of course we are interested in the concerns that have significance for other nations. For example, internal hostility between rulers and the populace may eventually bring down the rulers and institute another form of government to which foreign governments would then have to adjust and respond. Other examples include border disputes, 200 mile offshore fishing limits, agricultural failures, food and energy crises, nationalizations of foreign enterprises, deteriorating bilateral relations, guerrilla terrorism, civil disruptions or hostility due to minorities or foreign workers, raw material dependencies, economic competition, trade deficits, disputed territories, control of waterways, coup d'etats, breaking of diplomatic relations, withdrawal from organizations or alliances, war, famines, inflation, droughts, and so forth. We are not interested in specific sequences of events, but what these events are about--the why of the actions.

The priority ratings indicate the range of vital concerns from attention-absorbing and the most threatening, to ones that are latent and of no immediate concern. For this initial pass, the assignment of priority ratings is very subjective and secondary to developing the categories of vital concerns. After initial data entry, a real effort will be made to systemitize priority ratings.

Peru EXAMPLE

prio1: internal security problems, authoritarian military junta + workers students

prio2: 200 mile offshore territorial claim;

prio3: agricultural failure, anchovies--economy base;

prio4: nationalization USA oil company, refused compensation, USA loan credit cutoff;

prio5: nationalization USA mining corporation;

prio6: nationalization international fishmeal company;

prio7: EQU border dispute, latent;

SOURCES: These concerns are not available in any one source. Coders should list the types of vital concerns mentioned as they go through all the information sources such as KEESING'S, DUPUY'S, TOL WEISCANS, EUROPA YEARBOOK, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF STATE BACKGROUND NOTES, and any personal knowledge. The coder responsible for gathering the nation's data should develop a first list as comprehensive as possible. This list will be given to other coders, research analysts, and study team managers to add and refine the vital concern entries. For this is a group effort in developing initial and amendable categories of vital concerns, and eventually priority ratings.

6. The events category includes the extraordinary, nonregularized events per nation for the last quarter. However, the first data gathering will begin with January 1, 1974 to the obtainable present. The events are in the form who did what to whom about what. The types of events may be internal or external, tension producing or tension reducing. For example, the types include coups, major strikes and protests, border conflicts, denunciations, protests, walkouts, visits, conferences, and so forth. Include the nations and/or organizations involved in the event in terms of their 3 letter alpha codes, the event type and what the event is about.

France EXAMPLE=EVENTS:AUL + NEW protest FRN Pacific nuclear test, FRN minister symbolic walkout EEC agricultural meeting, franc floating, 3 month suspension foreign workers entry visas;

International Event Flow Indicators, identified generally as EFI's, are a family of computations made on the quantities of the substreams of international events. A time series of data, the EFI's break apart the total flow of reported public actions of national governments in international politics into sequences of particular types of events, into sequences of particular initiator-recipient actions, or into sequences involving combinations of types of events and initiator-recipient combinations. Thus, there are several hundred possible EFI displays that can be mobilized to trace the action systems of international affairs. EFI values are always calculated from numerical data and are not numerical forms of intuitive scaled judgments.

At its most general, an EFI display is global with the purpose of providing an overall estimate of the current state of the international political system. At its most specific, an EFI display will show the actions and responses of a pair of countries for a short time span and with a focus on a particular episode or affair.

The visual character of EFI is to be noted. Charts have a seismic appearance and generally are interpreted in terms of tracing trends and variations from normal states of affairs. They usually reflect variations and alternations in the tensions and relaxations of affairs in the international environment and refer to the coming and going of violent conflict. The single recorded public event is the unit of measurement. The indicators are constructed most commonly from two qualities noted in the stream of action: the numbers of events per period of observation and the kinds of actions taken in the playing out of an affair or episode. Like any index, the EFI produces its meaning "by the orderly loss of information."

To identify the kind of data condensation accomplished by an EFI chart, we show here a complex index referring to the whole reported event flow derived from the NEW YORK TIMES between 1966 and 1969 and, in particular, to the displacing effects of the Six Day War in 1967 and the Czech Intervention in 1968 on the global event flow. As an illustration, the chart shows how some "early warning" effects appear in both these cases. In the coming of the Six Day War, one sees in retrospect that the "downtrend" after 3/25/67 might have telegraphed the onset of crisis. The Czech case is different in that the downtrend signifying Increased tension and activity is not a smooth descent but that after 4/27/68 the variations in the "danger zone" of the 500 Index level offer a different sort of early warning. No general paradigms or models having been discovered to forecast which dynamic sequence is in operation in the International event flow at a specified time, we are forced to turn to summarizations of past experiences such as these illustrated in the EFI for interim early warning knowledge. Thus EFI usually stand intermediate between forecast approaches that are intuitively discerned on the basis of experience and hunch (at the other extreme).

!Graph

Various Event Flow Indicators are derived from underlying chronological files of international events data. The recovery and display of selected passages of data from the chronologies are accomplished in two different forms. The first is a printing of brief descriptive statements produced by the computer according to request. Two examples are shown below, one from each of the two main chronologies for THE TIMES of London and the NEW YORK TIMES. The listing called TOL EVENT FILE FOR MARCH 1975 THE MIDDLE EAST is parallel to that from the NEW YORK TIMES chronology called here NEW YORK TIMES EVENT FILE FOR MARCH 1975 THE MIDDLE EAST.

The second form of data recovery and displays "sums" the numbers of reported acts contained in the chronological file. The example of a MEISUMS run appears below in table form under the title NEW YORK TIMES ON THE MIDDLE EAST. The table shows, for example, that the United States "issued" more events week by week and in total for the March-June time period than the other countries. MEISUM tables are used commonly for further statistical manipulation and in the creation of special indicators.

Annex C contains the first issue of the Current Threats News File, a recent issue, and the Current Threats Coding Scheme. This file is a bi-weekly computerized record of the most recent national and international threats, drawn from three news sources--NEW YORK TIMES, LOS ANGELES TIMES, and THE TIMES of London. The events selected range from internal domestic threats to international environmental threats; threat-reducing events are also included and coded. The coding scheme has been designed to facilitate analysis of the effects produced by events, the symbolisms of threat carried along with the event stream. A computerized program is being developed to permit the selective retrieval and analysis of the descriptive texts and their respective codes.
Current Threats Coding Schema

The following questions are designed to differentiate subjective psychological perceptions of, reactions to, and categorizations of current news reports dealing with threatening situations. The coder is to read each news report item carefully, then answer each of the 11 questions below on the basis of the news item's relations to the general threat situation of which it is a part.

1. Does the news item convey or suggest to you that there is a threat in the situation?
   1=yes, continue to code,
   2=no, if no then stop coding this news item and go to the next item,
   3=the item is a threat reducing action, but continue to code the threat situation and this event's effect upon it.

2. Threat Image:
   One possible definition of a threat is a situation in which undesired consequences are foreseen. In general terms, what unwanted consequences or damage do you project in this threat situation:
   1=injury and damage, hurt directed to a "body" directly and violently, such as military action or the threat of armed attack.
   2=internal intrusion or subversion of penetration, internal sabotage and other types of internal aggression.
   3=constraint on movement, won't allow growth or change, holds, captures, ties down, besieged, encircled.
   4=depriving, starving, cutting off, dying for lack of, shut off from essentials required to maintain life, isolating, excluding, such as an oil embargo.

3. Threat Type:
   1=issued explicit and verbal threat issued from an explicit identifiable threatener to an explicit and identifiable threatenee. For example, Uganda Amin's quoted threat, "I will personally lead an invasion of South Africa."
   2=situational, engineered
   Here the threateners are present and identifiable, they participate in and advance the threat situation, and they could remove the threat, but it is not an explicit verbal statement of threat rather it is discernible by the news item and general threat situation.
   3=systemic
   Here the specific threatener is not identifiable, nobody
Intends to threaten but the threat exists just the same, people blame the system for the threat, its environmental and/or circumstantial in nature, such as smog and pollution.

4. Who is the threatener?
Decide on one actor even if the situation is reciprocal; for example, actor A threatens actor B, and simultaneously actor B threatens actor A. But who in the news item is the more active, more apparent, more responsible actor?
Use WEIS numeric actor codes for country/actor threatener,
If the threatener is the system use 999,
If the threateners are multiple actors within a region, use WEIS numeric region codes,
If the threateners are multiple actors with no established WEIS code use 998 (unidentified multi-lateral group),
If the news item is internal use that nation's code as threatener and threatenee.
If you cannot differentiate threateners and threatenees in a threat situation, double code the news item. For example, in bilateral military battles or a potential war situation, the two parties involved would be both threateners and threatenees. Therefore code the single event twice, once with nation A as threatener and nation B as threatenee, and second with nation B as threatener and nation A as threatenee.

5. Who is threatened?
Decide on one actor even if logic says there is more than one threatened, if possible. Who is the main target brought to mind in the news item?
Use WEIS numeric actor codes for country/actor threatenee,
If the threatenee is the system (everybody) use 999,
If the threatenees are multiple actors within a region or an organization, use WEIS numeric region or organization codes,
If the threatenees are multiple actors with no established WEIS code use 998 (multi-lateral group).

Judgmental Scales: Ordinal Codes

6. Threat Urgency and Immediacy:
How urgent is the approaching trouble of the threat situation? Do you believe it is fast and on the move, will results show soon, is there a sense of urgency to counter-act the threat?
11=remote and very distant problem, no real need to act now,
21=less remote problem, but low need to act now,
31=average sense of urgency, some need to act now,
41=quite urgent problem, definite need to act now,
51=extremely urgent and immediate problem, immediate need to act decisively.
7. Threat Status and Progress:
   In your judgment, how does this news item affect the general threat situation?
   02=never heard of this news event type before, therefore I have no basis for comparison, 12=the general threat situation is receding or declining as a result of this news item,
   22=the threat situation is about the same as it has been, no real change,
   32=the threat situation is getting worse or more severe or more threatening as a result of this news item.

8. USA Threat Severity:
   If the situation involves "USA national interests, security, welfare, or defense" in your opinion, then how severe do you believe this threat situation is to USA national interests?
   03=not applicable, it does not affect the USA,
   13=very low severity,
   23=low severity,
   33=average or medium severity,
   43=quite severe,
   53=extremely severe.

9. Threat Emphathy:
   If the focus of the threat is not on "we, us, ours, USA" but is recognized as directed to others, scale here for how bad or severe or threatening you believe this situation is for others.
   04=not applicable, its us or the USA,
   14=the threat is very low, very remote, no need to act now,
   24=low severity, less remote, low need to act now,
   34=average severity, some need to act now,
   44=quite severe, need to act now,
   54=extremely severe threat, immediate need to act decisively.

10. Threat Ambient:
    The following list of issue codes constitutes initial choices to describe kinds of threat circumstances. The main idea is to indicate limited general coding for what the threat is about.

   100=Domestic ambient without international spillover, for example, the Northern Ireland crisis because it is considered internal to Britain.
   200=Domestic ambient with international spillover, for example, the Portuguese situation because these domestic events are of immense concern to other nations and will have significant effects upon other nations.
International Ambients

300=Armaments
   301=proliferation, sales, aid of weaponry.
   302=control, bans and embargos.

    424=weather.

430=Population
    431=emigration.
    432=minorities.
    433=famine and starvation.
    434=health and epidemics.
    435=aid.

440=Drug Traffic
    441=control.
    442=proliferation and flow of.

11. Personal Reaction:
    After reading the news item and coding its relation to the general threat situation, how do you react personally, are you:
    15=indifferent.
    25=encouraged, pleased.
    35=discouraged.

March 1, 1975

Oil Supply and Pricing: To reconcile conflicting Presidential and Democratic Congressional energy and economic programs, USA President Ford may agree to postpone a second-step increase in oil import tariffs. This would postpone the second $1 per barrel levy on imported oil.

Argentina Terrorism: In Argentina Friday night, leftist guerrillas executed kidnapped American consular agent John Patrick Egan after the Argentinian government said it would not negotiate with them for the release of imprisoned guerrillas.

USA Foreign Aid: The USA Senate on a voice vote eliminated all foreign aid funds from a temporary financing bill out of exasperation with delayed action on regular appropriations. As a result the Agency for International Development is in limbo with no spending authority.

Oil Supply and Pricing: A potential 45 billion barrels of oil may lie under the ice of the Antarctic according to the Commander of the Navy's Antarctic Support Force, Captain Van Reeth. Under terms of the Antarctic Treaty signed in 1961, any nation of the 30 signatory nations can exploit the oil.

Genetic Engineering: Scientists restrict risky genetic engineering. They agree to impose strict controls on viruses and bacteria that might possibly incur a mass epidemic.

Nuclear Weapons: Plutonium in certain amounts has been declared extremely dangerous as it could be used for home-made atom bombs. USA Representative Les Aspin of WISC introduces legislation that would severely limit commercial use.

Egypt-PLO Deteriorating Relations: Egyptian President Sadat rebuffs the statement made by the PLO claiming any partial settlement on the Sinai front would amount to a bartering of occupied Arab territory for the entire Palestinian cause. Sadat wants to know on "what grounds such baseless utterances were made".

Cuba Embargo: The USA Ambassador to the OAS indicates the economic and political embargo against Cuba may be lifted this spring by the Organization of American States, as a result of changes in voting requirements from a two-thirds to a simple majority needed to pass resolutions. The USA supports such voting changes.

Cambodia Military Action: Khmer Rouge forces overrun two government positions within 4 miles of Phnom Penh's Ponchetong airport putting insurgents within easy artillery reach of American planes landing there.

March 2, 1975

Cambodia Conflict: Cambodian President Lon Nol pleas for more American aid, and hints strongly that he would step down if his presence stands in the way of peace.

Oil Supply and Pricing: The Persian Gulf emirate of Abu Dhabi says it will lower oil prices about 55 cents a barrel to get oil companies to increase production so it can meet aid promises to poorer countries. The OPEC meeting in Vienna authorized this first price reduction last week.

West Berlin Terrorism: The major opposition candidate for mayor of West Berlin, Peter Lorenz, is under a death threat from his anarchist kidnappers unless six anarchists are freed from jail. Two of the jailed anarchists refuse freedom under the scheme.

Cuba Embargo: USA Secretary of State Kissinger says the USA is prepared to explore ways for an early halt to the OAS embargo of Cuba as a prelude to returning to normal relations. Kissinger states "we see no virtue in perpetual antagonism between the USA and Cuba", but..."fundamental change cannot come unless Cuba demonstrates a willingness to assume mutual obligations".

Middle East Conflict: USA and British authorities say American U-2 spy planes are monitoring the movements of Arab and Israeli forces to help preserve the Middle East Peace. The planes are based on British air bases on Cyprus.

South Korea Internal Dissension: South Korean government prohibits political activities of government critics in anticipation of an anti-government campaign.

March 3, 1975

Oil Supply and Pricing: Algerian Foreign Minister Bouteflika, announces to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries that the West is carrying out a carefully orchestrated campaign to blame the oil exporters for an economic crisis which the industrialized nations themselves are responsible. He urges the OPEC to refuse oil payments in dollars in favor of a uniform Arab currency.

Israel Economic Boycott: Arab organization for boycott of Israel warns West German Volkswagen and Audi NSU it must sever ties with Israel within three months or be blacklisted in Arab Nations.

Lebanon Civil Violence: Lebanese fishermen clash with government troops and local police in a protest against the government's granting of exclusive fishing rights along the Mediterranean coast to Proteline—a private Lebanese company. The fishermen claim this will bankrupt them.

Cambodia Conflict: Khmer Rouge communiqué says 7 members of the "traitorous clique" including President Lon Nol and Premier Long Boret must die. The rest of the army and government would have the right to join the United Front. It calls upon soldiers to turn their guns against the administration.

Cambodia Conflict: Cambodian exiled Prince Norodom Sihanouk says his government is prepared to reconcile with the USA but on condition that it "no longer involve itself with the Phnom Penh regime and let Cambodians take care of their own affairs."

March 4, 1975

USA Military Aid to Cambodia: Eight members of USA Congress return from fact-finding trip to Indochina and reach a majority agreement that USA military aid should continue through June and $75 million should be approved for emergency food aid. Civilian deaths from starvation are increasing at an alarming rate.

Middle East Peace Negotiations: The Egyptian newspaper Al Ahram indicates that Egypt is so sure of reaching agreement on a second-stage Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai Desert that it is trying to obtain international guarantees for an overall Middle East settlement.

Environmental Threat: The Environmental Protection Agency proposes lifting the supersonic transport jet ban. The recommendations would have to be approved by the FAA. Environmentalists contend that SST's would damage the ozone layer; however, a recent Department of Transportation study rejects this contention.

South Africa Civil Violence: One of the worst tribal clashes in South Africa's history leaves 28 African miners dead after fighting broke out between Basato and Xhosa tribesmen at the Northfield coal mine in Glencoe.

North Korea-South Korea Conflict: The UN command in Seoul accuses North Korea of bringing the two Koreas to the brink of confrontation after a collision between a Communist boat and a South Korean Naval vessel in the Yellow Sea. During the incident, North Korea violated South Korea airspace 11 times.

Oil Supply and Pricing: The first summit conference of OPEC begins with five of the thirteen states' leaders absent. The absent representatives, Saudia Arabia, Iraq, Indonesia, Nigeria, and Libya belie earlier declarations of solidarity.

Middle East Peace Negotiations: USA President Ford, in a meeting with Israeli President Katzir "took the occasion to reaffirm America's commitment to Israel's security and well-being, as well as our determination to assist in efforts to bring about further progress toward a Middle East settlement".

Cambodia Military Action: Khmer Rouge forces fire Chinese-made rockets into two crowded sections of Phnom Penh and its nearby airfield killing at least 19 persons.

Cambodia Evacuation: USA helicopter carrier with 1500 marines is ordered into the Gulf of Thailand to evacuate the 400 American citizens from Phnom Penh if the city falls to the Khmer Rouge.

Cambodia Evacuation: British, American, Australian, and French embassies warn their nationals to leave Cambodia in view of the uncertain situation and the vulnerability of Ponchentong airport.

Middle East Peace Negotiations: Reportedly Israel has abandoned search for small-scale interim agreement with Egypt and is working out conditions for making important concessions in Sinai such as yielding the Giddi and Mitla passes and Abu Rudeis oilfields.

Spain Internal Dissension: 1000 striking dockworkers paralyze northern Spanish port of Bilbao in protest against dismissal of colleagues who had demanded better working conditions.

South Africa Internal Dissension: 1000 black miners strike at gold mine near Carltonville South Africa, in the western Transvaal following a tribal fight last night.

Pakistan Internal Dissension: Pakistan army seizes large quantities of arms in raids in 7 cities of Baluchistan and arrests 44 people who confessed to receiving guerrilla warfare training by Afghanistan army officers.

Ethiopia Nationalizations: Ethiopian government nationalizes all agricultural land and collective farms will be created. This policy is designed to end the present feudal system of land tenure. However strong and violent public resistance is expected.

Oil Supply and Pricing: Algerian President Boumedienne at OPEC meeting attributes world financial crisis to industrialized nations "living above their means" and not to rising oil prices. He criticizes the International Energy Agency as a cover for USA power and warns cuts in OPEC oil production might be necessary in light of declining world demand for oil.

March 6, 1975

Middle East Terrorism: Al Fatah terrorists of the PLO seize control of the Savoy Hotel in Tel Aviv Israel and demand the release of 10 Arab prisoners from Israeli jails. Israeli troops storm the hotel in which at least 30 hostages are being held by the terrorists. 6 Arab terrorists are killed and an unknown number of the hostages.

Oil Supply and Pricing: The OPEC summit in Algiers puts off policy proposals that would have tied the price of oil to the inflationary rise in prices of imports, and a proposal to establish a fund to help Third World countries pay for their oil or to help industrial nations with balance-of-payments difficulties.

Turkey-USA Relations: USA Ambassador to Turkey, William Macomber, urges Senators in the Foreign Relations Committee to support legislation rescinding the cutoff of military aid to Turkey. He says the aid cutoff is not encouraging a Greek-Turkish settlement on Cyprus, and has enraged Turkey.

Cambodia Military Action: Cambodian rebel artillery shelling of Ponchentong airport hits an American plane as it lands with loads of rice and munitions as a part of the emergency airlift. The airlift is cancelled for the rest of the day.

Cambodia Conflict: USA President Ford says "the Cambodians are running out of time . . . and the USA should not pull the plug by denying it aid to defend itself".

Oil Supply and Pricing: Kuwait nationalizes the remaining 40% stake of British Petroleum and Gulf Oil Company in the Kuwait Oil Company.

Earthquake: A light earthquake shakes Caracas Venezuela but there are no casualties nor severe damages.

Middle East Peace Negotiations: Israel Defense Minister Peres says Israel is not willing to accept an Egyptian pledge of non-belligerency if it were made to the USA rather than directly to Israel.

Cambodia Peace Negotiations: USA Secretary of State Kissinger says there is very little hope of any peace negotiations now in Cambodia because "the USA must negotiate from strength and there is no strength".

Cod War: Iceland announces plans to strengthen its small fleet and air force in case the cod war resumes. Iceland plans to extend its fishing limits to 200 miles later this year.

British Defense Cuts: NATO asks Britain to change its latest proposals to cut defense spending. NATO is particularly worried by the Labour government's plan to reduce British strength in Malta and Cyprus.

Portugal Internal Dissension: One of Portugal's governing parties, the centre-left Popular Democrats (PPD) says the wave of physical violence threatens the freedom and honesty of next month's elections.

Middle East Conflict: Israel announces that Jewish settlers will be moving by July into the West Bank area of Naale Adumin which is being developed as an extra industrial zone.

West German Terrorism: Chancellor Schmidt warns his countrymen to expect more terrorist abductions and "it may be necessary for us again to bear grave decisions jointly, because the decisions of the past few days do not suffice as a guideline".

Cyprus Civil Violence: An explosion at the office of Bishop Chrysanthos of Limassol, a supporter of President Makarios, gives rise to fears of a possible confrontation between the President and the EOKA-B underground working for enosis with Greece.

Black Africa-South Africa Conflict: Rhodesian settlement issue is in complete disarray after Rhodesia arrests and confines Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole. ANC spokesman Dr. Edson Sithole says the Rhodesian government has ruined the whole issue of black-white talks, "no ANC leader could continue talking to the government without exposing himself as a moderate and in support of the government's action".

Black Africa-South Africa Conflict: Zambia President Kaunda says if the road to peaceful change is closed in South Africa then Zambia and the rest of Africa will have no choice but to support the armed struggle waged by liberation movements.

March 7, 1975

Iran-Iraq Border Dispute: Iraq agrees in principle to make concessions on its territorial claims in the Shatt al-Arab waterway which provides river access to Iran's largest refinery at Abadan, in return for Iran closing its borders to "infiltration of a subversive character" particularly Kurdish infiltration.

Middle East Terrorism: USA Secretary of State Kissinger condemns PLO terrorist raid on Tel Aviv hotel as "a random and senseless act which does not forward the cause of peace", and pledges to continue peace efforts.

Egypt-PLO Deteriorating Relations: Egypt regards recent clearly planned and executed PLO attack on Israeli hotel as sign that the PLO may be embarking on a new and violent campaign to destroy peace efforts. Egyptian officials warn the attack points up the urgent need for disengagement.

Oil Supply and Pricing: OPEC conference agrees to an international conference of industrialized and developing nations to negotiate stabilization of oil prices. But this conference must include other topics for negotiation such as raw material cartels and financing. Also the pricing of petroleum must be linked to objective criteria such as the price of manufactures, rate of inflation, terms of transfer of goods and technology for the devel-
Cambodia Military Action: Cambodian and Khmer Rouge forces clash as Cambodia launches crucial operations to recapture positions 6 miles west of Phnom Penh's airport.

Cambodia Conflict: Prince Norodom Sihanouk fears the USA and South Vietnam armies will launch an invasion of Phnom Penh if his Khmer Rouge rebels overrun the city, under the pretext of defending Americans there.

Philippine Civil War: A civilian defense force captures weapons and kills 12 Moslem secessionists in clashes in the southern Philippines.

Ecuador-USA Fishing Dispute: Ecuador arrests 18 USA crewmen of an American tuna boat being held in Salinas Ecuador.

Thailand Internal Dissension: Thailand's 4-day old government falls in a confidence vote on the subject of maintaining USA troops in Thailand. Premier Pramoj is expected to resign.

India Internal Dissension: Between 50- and 100,000 march in Delhi India to protest official corruption and maladministration.

China Internal Policy: China launches an urgent campaign to correct "wrong trends and corruption" in agriculture focusing on the growing of cash crops to the exclusion of food production.

Middle East Terrorism: Israeli Prime Minister Rabin hints at retaliation against Arab terrorists for their raid on Tel Aviv. However, Rabin also states that the latest peace mission will not be jeopardized by the incident.

USA Military Aid to Cambodia: USA President Ford says "there is no hope for Cambodia unless it gets the $222 million in emergency aid in order to survive communist aggression until fighting is blunted by the rainy season".

Cuba Embargo: Colombia resumes diplomatic relations with Cuba after a 14 year break. Foreign Minister Leivano says, "In order to clear the cold war out of the continent and to strengthen the inter-american system".

March 8, 1975

Cambodia Conflict: Cambodian army's most serious problem is lack of men, not ammunition. Government units are down to 50% of their original strength.

Cambodia Military Action: The Cambodian government's position worsens as Khmer Rouge forces break through government lines to the north of Phnom Penh and threaten to take Prek Phneou which is 7 miles north of Phnom Penh.

USA Military Aid to Cambodia: Prospects for USA Congressional approval of emergency military aid for Cambodia is rated poor by Republicans and Democrats.

Kenya Civil Violence: A wave of violence rocks Kenya which includes the derailment and explosion of a freight train causing the death of 26 persons, a bus bombing, crops burned, cattle mutilated and various other bomb threats in Nairobi. The bombings are said to be the work of the Maskini (Poor People's) Liberation Organization.

Lebanon Civil Violence: Left-wing demonstrators, breaking windows and shooting into the air, march in protest against the death of Mr. Saad, a well-known politician in the southern port of Sidon. The area has been the site of violent clashes and demonstrations between fishermen and police.

Oil Supply and Pricing: The major oil consumers of the International Energy Agency agree on a draft plan that would stimulate use of new energy resources and protect them from any sudden crash in oil prices.

Middle East Peace Negotiations: Egyptian President Sadat is confident that he can provide USA Secretary of State Kissinger with an acceptable formula to meet Israel's security preconditions for another withdrawal in Sinai.

March 9, 1975

Middle East Terrorism: The lone PLO terrorist survivor says his group was told to say their orders were from Egypt although they were trained and supplied in Syria. The aim was to disrupt any peace agreement between Egypt and Israel.

Middle East Peace Negotiations: USA Secretary of State Kissinger receives from Egyptian President Sadat the preliminary outline of political proposals that could lead to a major disengagement between Egypt and Israel.

Oil Supply and Pricing: Saudi Arabia has cut its crude oil production to 6.5 million barrels a day, down 23.5% from its 1974 levels of production. The cut is a sign that the Saudis, although refusing to agree to a formal production quota agreement within the OPEC, are going along with a production cutback to help keep up the price of oil in the face of decreasing demand.

Middle East Conflict: Syria President Assad offers to unify Syria's political and military commands with that of the Palestine resistance movement, in order to show continued support and commitment to the Palestinian cause.

Portugal Civil Violence: Bloody clashes follow the breakup of a Popular Democratic Party rally by extreme leftists. Government military forces take command of the city of Setubal.

March 10, 1975

Cambodia Internal Dissension: A campaign to oust President Lon Nol gathers momentum that may pressure him into stepping down. Criticism mounts from the legislature and high civilian and military officials.

Middle East Peace Negotiations: Syrian President Assad refuses to support USA Secretary of State Kissinger's attempts to negotiate a separate Middle East peace settlement between Israel and Egypt, saying "We are against separate partial agreements".

Ireland Civil Violence: A fire-bomb attack is launched on a fishing fleet in the Republic of Ireland by the Protestant organization, the Ulster Defense Association.

Vietnam Military Action: North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops attack a key provincial capital in the Central Highlands, Ban Me Thuot, 155 miles northeast of Saigon.

Natural Gas Shortages: A computer at MIT programmed to analyze the way the USA produces and burns natural gas has projected there could be a 30% shortage by 1980. The large shortage will occur if the Federal Power Commission continues its policy of allowing only small yearly increases in gas prices.

March 11, 1975

Vietnam Military Action: Communist forces overrun three district capitals and threaten to seize other cities and bases in the heaviest coordinated attacks in South Vietnam since 1972. Communist forces have carried out at least 69 ground attacks and 120 shelling barrages.

Cambodia Military Action: Khmer Rouge launch their heaviest shelling of Ponchentong airport firing 56 rockets.

Cambodia Conflict: USA CIA director Colby gives a deeply pessimistic view of the Cambodian government's ability to survive the siege around Phnom Penh.

USA Foreign Aid: USA House of Representatives Appropriations Committee approves a foreign aid bill of $3.5 billion, $2.5 billion below the Administration's request, and containing no military aid for Cambodia.

Cyprus Peace Negotiations: USA Secretary of State Kissinger interrupts his peace mission to the Middle East temporarily, to fly to Ankara Turkey in hopes of achieving a diplomatic breakthrough in the Cyprus crisis.

Oil Supply and Pricing: Algeria has lowered the price of its low sulfur crude oil by 21 cents a barrel, from $11.96 to $11.75, sources in Dubai report.

Food Crisis: The head of the New World Food Council says the USA and other food-exporting nations can feed the world's hungry for 10 years more, then the poor nations will have to fend for themselves. He states, "the gap between what they will need and what they can produce is estimated at 85 million tons by 1985. Even if the present exporters could produce that much, it would be impossible to transport it to the areas in need".

March 12, 1975

Portugal Attempted Coup: Right-wing rebel forces led by former President Spinola bombed an army barracks and paratroops seize Lisbon's civilian airport, which Portuguese President Costa Gomes describes as "a counter-revolutionary adventure". However the rebellion fizzes as the paratroops fail to receive support from other military units. Brigadier Carvalho, head of military security forces, hints that the USA was involved in the revolt and says the Portuguese government can no longer guarantee the safety of USA Ambassador Carlucci. USA State Department Spokesman Funseth says "I categorically deny the USA was in any way involved in the revolt".

Iraq Civil War: The Kurdish forces of General Barzani vow to continue their revolt against the Iraqi army. Iran stops sending military supplies to the Kurds following an Iran-Iraq agreement to settle border disputes.

Cyprus Peace Negotiations: Turkish Foreign Minister Esenbel says USA Secretary of State Kissinger helped Greece and Turkey to agree on an early resumption of talks on the future of Cyprus. However, the Greek Cypriot delegation to the UN denies that any agreement to resume talks has been reached.

Earthquake: An earthquake shakes the central Philippines registering between 3 and 4 on the Rossi Forel scale of 9. Several persons were injured.

Cambodia Military Action: Khmer Rouge rockets attack Ponchentong airport.

Cambodia Internal Dissension: President Lon Nol shuffles his cabinet and dismisses Commander-In-Chief of the armed forces, General Fernandez. General Sakhon will replace General Fernandez as Chief of Staff. The changes were made to bolster the regime in face of the current military offensive.

Vietnam Military Action: According to USA officials, elements of at least one North Vietnamese reserve infantry division appear to have moved across the demilitarized zone into South Vietnam. Major fighting in the Central Highlands continues in the northern provinces. Five district capitals are lost and at least eight others are under attack.

Rhodesia Chrome Ban: USA Senator McGee urges Congress to reimpose the UN embargo on Rhodesian chrome imports, because "the USA economic future is inextricably tied to relations with black Africa and the developing countries".

March 13, 1975

Cambodia Military Action: Khmer Rouge are reported to not be "pressing their advantage" around Phnom Penh, but resisting Cambodian ineffectual efforts while awaiting the crucial USA military aid decision.

USA Military Aid: USA Democratic House Caucus rejects further military assistance to Cambodia or South Vietnam in current fiscal year.

UN Cyprus Resolution: UN issues weak resolution merely expressing "regret" over Turkish unilateral action of February 13 as it may obstruct further negotiations.

PLO Terrorism: PLO military chief Zouheir Mhosen threatens to extend terrorism on Israeli strategic targets throughout Israel, Japan, and the USA.

Middle East Peace Negotiations: Egyptian President Sadat says there is at least an 80% chance that Egypt and Israel will reach an interim peace agreement.

Vietnam Military Action: Third day of heavy fighting in the provincial capital of Ban He Thuot continues. Experts say if South Vietnam cannot reopen its highways soon, airlifts will be mandatory, straining an Air Force already hurt by USA aid cutoffs.

Britain-USSR Relations: An ex-RAF pilot is charged with violating British Official Secrets Act by leaking secret information to Soviet Consulate officials, thereby dampening recent Britain-USSR warming of relations.

USA Anti-War Dissension: Leading Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish leaders protest in Washington D.C. against further aid to Indochina.

Philippine Civil War: Government forces again repel attacking Moslem rebels on Mindanao. Sporadic rebel attacks are also reported on Basilan Island.

March 14, 1975

Portugal Attempted Coup Aftermath: The triumphant leftist faction in Portugal's military regime moves to neutralize the economic and political base by bringing in a communist-front group into the cabinet to take over economic management. The six civilian members of Portugal's Council of State resign, leaving the top constitutional advisory body entirely in the hands of the military.
Mexico Internal Dissension: Mexican students seize schools, hijack buses and stage demonstrations to call attention to grievances.

Brazil Internal Dissension: A military tribunal in Sao Paulo sentences 23 persons to jail for trying to revive the banned Communist Party.

Earthquake: A violent and prolonged earthquake strikes central Chile, killing 2 and injuring 6 persons.

Ethiopia Civil War: Ethiopian warplanes pound suspected guerrilla strongholds north of the Eritrean capitol of Asmara. The Ethiopian government reports the capture of Tadesse Bera, a former police general who took to the bush last month to organize armed resistance against the military regime.

Cyprus Peace Negotiations: Greek and Turkish Cypriot delegates meet in New York with USA Undersecretary Urquhart to discuss resuming the Cyprus peace talks.

Turkey Governmental Crisis: Turkey's six-month political crisis deepens as Premier Sadi Irmak fails to form a national coalition government that can win parliament's support.

Middle East Peace Negotiations: USA Secretary of State Kissinger and Egyptian President Sadat report their talks for a new peace agreement has progressed to a stage where all sides are ready to discuss concrete steps toward a disengagement. Sadat stresses the peaceful steps Israel must take not only on the Egyptian-Israeli front, but also the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights area of Syria and the West Bank of the Jordan River.

Iraq Civil War: Kurdish representatives in Tehran Iran announce that a cease-fire had been agreed to by Kurdish rebel forces and the Iraqi army. The Kurds, however, accuse Iraq of ignoring the cease-fire agreement and are continuing to attack them.

Cambodia Military Action: Rebel gunners blow up an ammunition dump at Phnom Penh's airport, disrupting the USA airlift. Government forces strike back with napalm and bombing raids in a major new offensive to ease pressure on the airport.

Vietnam Military Action: The Saigon High Command says the biggest Communist offensive since 1972 has spread to the Mekong Delta, and the government orders nationwide mobilization placing every male between 17 and 43 on military call.

Earthquake: Chinese reports indicate entire villages were destroyed in the massive earthquake that hit Liaoning province February 4, and that densely populated areas were damaged.

Philippine Civil War: Philippine government forces, supported by air strikes and naval artillery, capture a key Muslim rebel stronghold on the rubber rich island of Basilan.

Middle East Peace Negotiations: (1)
USA Secretary of State Kissinger's latest Middle East peace effort seems certain of success as the Israeli leadership accepts a new Sina agreement with Egypt. The main lines of agreement call for Israeli troops to pull back from the central Sinal passes and the Abu Rhodels oil fields, in return for a series of Egyptian concessions, public and private, which amount to a de facto step towards normal relations. The Israelis also win a series of USA commitments to a substantially higher level of military and economic aid - at least $2.4 billion and probably more, - and several new political commitments. (LAT);

Middle East Conflict: (2)
The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine claims its commandos have executed a number of hostages they took in a raid on an Israeli border settlement, Kfar Giladi, after Israel refused demands for releasing prisoners. In Tel Aviv, an Israeli army spokesman laughed at the report, "Nothing of the sort occurred...maybe the raid and taking of hostages are what they planned to do, but it didn't come." (LAT);

Portugal Governmental Crisis: (3)
The northern military "rebellion" against pro-Communist General Goncalves apparently fizzles when all dissident garrisons return to normal command channels. The bewilidering change of posture from defiance to the appointment of Goncalves as armed forces chief of staff after he relinquishes the premiership is symbolic of the bluff and counter-bluff by rival military factions seeking control of the Portuguese revolution for the past two months. An anti-Communist officer explains that the decision to end the rebellion and accept for the time being, the leadership of pro-Goncalves Brigadier General Corracho, commander of the northern regime, is a gesture of "passive resistance." (LAT);

Portugal Economic Crisis: (4)
The new Portuguese government will inherit a series of measures intended to shore up a falling capitalist economy - measures that General Goncalves pushed through just before his ouster as Premier. Faced with a business and financial crisis that appears to worsen every day, the out-going cabinet seeks desperately to restore confidence by defining the fields in which private capital can operate, encouraging foreign investment and protecting small investors and depositors. The most important decree limits private enterprise to small and medium-sized businesses and farms. The measures will probably be honored by the new Cabinet, in which some who helped draw them up are expected to keep their posts. (NYT);

Angola Civil War: (5)
A mysterious, unidentified military force is reportedly advancing up a southern Angolan highway toward a major provincial capital. Reports indicate there are some 800 to 1,000 men in the column, which apparently originated in South African-ruled South-West Africa - (Namibia), and it is heading north toward Sa Da Bondera, the third largest city in Angola. Officials of the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA) which controls this capital, claim the force includes South African troops, helicopters and armored cars. But Portuguese military sources state that the unit is apparently composed of white mercenaries, not necessarily connected with South African forces. (LAT);

Argentina Terrorism: (6)
Twice-kidnapped British executive Charles Agnew Lockwood is rescued unharmed by police in Buenos Aires after a gunfight with Marxist terrorists in which four guerrillas were killed and a policeman was injured. It is not known if any ransom has been paid. (LAT);

Corsica Internal Dissension: (7)
A general strike to protest police handling of a new outbreak of autonomist violence in Corsica threatens to paralyze the entire island. The 24 hour walkout is aimed at turning Corsica, crowded with tourists, into an "isola morta" - a dead island. Leading Corsican unions, political groups and professional organizations call the strike in the name of the Island's Committee Against Repression, a body representing moderate and leftist opinion. (LAT);

International Monetary Fund Development: (8)
USA Secretary of the Treasury Simon reports that agreement has been reached on two major issues affecting the International Monetary Fund - voting strength within the fund will be realigned, but the USA will maintain 20% voting power, sufficient to veto any major actions of the 127-member organization it disagrees with and one-sixth of the fund's gold holdings, 25 tons, will be sold, and the proceeds will be used to create a special lending fund for the world's poorest nations. (LAT);

USA Arm Sales to Jordan: (9)
King Hussein of Jordan writes to USA Congressional leaders threatening to turn to Russia for military aid if the USA does not meet Jordan's defense needs. Congress recently turned down a Jordanian request for 14 Hawk batteries. (NYT);
Middle East Peace Agreement: (10)
Israel and Egypt initial a new accord on separation of forces in the Sinai. USA Secretary of State Kissinger signs a separate document with Israeli Prime Minister Rabin, entitled simply "proposal" setting forth the deployment of 200 American technicians to assist and supervise 250 Egyptian and Israeli technicians in warning posts in the Mitla and Giddi passes. Within a few days Israeli and Egyptian representatives are to meet in Geneva to sign the document formally. (LAT);

Middle East Peace Agreement: (11)
The Egyptians initial the new Sinai disengagement agreement with self-congratulations and praise for the Americans - but not a conciliatory word for the Israelis. An unforgiving attitude toward Israel continues to dominate the power level of the Egyptian government. Ihsan Abdel Koddous, chairman of the semiofficial newspaper Al AHRAH, reflects the attitude when he writes "This new agreement will not change the general position between us and Israel. For we are in a state of armed truce (under the first disengagement arranged by USA Secretary of State Kissinger 18 months ago) and we continue to be so now." He adds that continuing political and military preparations and caution must be maintained. (LAT);

Middle East Peace Agreement: (12)
USA President Ford warns of serious consequences if Congress refuses to approve deployment of American electronic experts to monitor the new Egyptian-Israeli Sinai agreement. Failure to send the technicians "would have a very serious impact," and the presence of Americans "is a vital ingredient in assuring both Egypt and Israel that the agreement will be upheld," Ford explains. Adding that some legitimate questions would be raised about the first USA peacekeeping role in the Mideast and that "I anticipate some criticism," Ford states "But if it had not been achieved, the alternatives would be turmoil, increased tension and obviously a greater chance of war." (LAT);

Middle East Peace Negotiations: (13)
United Nations Secretary General Waldheim welcomes the initialing of a new interim agreement between Egypt and Israel and calls on all parties to maintain the momentum of Middle East negotiations thereby opening the way to the next steps towards a comprehensive settlement and establishment of a just and durable peace in the Middle East, as called for by the Security Council. (LAT);
Libya

Condemnation of Middle East Peace Agreement: (14)

Libyan President Quaddafi, marking the sixth anniversary of his Islamic-Socialist revolution, condemns the Israeli-Egyptian peace pact and vows "unlimited support" to the Palestinians. "The Palestinian revolution will continue despite any agreement that might come. The Libyan Arab Republic will give its unlimited support to restore usurped land to Palestinians. The conflict is historical. It never was settled by an agreement and never will be," Quaddafi declares. (LAT);

Portugal

Governmental Crisis: (15)

Portugal's air force chief, General Gose Antonio Morais da Silva, joins the army commander in denouncing the appointment of Communist-backed former Premier Goncalves as the country's new armed forces commander in chief. "A revolution made by 80% of the Portuguese people cannot be transformed into a dictatorship of 20% over the remaining 80%," he declares. (LAT);

Angola

Civil War: (16)

Two hundred Portuguese military policemen in battledress march in front of the Presidential Palace in protest against being shipped to Angola. Hundreds of Portuguese refugees from Angola block traffic and occupy the Bank of Angola to protest the government's refusal to let them bring in money from the former Portuguese colony. The refugees are allowed to take only the equivalent of $200 with them from Angola. (NYT);

Timor Civil War: (17)

Australia is believed to have moved closer to an understanding with Portugal on steps to restore order in Portuguese Timor, following talks in Canberra between Prime Minister Whitlam and Antonio de Santos, Portugal's special envoy. (NYT);

Ecuador

Attempted Coup: (18)

The army chief of staff leads about 100 soldiers and several tanks in an unsuccessful revolt against President Rodriguez Lara and his anti-inflation measures, then surrenders. The rebel leaders are being held in a theater near the presidential palace their troops had stormed earlier in the day, routing the palace guard. Witnesses say at least a dozen people have been killed and 50 more wounded. General Roul Gonzalez, the leader of the attempted coup, acknowledges to newsmen that he had been unable to "consolidate" his position when other military units failed to rally to his side. President Rodriguez returns to the presidential palace, from the southern city of Riobamba and imposes a curfew on the city. (LAT)
Corsica Separatist Movement: (19)
A death threat against French President d'Estaing climaxes a general strike by the people of Corsica that paralyzes the island in protest against the police and French government. A letter, sent to a Paris radio station supposedly by the outlawed autonomist movement, Action for the Rebirth of Corsica, threatens the President's life if arrested ARC leader Edmond Simeoni is sentenced to death. Autonomist leaders, however, call the letter a fake. (LAT);

USA Arms Theft: (20)
The Irish Republican Army has stolen weapons from USA military bases in the USA and abroad for shipment to Northern Ireland, according to a Defense Department report. The alleged theft is reported in a previously classified document, which states that the IRA, along with other extremist groups, has stolen a total of 6,900 weapons and 1.2 million rounds of ammunition between 1971 and 1974. The report also states that the IRA is trying to recruit members of the USA Marine Corps who are qualified with machine guns and communications equipment. (LAT);

Spain Internal Politics: (21)
The Franco government of Spain lifts a ban preventing long-time pretender to the throne, Don Juan de Bourbon y Battenberg, from setting foot in Spain. Franco had officially named Don Juan's son, Juan Carlos, to succeed him as chief of state and Spain's next king which Don Juan has now apparently accepted and is to be allowed back in Spain. (LAT);

USA Economic Aid Proposal: (22)
The USA tells the opening session of a United Nations special assembly on development that the current economic crisis must unite the world - not divide it - or all will fail. The USA proposal centers around a $10 billion United Nations loan to protect the developing nations of the Third World from fluctuations in prices of raw materials. Also promised are bigger USA contributions to existing international development funds plus a $200 million pledge to a new agricultural self-help fund and a commitment of 6 million tons of grain to ease this year's food shortages. (LAT);

International Monetary Fund Appeal: (23)
The big three of the world economic order - the USA, Germany and Japan - must do more to stimulate their economies and help in the world recession according to the director of the International Monetary Fund. Gohnnes Witteveen warns that the recent rate of improvement in some economies, including the USA, may not be enough to offset continuing recession in the rest of the world. Witteveen favors additional fiscal measures, such as tax cuts and increased governmental spending, to push the economies of some nations to more rapid growth. USA Secretary of the Treasury Simon, and West German Finance Minister Hans Apel both state that their countries are doing enough. (LAT);

Bougainville Unilateral Independence: (24)
The tiny island of Bougainville in the South Pacific declares unilateral independence from Papua-New Guinea and renames itself the North Solomons. Michael Somare, Chief Minister of Papua-New Guinea, declares that neither Australia, which governs Papua-New Guinea as a United Nations trust, nor the United Nations will recognize Bougainville as a sovereign state. (NYT);

Middle East Peace Agreement: (25)
Despite misgivings by some members, Congress appears disposed to give fairly quick approval to the stationing of American civilian technicians in the Sinai Peninsula. But as the House and Senate prepare to reconvene after their month-long recess, there are demands that Secretary of State Kissinger disclose all of the details of the agreement that he negotiated with Israel and Egypt. Meanwhile, the White House indicates it has gone to unusual lengths in advance to smooth the way for Congressional approval of whatever Middle East pact Kissinger was able to obtain. While expressing confidence that the provision involving civilian technicians would be approved "easily" by Congress, Press Secretary Nessen states that President Ford would consider himself bound by a Congressional rejection of it. (LAT);

Middle East Peace Agreement: (26)
USA Secretary of State Kissinger wins a measured Saudi Arabian endorsement of the Israeli-Egyptian interim peace agreement, then heads his traveling State Department to Jordan and Syria for more post-agreement consultations. Saudi Arabia's support for the agreement brings relief to both the USA officials who felt that in a pinch King Khaled would back the more radical peace demands of Syria rather than the more moderate Egyptians and to the Egyptians, who feared that Saudi Arabia's growing influence in the Arab world might be used against them. (LAT);

Middle East Peace Agreement: (27)
Israel's ruling Labor Party and two smaller parties give their approval to the Egyptian-Israeli nonaggression agreement, virtually assuring passage by parliament. Their action should provide for 69 or 70 votes in the 120-seat parliament when it takes an all-or-nothing vote. Israeli Prime Minister Rabin tells the Labor Party's central committee that the agreement arranged by USA Secretary of State Kissinger could lead to "greater normalizing action" of Egyptian-Israeli relations. (LAT);

Middle East Peace Agreement: (28)
Egypt intends to press for further recovery of its Israeli-occupied Sinai territory soon after the newly initiated Sinai disengagement accord is implemented. Egyptian officials believe the test of Israeli sincerity to live in peace with all its Arab neighbors will be its ready compliance with the terms to continue - in the Sinai and elsewhere - a steady withdrawal to its 1967 borders. It is not immediately known what form the pressure for further withdrawals would take, but such pressure appears to be Egyptian policy. (LAT);

Middle East Peace Agreement: (29)
Egyptian President Sadat announces that he will fly to Washington next month for talks with USA President Ford to follow up yesterday's conclusion of a second-stage Egyptian-Israeli disengagement agreement in the Sinai. Sadat praises President Ford and Secretary of State Kissinger for the roles they played in bringing about the new agreement and adds that he is determined to press for other peace steps on other fronts, notably in Syria. (NYT);

Middle East Military Action: (30)
Israeli warplanes attack a suspected Arab guerrilla base in southern Lebanon in the fourth strike across the border. Arab gunners earlier in the day fire several shells into Israeli territory from Lebanon but cause neither casualties nor damage. (LAT);

Portugal Governmental Crisis: (31)
President Gomes puts off plans to swear in the pro-Communist ex-Premier Goncalves as chief of Portugal's armed forces in face of mounting opposition to the appointment. The last-minute deferrment of the ceremony comes after earlier plans to install a new government under Admiral Pinheiro de Azevedo also failed to materialize. The developments occur as defiant air force and army officers meet outside Lisbon to discuss ways of ousting the military's pro-Communist faction from power. (LAT);

Angola Civil War: (32)
The USA will send two charter aircraft to help evacuate Portuguese refugees from Angola. USA State Department spokesman Robert Funseth, explains that the two planes, will begin flying by the end of this week to help bring out the estimated 270,000 Europeans eager to leave the West African country. The planes will carry about 200 refugees daily to Portugal and the cost will run about $5 million for the air-lift. (LAT);

North Korea Seizure of Japan Fishing Boat: (33)
A North Korean patrol boat fires on and seizes a Japanese fishing boat in the northern Yellow Sea, killing two persons and injuring two others. The 50-ton Shosei Maru is attacked by a North Korean vessel while operating in an area about 100 miles east of Dairen, in southern Manchuria. The Japanese Foreign Minister asks both China and North Korea to investigate since the boat is seized near the border area between the two countries. (LAT);

South-West Africa Constitutional Conference: (34)
The South-West Africa constitutional conference deadlocks over an argument about the admission to the talks of an American constitutional lawyer, brought in by the Herero tribal leader, Lemens Kapuuo, to act as advisor on plans for an independent South-West Africa. The conference was set up by the South African government, which currently administers South-West Africa. (LAT);

China Criticism of USA and USSR: (35)
China attacks the USA and the USSR as enemies of the developing Third World nations and is particularly scathing in its denunciation of Russia. In a speech to a special United Nations assembly on development, Li Chiang, Peking's minister of foreign trade, spurns the conciliatory current that flowed from the USA presentation to the opening session declaring "The two superpowers are the biggest international exploiters and oppressors today and they are the source of a new world war," adding, "In quite a number of places, no sooner has one imperialism been compelled to withdraw than the other imperialism under the banner of socialism seizes the opportunity to squeeze its way in." (LAT);

USA Economic Policy Statement: (36)
The Ford Administration rejects suggestions from foreign leaders that the USA help rescue other nations from the current recession by rapidly heating up the American economy with new tax cuts and federal spending. "No country can expect the actions of others to resolve its problems," President Ford tells delegates from 125 nations at the joint annual meetings of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank. In blunter language, USA Secretary of the Treasury states he is concerned that the USA may have already "done too much" to spur domestic recovery, thereby risking renewed inflation. (LAT);
Iran Denouncement of USA Economic Offers: (37)
Iran, stung by USA criticisms of the oil-producing countries, gives a skeptical response in the General Assembly of the United Nations to USA Secretary of State Kissinger's new proposals for bridging the economic gap between rich and poor nations. "Proposals may appear brilliant on paper but when and how they are implemented, that is the question," Jamshid Amouzegar, Iranian Minister of the Interior tells the special session on economic matters. (NYT);

Aftermath of Ecuador Attempted Coup: (38)
General Gonzalez Alvera, leader of a brief but bloody revolt against Ecuador's military government, seeks diplomatic asylum in the Chilean Embassy. It had been reported that Gonzalez and other planners of the rebellion had been arrested and were being held in Ecuador. The Chilean Foreign Ministry does not say how Gonzalez managed to reach the country. (LAT);

Middle East Peace Agreement: (39)
USA Secretary of State Kissinger consults with leaders of Jordan and Syria on his way back to Washington, and in both places Kissinger finds something less than enthusiasm for the interim Sinai accord. In Jordan, King Hussein is described as moderately favorable and in Syria, President Assad is described as noncommittal. But within hours after Kissinger had left Damascus for the USA, Syria condemns the new Egyptian-Israeli agreement as a "setback to the march of Arab struggle." An official statement of the ruling Baath Party leadership says the agreement fails to mention other Arab countries and the Palestinian cause "and brought in the USA as a party to the Middle East conflict." (LAT);

Middle East Peace Agreement: (40)
Republican and Democratic Congressional leaders support President Ford's proposal to send a detachment of American civilians to the Middle East to monitor the Sinai agreement between Israel and Egypt. Leadership backing for the Administration's proposal - a key to the pact - is tendered despite fears about stationing Americans in the volatile area. The only outspoken holdout is Senate Majority Leader Mansfield who insists repeatedly that he opposes the stationing of 150 to 200 Americans in the Sinai. (LAT);

USA Commitments to Israel: (41)
Israel's parliament gives a solid but cheerless endorsement to the interim peace agreement. In debate, Prime Minister Rabin assures the Knesset that "conditions have been assured for a considerable increase in the Israeli defense forces strength in weapons of war, in quantity and in new quality." It is the Rabin government's first public indication of the extent of USA pledges to boost Israeli military might, made in an effort to make the agreement acceptable to Jerusalem. (LAT);

PLO Condemnation of Middle East Peace Agreement: (42) Palestinian refugees in all 15 camps in Lebanon stage a one-day strike to protest the new agreement between Israel and Egypt. Shops, cafes and movie houses are closed. Banners denouncing the accord as "high treason" span the streets in the camps, which house more than 250,000 Palestinians. Guerrillas briefly block the highway between Beirut and its airport to demonstrate their rejection of the pact. The Palestinians condemn the agreement because it does not recognize their right to their own state on the West Bank of the Jordan River. Palestinian commandos and left-wing supporters also charge that the agreement takes Egypt out of the battle with Israel, breaks Arab solidarity and gives the USA a foothold in the Sinai. (LAT);

Arab Boycott: (43) The Arab League's boycott committee adds 14 foreign companies to its blacklist, including USA Rockwell International Corporation and General Telephone and Electronics, but lifts its ban on Arab dealings with 19 other companies. The companies blacklisted include British, Swiss, and Japanese firms, and Romania's Tarom Airways, as well as the two USA firms. (LAT);

Portugal Governmental Crisis: (44) The Portuguese military is locked in a political showdown as anti-Communist officers seek to prevent deposed Premier Goncalves from taking command of the country's armed forces. The target of the political pressures is the 240-man Armed Forces Movement General Assembly, which ostensibly has the basic responsibility of guiding Portugal's 16-month-old revolution along the path to socialism. The anti-Communist tactic is to win an indefinite postponement of a crucial General Assembly meeting set for Friday, at which Goncalves probably will be confirmed as the new chief of staff of the armed forces. (LAT);

Portugal Governmental Crisis: (45) Former Portuguese President Spinola arrives in Paris from Brazil for a visit thought to be part of his plans for a political comeback. The journey follows several press interviews given by Spinola in which he called for the overthrow of the present left-wing regime in Portugal and described President Gomes as "a pathetic opportunist." (LAT);
Angola Civil War: (46)
Angry and intimidated, the Portuguese are leaving Angola in much larger numbers than predicted. It was thought earlier that perhaps 300,000 of the 500,000 Portuguese in Angola might leave by the time a black, independent government takes over November 11. Now it appears the number will exceed 400,000.(LAT);

Ethiopia Civil War: (47)
Renewed fighting in northern Ethiopia between government troops and separatist rebels takes hundreds of lives and sparks fears of full-scale warfare. The rebel Eritrean Liberation Front states that more than 2,000 government soldiers have been killed in recent fighting and accuses the government troops of executing hundreds of guerrilla sympathizers.(LAT);

Argentina Terrorism: (48)
An Argentine police chief and an unidentified army sergeant are killed in two terrorist attacks in La Plata. Chief Vergee, head of La Plata's investigation brigade, is killed when terrorists fire on his car and the sergeant dies about 15 minutes later when Marxist guerrillas open fire on an army truck.(LAT);

USSR Emigration Policy: (49)
World Jewish leaders, meeting in Paris, accuse the Soviet Union of discriminating against Soviet Jews despite its agreement at the Helsinki summit a month ago to respect human rights. The leaders claim they will hold a conference in Brussels next February to put pressure on Soviet authorities to give Jews full religious and cultural freedom and the right to emigrate at will.(LAT);

Czechoslovakia Border Violation: (50)
The West German government rejects a protest from Czechoslovakia over an illegal flight into Czechoslovakia by an American civilian pilot to bring East German refugees to the West. A note delivered to the Czechoslovak government says Bonn has no responsibility for the flights since an American had been involved and it was neither possible nor to be expected that private aircraft be supervised in border areas.(LAT);

Aftermath of Ecuador Attempted Coup: (51)
Chile's military government grants asylum to the leader of the abortive coup in Ecuador, General Gonzalez. Gonzalez and an aide had taken refuge in the Chilean Embassy in Quito after the unsuccessful attempt to overthrow Ecuador's president, Guillermo Rodriguez Lora. (LAT);

Aftermath of Peru Coup: (52)
Political exiles may return to Peru and news media closed by the old regime receive permission to reopen under a decree issued by the new military rulers. The decree allows dozens of deported politicians, professionals and newsmen to return from exile decreed by President Velasco before he was ousted last Friday. (LAT);

USA Arms Sales Reduction Request: (53)
Former USA Secretary of Defense Laird says that the Nixon administration tried to discuss limiting the arms race on the Korean peninsula with the USSR. Laird urges that such initiatives be given greater priority in the future. The former Defense Secretary adds that the overall issue of the sales of arms, not only to the two Koreas but to the rest of the world, is "one of the questions developed nations must address very soon." (LAT);

Egypt-USSR Deteriorating Relations: (54)
Israel and Egypt sign the USA-sponsored Sinai pact in a brief ceremony in Geneva boycotted by the Soviet Union and which is overshadowed by a slashing attack on Russia by Egyptian President Sadat, who says the Soviet boycott at Geneva and messages it sent to Syria are a "flagrant provocation and attempt to divide the Arab front." He also accuses the USSR of providing Syria, and the Palestinians with false information that Cairo is selling its rights in the new Sinai agreement. (LAT);

Middle East Peace Agreement: (55)
Maintaining that "stagnation and stalemate" are eliminated from Middle East peace negotiations, USA President Ford declares a new atmosphere has been created that will continue the momentum toward a lasting Arab-Israeli settlement. President Ford states that there is near unanimous approval among congressional leaders for USA civilian technicians to man early warning stations in the Sinai, and he again warns that failure to achieve the new step toward peace would present an "exceedingly high" risk for another Mideast war. (LAT);

Middle East Peace Agreement: (56)
The Ford Administration appears to make substantial progress in its drive for quick congressional approval of stationing USA technicians in the Sinai Desert to monitor the new Egyptian-Israeli agreement. After a White House briefing by President Ford and Secretary of State Kissinger, congressional leaders say action probably can be completed in two or three weeks. Except for Senate Majority Leader Mansfield, who opposes deeper USA involvement in the Middle East, the leaders indicate or express support of the plan for use of USA monitors. (LAT);

USA-USSR Grain Deal: (57)
USA Secretary of Agriculture, Butz, while defending massive grain sales to Russia as being in the national interest, states that further sales will be delayed until USA maritime unions agree to handle the shipments. Butz, facing criticism from several Senators, tells the Senate Agriculture Committee he will not dispute statements that AFL-CIO President Meany and maritime unions have assumed virtual control over whether any additional grain sales will be made to the USSR. (LAT);

Nuclear Arms Race: (58)
China's missile program slows down, but the USA and the USSR continue to sharpen their nuclear strike forces despite detente, the Institute for Strategic Studies reports. "China continued her nuclear program more slowly than earlier projections have indicated," the Institute states, explaining that an unspecified number of intermediate-range ballistic missiles in the 1,750 mile category were added by Peking during the year but the multistage intercontinental ballistic missile (ICBM) with a range of 3,500 miles is still not deployed and there has been no full-range test of China's planned 8,000 mile ICBM, although both have been under development for years. Meanwhile the USA added 550 Minutemen missiles and three ICBM's, each with multiple warheads, and deployed Poseidon missiles with multiple warheads in 25 submarines. And the USSR added 40 ICBM'S to its stockpile and deployed a new family of more accurate, large-payload ICBM's identified as the SS-17, SS-18 and SS-19. Also a new arms race is under way in the oil-producing countries, with Iran and Saudi Arabia each tripling their military budgets in the last year. (LAT);

Argentina Terrorism: (59)
Gunmen shoot and wound an Argentine executive of a Ford Motor Company subsidiary in Cordoba. The victim is identified as Leonardo Castelli, a labor relations chief for Transax, a vehicle spare parts factory run by Ford. (LAT);

France Deteriorating Economy: (60)
President d'Estaing announces a massive $7 billion pump-priming operation to create jobs and get the economy moving because of France's worst recession in decades. Along with the massive new spending program, the Bank of France drops its basic lending rate from 9.5% to 8%. The government program will turn a projected slight surplus in France's 1975-76 budget into a deficit of about $12 billion. The program is to be financed entirely by treasury borrowing and there will be no increases in taxes. "We are going through the worst shock the world economy has known in 45 years," d'Estaing states, adding, "These measures are being taken once and for all. By next year, the new budget will be in balance." (LAT);

Denmark Deteriorating Economy: (G1)
Prime Minister Anker Joergensen of Denmark meets with opposition leaders in a final attempt to reach agreement on controversial economic measures and avoid the country's third general election in less than two years. The measures, to pump about $850 million into the economy, are proposed by Joergensen's minority Social Democratic government as a means of reducing the 5.5% rate of unemployment. (LAT);

September 6, 1975

Middle East Peace Negotiations: (G2)
USA Secretary of State Kissinger predicts that he will achieve an "understanding" with Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko that will overcome any Soviet objections to the Sinai disengagement agreement, including the deployment of USA technicians there. Kissinger states "I do believe that at the end of an extended conversation with Gromyko we will reach an understanding about the relationship between the United Nations activities in the Sinai and the really rather small USA activities which are not part of the United Nations mandate." The USSR is displeased that the provision on the USA civilian technicians had been agreed to without the Russians having been consulted. (LAT);

Portugal Governmental Crisis: (G3)
Portuguese moderates win a major victory when they force deposed pro-Communist Premier Goncalves from the ruling Armed Forces Revolutionary Council and prevent him from becoming chief of staff. The moves climax a storm of opposition to Goncalves which has edged Portugal towards civil war. The showdown comes at a meeting of the Armed Forces General Assembly and a communique signed by President Gomes, issued at the end of the meeting, says Goncalves has been dropped from the 28-man Revolutionary Council. Another announcement states Goncalves has "declined" the nomination as chief of staff. (LAT);

Portugal Governmental Crisis: (G4)
British Prime Minister Wilson accuses the Soviet Union of giving 4 million pounds a month - about $8.4 million - to Portugal's Communist Party. The figure, he claims, comes from reliable sources. Wilson, who is meeting fellow Socialist leaders in London to discuss aid for Socialists in Portugal, flatly rejects Soviet charges that the West is interfering in Lisbon's internal affairs. "We are not interfering," he tells reporters, "And we don't want anyone else to interfere either." (LAT);

Angola Civil War: (65)
The South African government states that Portugal agrees to take over the job of safeguarding workers and equipment at a water pump station at the Ruacana hydroelectric project in Angola. In a statement issued in Pretoria, South Africa "shall as soon as possible suspend measures, and in cooperation with the Portuguese commander withdraw the personnel concerned." Sources in Johannesburg report that South African authorities have acknowledged sending a 30-man patrol 20 miles into Angola to protect the pumping station in Calugue but there is no indication that there is any connection between this force and the patrol in Ruacanna. (LAT);

USA-USSR Grain Boycott: (66)
A federal judge signs a 90-day injunction ordering longshoremen in New Orleans to load ships with grain purchased by the USSR and forbidding the longshoremen's union from trying any evasive tactics. USA District Judge Rubin's injunction comes after Thomas Gleason, president of the International Longshoremen's Association, told newsmen that an injunction might be met by "stickouts." "There is more than one way to skin a cat on these injunctions," Gleason adds. (LAT);

Sudan Attempted Coup: (67)
Forces loyal to President Jaafar Numeiri crush a rebellion led by an obscure army officer who is wounded and arrested after a tank-led assault on the state radio station. Vice President Mohammed Ahmed first states that the leader of the coup, identifed as Major Osman, "was silenced forever," but later, the Sudanese news agency reports that Osman "was wounded and is receiving treatment at the military hospital in Omdurman." The casualties from nearly two hours of fighting that swirled around the station and presidential palace are not immediately known. President Numeiri, who declares that the situation is under control, describes the attempted coup as a "trivial act by officers who couldn't even control a village." (LAT);

Argentina Terrorism: (68)
Eight persons die in three separate incidents in a new escalation of political violence that hits Argentina. Five bullet-ridden bodies are found near the city of La Plata, an army officer and a soldier are killed by left-wing guerrillas in northern Tucuman province and a passerby dies when guerrillas attack a sports complex near Buenos Aires. The latest violence increases the number of terrorist deaths from both the right and left to at least 382 since January 1. (LAT);

Cambodia Foreign Aid Policy: (69)
Cambodia's Vice Premier, Ieng Sary, in the first United Nations speech from his country since the Communists seized power in April, declares that his government will accept aid without strings from friendly countries. Sary states that the destructiveness of the war has left immense postwar problems, but his government is striving to make Cambodia a modern agricultural and industrial state. (LAT);

September 7, 1975

Middle East Peace Agreement: (70)
Israeli Prime Minister Rabin, warning that detente did not extend to the Middle East, forecasts a Russian attempt to undermine the Israeli-Egyptian interim peace agreement. He states that the USA and the USSR are engaged in a fight for influence in the Middle East because of the USA dominance in arranging the pact between Israel and Egypt. "I assume that the Russians will attempt to undermine the agreement - by means of Libya, the Palestine Liberation Organization and any extremist element in the Arab world," Rabin declares. (LAT);

Middle East Peace Agreement: (71)
Palestinian guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat warns that the USA will pay "an exorbitant price" - similar to that in Indochina - for sending technicians to man early warning stations between Egyptian and Israeli lines in the Sinai. Arafat accuses the USA of attempting to establish a foothold in the Middle East in order to make up for its losses in Vietnam, Cambodia and Portugal, and informs the USA "that the Arab region is not for sale by international auction." (LAT);

Portugal Governmental Crisis: (72)
The caretaker government of deposed Premier Goncalves resigns. The government decides to quit immediately after meeting to consider the political situation and President Gomes accepts the resignation. Vice Admiral Pinheiro de Azevedo, designated to replace Goncalves nine days ago, has not yet formed a new government. The meeting also reorganizes the inner circle of the ruling Revolutionary Council from 30 to 24 members ousting Goncalves among others, to make the Council more moderate in its makeup. (LAT);

Timor Civil Violence: (73)
The leftist nationalist movement on Portuguese Timor claims its troops have seized control of virtually all of the colony and propose independence talks with Portuguese government officials in Canberra September 20. (LAT);

Argentina Terrorism: (74)
The bullet-riddled bodies of three more leftists are found in Argentina, bringing to 31 the number of people killed in a week of right-wing violence. (LAT);

Cambodia Internal Politics: (75)
Prince Norodom Sihanouk of Cambodia will leave Peking soon and "return in glory" to Phnom Penh, according to a broadcast from China. Sihanouk has lived in Peking for five years and has not returned to Phnom Penh since the Communist victory in April. (LAT);

Turkey Natural Disaster: (76)
A strong earthquake kills at least 1,000 people in a wide area of eastern Turkey, the governor of Diyarbakir province reports. Local officials believe the death toll could go much higher when rescue teams reach remote mountaintop villages. Rescue workers report the noontime quake toppled buildings and touched off fires along the Anatolian Fault. Army helicopters drop tents, medicine kits and blankets to victims and ferry survivors to hospitals. The quake, which measured 6.8 on the Richter scale is the 13th to strike along the fault which has taken 35,000 lives since 1939. (LAT);

September 8, 1975

Middle East Peace Agreement: (77)
The newspaper of Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization, AL THAIURA, attacks the planned deployment of 200 USA civilian technicians in the Sinai and urges Arab citizens to shoot them. "The Palestinian revolution...regards the USA military presence in the Sinai as an enemy target that should be shot by every struggler and every nationalist in our nation." The paper describes the stationing of American technicians in the Sinai as a "dual occupation" of Egypt by both the USA and Israel, adding "We are confident that the first shot (at USA technicians) will be fired by an Egyptian soldier." (LAT);

Lebanon Civil Violence: (78)
Police report the massacre of at least 12 passengers aboard a bus ambushed in the Maronite Christian village of Zghorta, the hometown of Lebanese President Suleiman Franjieh. The murders come during another day of fighting between rival political factions in Lebanon. Twenty-nine people are reported killed and 73 wounded in the day's battles. (LAT);

Portugal Governmental Crisis: (79)
Portugal's army chief says that political parties are not capable of leading the country out of its long-running political crisis. General Carlos Fabiao states that the way out of the crisis "will take place with the development of base organizations since parties don't seem to be able to come to any understanding." Fabiao's remark comes after the cabinet of former Premier Goncalves quits to protest the victory of military moderates over the pro-Goncalves forces in the armed forces assembly. (LAT);

Angola Civil War: (80)
An American sponsored airlift of Portuguese fleeing embattled southern Angola begins today. The USA is paying more than $5 million for the charter of two commercial airliners which will fly a refugee shuttle between Nova Lisba and Lisbon. (LAT);

Timor Civil War: (81)
A leader of the left-wing Fretilin independence movement in strife- torn Portuguese Timor states that his organization is willing to begin talks with Portuguese envoys in Australia later this month. The movement also states that it is ready to release Portuguese held in Timor. (LAT);

Black Africa-Rhodesia Conflict: (82)
The executive body of the African National Council announces plans for leadership elections September 27-28, a move interpreted as a victory for moderates willing to settle for eventual, instead of immediate, black rule in Rhodesia. Moderates could smooth the way toward a constitutional settlement between the white-minority Rhodesian government of Prime Minister Smith and the nation's black majority. (LAT);

West Germany Anti-Apartheid Demonstrations: (83)
Anti-apartheid demonstrators greet South African Foreign Minister Muller with Nazi salutes when he arrives in Bonn for an unofficial visit. The demonstrators carry banners describing Muller as a Nazi and protesting alleged West German arms deliveries to South Africa. (LAT);

Libya Annexation of Chad: (84)
The SUNDAY TIMES OF LONDON reports that Libya has annexed part of northern Chad in order to get at uranium it believes to be there. The newspaper publishes a map showing the annexed area slicing as much as 60 miles from Chad territory along the 660-mile border, thereby eliminating the section of Chad jutting into Libya. Libyan sources describe the annexation as an effort to restore Libya's historical borders, which the French and British moved north 25 years ago when they were the dominant colonial powers in the area. The annexation links with Libyan leader Colonel Quaddafii's announcement that Libya is preparing to become a nuclear state. (LAT);

Iceland Territorial Limits Violation: (85)

An Icelandic coast guard vessel cuts the hauling ropes of a West German fishing trawler in a flareup of the "cod war" between the two countries. The coast guard states that the trawler is fishing illegally 34 nautical miles off Iceland's southwest coast. Iceland claims a 50-mile fishing limit, which the West Germans have refused to recognize. (LAT);

Philippines Arms Development: (86)

The Philippines test-fire four "Bong Bong" rockets in what the government says is a successful experiment in the local production of ballistic missiles. President Marcos, who witnesses the test, states that other homebuilt weapons are also being tested because the defense of the country cannot be left to alliances with other countries. (LAT);

International Monetary Fund Criticism: (87)

The Soviet party daily PRAVDA scorns the decision by the international Monetary Fund to devote some of its gold to helping poor countries as an attempt by capitalist powers to avoid reforming their relations with the Third World. (LAT);

Puerto Rico Independence Movement: (88)

A stepped-up international campaign to free Puerto Rico from "Yankee imperialism" is the objective of a three-day conference being held in Havana. Speakers at the conference demand that the United Nations take up the case of Puerto Rico and condemn the USA for maintaining the Caribbean island in the status of a colony. (LAT);

Bolivia Economic Crisis: (89)

The recession of the industrialized countries has plunged Bolivia, a landlocked nation that lives by the export of minerals, into an extreme crisis. Mining Minister Colonel Colaya says 1975 mining exports have suffered a 30% decline while the cost of extracting minerals has tripled. (LAT);

September 9, 1975

Middle East Peace Agreement: (90)

The Ford Administration begins revealing to Congress the secret clauses of the Sinaal accord and the real price the USA may have to pay as mediator of the Israeli-Egyptian agreement. The most important of the secret documents is the so-called memorandum of agreement between Israel and the USA. Its full import is believed to amount to a formalized near-alliance between the two nations. Senate concern about the USA role as Middle East peacekeeper centers around a growing conviction that Israel's military shopping list will be a multibillion-dollar aid commitment, lasting well into the 1980's and the parallel conviction that an enhanced USA-Israel relationship could in future years limit American options in the Middle East, and in a future war, make a superpower confrontation with the USSR more probable than before.(LAT);

Lebanon Civil Violence: (91)
The port city of Tripoli, Lebanon's second largest, is in a state of virtual anarchy as Christian and Moslem militamen battle in the streets and the sectarian fighting spreads to nearby villages. At least 31 persons have been reported killed in Tripoli, but police say an exact count is impossible "because of the intensity of the fighting." Internal security forces are unable to cope with the situation and sources call it "complete chaos and rebellion" with bombs exploding every couple of minutes.(LAT);

Portugal Governmental Crisis: (92)
Pro-Communist General Goncalves and his cabinet agree to remain in office as a caretaker government until Thursday, when Premier-designate Jose Pinheiro do Azevedo is expected to announce his new administration. Goncalves agrees to President Gomes' request that he resume the premiership temporarily in order "to make a positive contribution to a solution of the political crisis."(LAT);

USSR Capture of Japan Fishing Boat: (93)
Soviet patrol boats apparently strafe and capture a 99-ton Japanese fishing boat with nine crewmen off the southern tip of the island of Sakhalin, according to the Japanese Maritime Safety Agency. The Japanese boat radios that "Russian boats gunned at it and were going to inspect it on board," then goes off the air. The agency states that it has no further information.(LAT);

USA-USSR Grain Deal: (94)
Longshoremen appeal a federal injunction forcing them to load grain aboard Russian ships, claiming that the order violates their freedom of political expression. Federal judges in Galveston, Texas, and in New Orleans had ordered the International Longshoremen's Association to load the grain after union members boycotted the ships, saying that the grain sales would cause food prices to skyrocket as they did after the 1972 sale. The ILA asks the Court of Appeals to intervene because "grave invasions of personal rights, statutory rights, and constitutional privileges are raised by the order."(LAT);
Aftermath of Sudan Attempted Coup: (95)
Sudanese President Jaafar Numeiri, who put down an attempted coup last week, announces the indefinite closing of the University of Khartoum where he says security agents have discovered "antigovernment instigators, guns and ammunition." Numeiri also promises a purge in the civil service. In a nationwide speech the President blames the attempted coup on Sudanese living in Libya but stresses that he is not "accusing or insinuating" that the Libyan leader, Colonel Quaddafi, is responsible for the incident.(LAT);

Aftermath of Ecuador Attempted Coup: (96)
Ecuador President Rodriguez reorganizes his cabinet one week after he crushed a revolt by about 100 soldiers led by the army chief of staff. The new cabinet has nine portfolios held by military officers and two civilian ministers.(LAT);

Colombia Terrorism: (97)
The inspector general of Colombia's army is assassinated in Bogota by leftist terrorists. The victim, General Quinones, had been conducting a strong campaign against the terrorists.(LAT);

Puerto Rico Independence Movement: (98)
The USA Conference of Mayors cancels the visit of 14 mayors to China next week, charging that Peking introduced a political element into the conference by objecting to the inclusion of the mayor of San Juan, Puerto Rico. Mayor Barcelo favors USA statehood for Puerto Rico and Peking backs the Island's independence movement.(LAT);

September 10, 1975

Middle East Peace Agreement: (99)
In his first extended public discussion of the Sinai accord, USA Secretary of state Kissinger assures the USSR that the latest American success in the Middle East need not damage detente nor Soviet interests. At the same time, Kissinger addresses the main domestic critics of the new Israeli-Egyptian agreement and promises anew that all confidential USA "undertakings" to either party will be made public. But he reserves the right to keep certain parts of the agreement secret. Kissinger also promises that the USA is seeking no "unilateral advantage" in future Middle East deals and that he and his aides "are debating now certain procedural questions about the Soviet role in the recent negotiations-rather than a unilateral advantage gained by the United States at the expense of the Soviet Union."(LAT);
Middle East Peace Agreement: (100)
Egyptian and Israeli military delegations begin talks in Geneva with a two-week deadline to reach agreement on ways of implementing terms of the new Sinai interim agreement. General Sillasvuo, commander of the United Nations peacekeeping force in the Middle East, warns the two sides that the talks would be difficult and perseverance would be needed to finish by the deadline. The working group must agree on the withdrawal of Israeli forces from 3,500 square miles in the Sinai Desert, the handing over of the Abu Rodeis oil fields and the installation of American technicians to man electronic surveillance equipment between the Egyptian and Israeli forces.(LAT);

Israel Cooperation Proposal: (101)
Israel offers to share its technological skills and the fruits of its peaceful research and development programs with its Arab neighbors "without strings and without reference to political differences." In a speech to the special United Nations session on development and economic cooperation, Israel's Ambassador Herzog proposes a broad program of regional cooperation in the Middle East. He states that his government would permit the free passage of goods through Israeli ports for its Arab neighbors, and later Israeli sources say this means that the facilities of Haifa would be available for use by Jordan and also possibly Saudi Arabia.(LAT);

Lebanon Civil Violence: (102)
The Lebanese government appears ready to have the army intervene in factional fighting around the northern port of Tripoli, according to political sources. But the sources emphasize that the government, which is holding an emergency session, has appealed to both sides for restraint. The fighting slowed considerably last Tuesday night after another day of violence, but a new flareup today will almost certainly force the government to resort to the army.(LAT);

Portugal Governmental Crisis: (103)
USA Secretary of State Kissinger describes the recent decline of Communist strength in Portugal as encouraging. "The United States supports the emergence of a pluralist system there, reflecting the people's views as they were expressed in the election to the constitutional assembly," he states, adding that the future level of USA aid to Portugal will be influenced by the strength of the Communists.(LAT);

Argentina Terrorism: (104)
A policeman is gunned down in La Plata, Argentina and two bullet-riddled bodies are discovered in Cordova. The killings
Aftermath of Turkey Earthquake: (105)
Turkish soldiers and volunteers rescue seven persons from rubble of towns and villages flattened in Saturday's earthquake that killed more than 2,500 persons, but relief operations are hampered by aftershocks. Officials report that they are short of supplies and that the final death toll could reach 3,000.(LAT);

USA-USSR Grain Deal: (106)
USA President Ford says he will send a diplomatic team to the USSR to try to negotiate a long-term agreement on sales of grain to Moscow. As a result, after a White House meeting with President Ford, union officials led by AFL-CIO President Meany agree to suspend interference with grain shipments to Russia, at least until mid-October, when the progress of negotiations can be assessed. The USA negotiators will seek firm commitments from the Russians that they will avoid disrupting American grain and prices with sudden purchases, will purchase only minimum amounts every year, and will allow at least one-third of all shipments to be carried in American vessels.(LAT);

USA Military Development: (107)
The Pentagon asks Congress to approve a special airborne anti-tank unit to counter superior Warsaw Pact tank forces in Europe. The Pentagon also calls for an extension in the time former active duty men must spend in the reserves to create a backup of 150,000 soldiers needed following a mobilization.(LAT);

Norway-USSR Sovereignty Dispute: (108)
The Soviet airline Aeroflot inaugurates what must be one of the most infrequent "scheduled" air routes in the world -- once-a-month to Spitsbergen, the northernmost inhabited place on earth. The service also must be one of the most politically motivated. The Kremlin's primary aim is to maintain and enhance the Soviet presence on Spitsbergen and eventually to gain some authority over the Arctic island that has been under Norwegian sovereignty for 50 years. Spitsbergen is of great strategic military importance for the Soviet navy and huge oil deposits are believed to lie under waters around the island.(LAT);

Chile Internal Politics: (109)
Chile's Roman Catholic leaders call on the country's military government to seek greater equity and justice in its administration. In a 34-page document, the Chilean episcopate criticizes certain economic policies which "are causing an immense amount of suffering." (LAT);

September 11, 1975

Middle East Peace Agreement: (110)
Israeli and Egyptian negotiators in Geneva hold detailed discussions on how Israel will withdraw its forces from the eastern coast of the Gulf of Suez under their new interim
Sinai peace agreement. Meanwhile, Israeli Prime Minister Rabin, states that his country is prepared to negotiate an overall peace settlement with all of its Arab neighbors but has made no decision on whether to work toward an interim
Golan accord with Syria. (LAT);

Lebanon Civil Violence: (111)
The Lebanese government announces that it will move troops into the tense region around Tripoli, which has been the scene of fighting for the past 10 days. After three days of emergency cabinet meetings, Prime Minister Karami declares that an attempt will be made to put a reported two battalions of regular forces between warring Moslems from Tripoli and Christian militants from nearby Zgharta. No attempt will be made to use the regular army forces against the armed militia on either side, Karami explains. (LAT);

Portugal Governmental Crisis: (112)
Thousands of extreme leftists from 33 military units around the country converge on the northern industrial town of Porto and shout their opposition to the nation's military leaders.
"Get the fascists out of the barracks!" the crowd shouts. The demonstration comes after an announcement by the Revolutionary Council imposing censorship in military news. (LAT);

Portugal Terrorism: (113)
Bombs explode in the Spanish Embassy, the Sheraton Hotel and near the Spanish Iberia Airline office in Lisbon. A group calling itself Internationalist Revolutionary Solidarity issues a statement claiming it has sabotaged the embassy as part of a campaign to free two Basques awaiting execution in Spain on charges of murdering a civil guard. No injuries are reported. (LAT);

Philippines-USA Military Relations: (114)
President Marcos states that the Philippines would like to end
if possible, all forms of military dependence upon the USA.
That is the reason the Philippine government is renegotiating
the existing military treaties, including the military base pact, with the USA, Marcos tells military officials in a speech highlighting armed forces "Loyalty Day." (LAT);
Timor Civil War: (115)
Pro-Indonesian forces in Portuguese Timor are ready to launch guerrilla warfare against the left-wing FRETILIN movement, which has claimed victory in the civil war there. The Pro-Indonesia Apodeti Party, which is not reported to have taken part in much of the month-long fighting, controls most of the interior of the territory. (LAT);

Chile Terrorism: (116)
A bomb concealed in a giftwrapped book explodes in the offices of a pro-government Santiago newspaper as Chile's military junta prepares to celebrate its second anniversary. A group called the "Popular Resistance Movement" is blamed for the bombing that injures the editor of the paper. (LAT);

Spain Internal Dissension: (117)
Suspected Basque separatists bomb a railway tunnel and try to blow up the main Madrid-to-France highway in the strife-torn Basque region of northern Spain. The incidents are apparently connected with a wave of protests against death sentences given to two Basque separatist militants. Tens of thousands of industrial workers have been on strike and one demonstrator is killed and several others injured in street clashes with police. (LAT);

France-Italy Economic Threats: (118)
France is threatening to ban or tax Italian wine and Italy is threatening to do the same to French cheese and meat after talks between the two countries break down. The Italian agriculture minister says it will take France to the Common Market Court of Justice for violating community rules if import controls on Italian wine are imposed. (LAT);

Diego Garcia Forced Evacuation: (119)
Britain denies allegations that it forcibly removed more than 1,000 inhabitants from the Indian Ocean island of Diego Garcia to make way for a USA naval base there. USA Senator Kennedy, who has called on Congress to reopen debate on the island base leased by the USA from Britain, declares that he is deeply disturbed by newspaper reports that up to 1,400 people living on Diego Garcia were forcibly removed and are now living in abject poverty on Mauritius, about 1,000 miles to the south. (LAT);

China Oil Discovery: (120)
The People's Republic of China, discovers three new fields which have remained unknown to the West. The fields are named Chilling, Chuyisan and Muchi, according to Choom-ho Park and Alan Cohen, of Harvard's East Asian legal studies program, writing in the fall issue of FOREIGN POLICY. The article places China's oil reserves at from 2.7 billion tons confirmed to 70 billion tons possible. (LAT);

September 12, 1975

Middle East Peace Agreement: (121)
USA Secretary of State Kissinger briefs Senators on the new Sinai accord, and commitment of USA technicians to monitor the peace seems assured. But Congressional leaders move cautiously to develop assurances that the technicians will not involve the USA in war. (LAT);

Middle East Military Action: (122)
Israeli warplanes strafe and rocket a Palestinian refugee camp in southern Lebanon killing two persons and wounding five. Lebanon officials state that the attack is on the Borgholleh camp, eight miles north of the port city of Tyre, and that it is the third Israeli air raid on the teeming settlement in the past two weeks. (LAT);

Arab Boycott: (123)
The Anti-Defamation League of B' nai B'rith charges the USA Department of Commerce with aiding Arab nations that boycott both Jewish-owned businesses and firms that support Israel. The League, in a federal court suit, alleges that the department has been circulating offers for Arab business opportunities to American firms that contain restricting provisions against persons or companies supporting Israel. (LAT);

Portugal Governmental Crisis: (124)
The Communist and Popular Democratic Parties refuse to meet, blocking an attempt by Portuguese Premier-designate Azevedo to form a new cabinet. The ruling Revolutionary Council meets in the presidential palace to discuss possible ways out of the crisis. (LAT);

Argentina !nternal Politics: (125)
Argentine President Peron will take a 45-day leave of absence to recover from a state of exhaustion. She will delegate power to Senate President Italo A. Luder, who is next in line for the Presidency because Argentina currently has no Vice President. (LAT);

USA-USSR Grain Sales: (126)
The USA Department of Agriculture revises slightly downward its forecast of a record USA grain harvest. But the prediction indicates that ample grain will be produced to permit further sales to the USSR. Meanwhile, a three-man USA delegation arrives in Moscow to discuss a long-term agreement covering grain sales to the Soviet Union. Officials say it could take up to six months to work out the details. (LAT);

Diego Garcia Forced Evacuation: (127)
The USA Senate votes to demand a full report from President Ford on the alleged forced removal of up to 1,400 residents from the British-owned island of Diego Garcia to make way for USA naval facilities. (LAT);

EEC Appeal to Ethiopia: (128)
European Common Market leaders appeal to Ethiopia's military rulers to reprieve 12 women relatives of the late Emperor Haile Selassie who are reported to be facing execution today. (LAT);

Chile Internal Politics: (129)
Chile's President Pinochet announces a slight relaxation in the provisions of virtual martial law in effect in Chile, but he declares that restrictions of individual rights will continue. He states that the state of siege clamped down on the country after the coup two years ago will be down-graded from a state of "internal defense" to a state of "internal security." Persons convicted of security law violations will now be able to appeal to higher courts. (LAT);

September 13, 1975

Middle East Peace Agreement: (130)
USA Secretary of State Kissinger states that Congress should have the same right as the President to withdraw USA technicians monitoring the Israeli-Egyptian Sinai accord. Kissinger tells the House Armed Services Committee that the Administration is willing to have written into implementing legislation two provisions sought by some members of Congress. One will require the President to withdraw Americans if actual hostilities breaks out and the other will provide that Congress can order withdrawal by concurrent resolution, not requiring presidential approval. (LAT);

Lebanon Civil Violence: (131)
Rival Moslem and Christian political factions trade mortar fire in northern Lebanon, killing at least two persons. The mortar fire is reported at Tripoli and in the Christian village of Majdlaya. Army troops in a buffer zone between Tripoli and the neighboring Christian villages do not intervene in the new fighting. (LAT);

Egypt-Palestine Deteriorating Relations: (132)
Egypt, apparently angered by a fierce Palestinian guerrilla campaign against the new Sinai agreement with Israel, takes over the voice of Palestine radio station in Cairo and fires its Palestinian staff. The action brings veiled threats of violence by the Fatah guerrilla organization. The action comes after the radio station refuses to stop attacking the USA as fiercely as before.(LAT);

World Group Condemnation of Israel: (133)
The International Parliamentary Union, representing lawmakers from 75 nations, votes by more than 2 to 1 to condemn Israel and demand its immediate withdrawal from all occupied Arab land. The Arab states, the Communist bloc and most nonaligned countries vote for the resolution, which is sponsored by the Arabs. The resolution condemns "repression by Israel within the occupied Arab territories, its violation of the human rights of the populations, its violations of the Geneva conventions and of all principles of international law."(LAT);

USA Arms Embargo to Turkey: (134)
The top two officials of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization military alliance state that the USA embargo on arms shipments to Turkey will soon end. At the same time, the officials - Secretary General Luns and the military chief, General Haig Jr. - concede that the effect of the six-month-old ban on American shipments to the Turks has damaged the ability of the alliance to defend itself. General Luns, the political chief of NATO, bases his confidence on a recent visit to Washington where he had warned officials about "the deteriorating situation on NATO's southern flank."(LAT);

Libya-Turkey Arms Deal: (135)
Libya gives Turkey seven USA-built F-5 jet fighters as part of a $33.6 million military aid package. Turkey already has several F-5s among its air force of 300 planes, but the USA embargo on the delivery of USA built war material to Turkey leaves them short of parts, which are included in the Libyan aid. The USA is investigating the deal because the embargo expressly prohibits the delivery of any USA armaments to Turkey.(LAT);

Argentina Terrorism: (136)
Army gunners fire three 90-mm cannon shells into a suburban hideout, killing three terrorists. The body of a kidnapped oil executive shot in the head is found nearby. Police call for army help after a nightlong battle with guerrillas.(LAT);

Ethiopia Execution Denial: (137)
The Ethiopian government categorically denies reports that it is about to execute members of the royal families and indirectly attacks the USA and Britain for issuing public appeals on their behalf. A statement issued by the Provisional Military Government states that there is "no basis for such rumors and reports" and that there would be no executing without trial in Ethiopia. The USA has warned Ethiopia of "serious consequences" for American-Ethiopian relations should the former royal family be executed. (LAT);

India Internal Politics: (138)
Ruldip Nayar, one of India's leading journalists, is released from jail after being detained for seven weeks under the country's internal security laws. The release comes three days before the Delhi high court was to rule on a petition from his wife challenging his arrest as illegal and unlawful. The impending court decision was an important test case for hundreds of others detained under the same law. (LAT);

France Kidnapping: (139)
The French government announces that it is ready to pay $2.3 million in ransom for a kidnapped French woman held by Moslem rebels in northern Chad for 16 months. The Toulo tribe rebels demand half the ransom in weapons and declare they will kill Francoise Claustre September 23 if their conditions are not met. (LAT);

September 14, 1975

Lebanon Civil Violence: (140)
An army-backed truce between two rival religious factions takes hold in northern Lebanon. Troops in the buffer zones separating the Moslems in Tripoli and Christian militiamen in the nearby town of Zghorta spend a peaceful day after an overnight clash. Moslem factions call for a general strike to protest the intervention of troops in the Tripoli-Zghorta fighting. (LAT);

USA Arm Sales to Israel: (141)
Israel expects to receive the first deliveries of the American F-15 fighter plane by the end of the year. National radio in Tel Aviv denies reports from the USA magazine AVIATION WEEK that Israel might cancel its orders. Israel will also be getting large numbers of the F-16 fighter in one or two years. (LAT);

Ethiopia GuerrillaAggression towards the USA: (142)
Unidentified forces attack a USA naval communications base in Ethiopia and all eight persons assigned there including two Americans - are missing. In Damascus, Syria, an Ethiopian rebel group - the Eritrean Liberation Front - claims responsibility for the attack and warns that there will be more raids on USA installations. The facility, located about 10 miles southwest of Asmara, is a satellite of the large USA
Kagnew communications base near Asmara. Two Americans were kidnapped from Kagnew in an earlier attack and are still not freed. (LAT)

Portugal Governmental Crisis: (143)
Premier-designate Azevedo promises to defend public order and democratic freedoms but admits "some difficulty" in forming a new government. Azevedo hopes to announce his ministers this week. The new cabinet is expected to include a number of military men and members of the three leading parties - the Socialists, Popular Democrats and Communists. (LAT)

Timor Civil War: (144)
Indonesian Foreign Minister Malik declares that his country is "prepared to take any action" if the civil war in Portuguese Timor threatens Indonesia's security. "We are waiting for Portugal to announce and admit that it has no authority on Timor anymore, then we may move in to help," he explains. Malik is to meet with Indonesian President Suharto to discuss Portuguese Timor. (LAT)

Turkish-Cyprus Independence: (145)
Turkish-Cypriot leader Rauf Denktash states that he will declare the Turkish-held north of the island independent unless negotiations on a settlement are resumed quickly and unless he is allowed to address the United Nations. (LAT)

Spain Terrorism: (146)
A military court in Madrid imposes the death penalty on three members of an extreme leftist group and jails two others for killing a Madrid policeman. The court also agrees to hear appeals from two other guerrillas, from the Basque area, who have been sentenced to death for killing a policeman in that area last year. (LAT)

Argentina Internal Politics: (147)
President Peron turns over the presidential power to her constitutional successor, Senate President Italo Luder, and begins a vacation scheduled to last 33 days. "I'm not sick. There is a lot of speculation, but I'm only going on a little rest," the President explains. An official statement indicates that she will return to work on October 17, but it is rumored that she will not come back to finish the 19 months left on her term. (LAT)

Colombia Drug Traffic: (148)
President Alfonso Lopez accuses the USA of turning Colombia into a drug smugglers' den and claims that not since the opium wars between Britain and China in the last century has Western "greed" been responsible for so much corruption. In a communique, Lopez states that the USA government is unable to "prevent its criminals from turning our fatherland into their field of action." Columbia is a principal staging point for the flow of cocaine from Bolivia, Paraguay and Brazil to the USA.

USA-USSR Grain Deal: (149)
Soviet-American negotiations under way in Moscow on a possible long-term grain purchase deal focus attention on the most tangible and obvious failure of Soviet communism - it still can't grow enough grain to feed its people. All signs indicate that the Russians are seriously interested in an agreement that will commit them to buying USA grain regularly rather than erratically, and this interest must be taken as Soviet acknowledgement that for years to come it will remain an importer of grain. The Soviet agricultural failure is blamed on nature - the extreme climate variations and short growing season - and the low productivity of the Russian farmer.

China Foreign Policy Shift: (150)
China makes a major shift in foreign policy by giving implicit approval to dialogue between black Africa and white southern Africa. Such dialogue, it explains, should be used by black African leaders as a weapon for revolutionary African cause. Previously, China has condemned dialogue as one of the faces of "reactionary double tactics" followed by white leaders.

China Aid to Cambodia: (151)
China will lend Cambodia $1 billion to help repair the ravages of war, according to a Japanese report from Peking. Quoting informed sources in the Chinese capital, the business paper NIHON KEIZAI states that the loan will be interest-free and the loan will be repayable in five or six years.

USA Citizens in South Vietnam: (152)
South Vietnam denies it would ever use Americans left behind in the country as hostages to extract political concessions from the USA. USA State Department spokesman Robert Anderson says the USA has no reason to believe South Vietnam will adopt such a policy, but that it will take "an extremely dim view" if it does. South Vietnam stresses the protection of "all foreigners in South Vietnam who make an honest living and respect the independence and sovereignty of Vietnam."

September 15, 1975

Lebanon Civil Violence: (153)
Sectarian warfare between Moslems and Christians spreads to the streets of Beirut suburbs, and police report six persons killed and more than 25 wounded in fierce mortar and machine-gun battles. Security forces try to intervene in the fighting, but it rages on unabated in three eastern suburbs. Premier Karami announces that left-wing leaders agree to cancel a general strike called to protect the intervention of the army fighting in the north. (LAT);

Middle East Conflict: (154)
Israel begins observing Yom Kippur, the holiest day in the Jewish year, with its troops and border police on alert along the frontiers and throughout the country to repel any Arab guerrilla attacks. Many of Israel's 100,000 civilian guards are on duty outside synagogues protecting worshippers on the solemn day of Atonement. (LAT);

USA Arm Sale to Turkey: (155)
USA Secretary of State Kissinger, trying to win congressional support for a controversial deal to sell missiles to Jordan, offers new assurances that the weapons will not be used offensively against Israel. Congressional aides report that Kissinger telephones several Senators to give his personal assurance that the 14 Hawk missile batteries the Administration wants to sell King Hussein would only be used to defend Jordan. (LAT);

Spain Terrorism: (156)
Suspected leftist guerrillas kill a policeman in Barcelona in a new out-break of political violence. He is the 10th policeman killed in Spain this year and the first since the government enacted a law making the death penalty mandatory in the murder of policemen. (LAT);

Ethiopia Guerrilla Aggression Towards the USA: (157)
Ethiopia security forces search Eritrea province for two Americans and six Ethiopians abducted by raiders who attacked a USA Naval station near Asmara. The Ethiopian government says that nine Ethiopian civilians have been killed and 23 injured in the raid, believed to have been carried out by rebels seeking Eritrean independence. (LAT);

Amnesty International Report: (158)
The Soviet Union, South Africa, Spain and Uganda are violating human rights, torturing and executing political prisoners "on a disturbing scale," Amnesty International charges. The London-based organization dedicated to the release of all political prisoners in the world, claims in its annual report that 107 countries violate human rights to some extent, including the USA. The organization calls on all governments to abolish capital punishment. (LAT);

ANNEX D: INTERNATIONAL COMMITMENT STUDY

Annex D, that follows, contains an example of the International Commitment file. The subfile provided lists United States international military commitments to 136 nations for the year 1966. The scores shown are average standard-scores derived from a six variable index. A conceptual framework and operational definition for the commitment measurement have already been provided (Martin, January 1975 and June 1975). Similar files will be included in the final analysis for seven actor nations—United States, United Kingdom, France, West Germany, Japan, Soviet Union, and China—and for seven annual time periods—1968 through 1974.
