The objective of this research note is to identify non-technical leadership job dimensions and the assorted competencies needed for commissioned and non-commissioned officers. In order to meet this objective, the note develops a comprehensive job analysis data base for the description of Army leadership-related job tasks. The leadership knowledge, skills, abilities, and other characteristics (KSAOs) associated with successful performance were determined in order to develop a comprehensive model of generic job dimensions and skill requirements.

Commissioned Army officers receive formal leadership training from various schools in the Army educational system as they advance in grade and experience. In fact, leadership training often begins prior to commissioning, either at West Point, Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC), or in Officer Candidate School (OCS). Leadership courses are included in the curricula of the Officer Basic Course (OBC) attended soon after commissioning. Located at branch schools, OBC is designed to prepare officers to serve in the grade of lieutenant and to fill company grade positions. The Officer Advanced Course (OAC) is attended after three and one-half to six years of commissioned service. This course is also taught at branch schools and is designed to prepare an officer to serve in staff positions up to division level and to command a company size unit. The Combined Arms and Services Staff School (CAS$^3$) course will soon be attended by all officers who have seven to nine years of commissioned service. It is taught through a combination of correspondence courses and resident instruction at the school located at Ft. Leavenworth, Kansas. CAS$^3$ is designed to prepare all officers to serve on division and corps level staffs. The Command and General Staff College (CGSC) course is for selected officers with between 11 and 15 years of commissioned service. It is designed to prepare officers to command battalions and to serve on brigade, division, and corps staffs. Finally, the Senior Service College (SSC) course is offered at either the Army War College (AWC), or its equivalent, to selected officers who have served between 17 and 22 years. It is designed to prepare the officer to fill senior staff positions in both the Army and the National Defense establishment.

Noncommissioned officers are also afforded leadership training throughout their careers. Noncommissioned officers are provided an opportunity to attend the Primary Noncommissioned Officer Course (PNOC - combat arms) or the Primary Technical Course (PTC - other than combat arms) and the Basic Noncommissioned Officer Course (BNOC - combat arms) or the Basic Technical Course (BTC - other than combat arms). Enlisted persons in grades E4 and E5 attend the non-MOS specific PNOC course, a field-oriented course built around basic soldier skills and tasks. It is designed to develop leadership abilities required by small units in various field situations. Noncommissioned officers in grades E5 and E6 (promotable) may attend the BNOC, which is designed to develop skill-level-3 weapons systems and equipment experts who can train subordinates to maintain, operate, and employ weapons and equipment. Noncommissioned officers in grades E6 and E6 (promotable) in all MOSs are eligible to attend the Advanced Noncommissioned Officer Course (ANOC) designed to develop the supervisory skills and knowledge needed to perform the duties of platoon sergeant or to assume comparable responsibilities. The Senior Noncommissioned Officer Course (SNOC) is open to first sergeant designees (E7s) and to first sergeants (E8s) who have been in their job for less than one year, and provides training in the most critical tasks of the first sergeant position. Finally, the Sergeants Major Academy trains E8s and E9s for positions of highest noncommissioned officer responsibility throughout the Army and Defense establishment.

In recent years, the Army has recognized the need to coordinate leadership training, both for commissioned and noncommissioned officers; the Center for Army Leadership has been given this responsibility. The effort includes identification of the specific leadership skills and competencies required at each of the various grade levels from sergeant through colonel. While it is postulated that there is a set of "generic skills" required for effective leader performance, which remain the same or are at least similar from level to level, the profile of generic skills (i.e., which skills are most critical) for the different levels may not be identical. As the profile changes among grade levels, the training that individuals receive for their roles at higher grade levels could be based on these identified needs. This would provide progressive development in leadership skills, with each course and/or assignment serving as a foundation for the requirements of the next level. Such training could be expected to provide minimum repetition and maximum job-level specificity.
Variations in skill requirements from level to level are not only a result of differing magnitudes of resources available, but also of qualitative changes in the problem solving processes required at the various levels. It should be possible to develop a taxonomy for Army leader development by examining the progression of duties and problem solving processes required from grade level to grade level in terms not only of the specific skills needed by incumbents, but also in terms of the generic leadership skills and their contribution to more general problem-solving processes. Thus, the major objective of this research was to identify the non-technical leadership job functions and associated competencies needed at different organizational levels.

Research on Job Dimensions and Competency Requirements

A substantial amount of work has already been performed at company grade levels for both commissioned officers (officers) and noncommissioned officers (NCOs) relative to non-technical leadership job functions and associated competencies. The present research effort attempted to extend this work to more senior officer levels and to encompass NCOs within a total model that can serve as the basis for development of leader assessment and training packages and as a guide to management of a total leader development system. In order to meet these objectives, the present research sought to accomplish the following:

- Develop a comprehensive job analysis data base for selected duties and positions, and develop more general functional leadership job performance dimensions (JPDs).
- Determine empirically the leadership knowledges, skills, abilities and other characteristics (KSAOs) associated with successful performance of the previously determined job dimensions.
- Develop a comprehensive leader development model that specifies generic job dimensions and competencies or generic skill requirements relevant to officer and NCO positions at specified levels, and compare the characteristics of these job dimensions and competencies within and between duty positions/grade levels.
The following duty positions were included in the research:

- Department of the Army Staff Officer (06, 05)
- Brigade Commander (06)
- Battalion Commander Division Staff Officer (05, 04)
- Brigade Staff Officer (04, 03)
- Company Commander (03)
- Battalion Staff Officer (04, 03, 02)
- Platoon Leader (01, 02)
- First Sergeant (E8)
- Master Sergeant (E8)
- Platoon Sergeant (E7)
- Sergeant First Class (E7)
- Squad Leader (E6)
- Staff Sergeant (E6)
- Fire Team Leader (E5)
- Sergeant (E5)

Overview of the Remediation Effort

The Statement of Work for Contract MDA-903-83-C-0062 specifies that job analysis research is required for jobs at the more senior levels for commissioned officers and that "The (existing) data for noncommissioned officers will prove adequate for the present purpose." It was assumed that job analysis work underway in U.S. Army, Europe (USAREUR) and the Continental United States (CONUS) covering NCO positions would provide the necessary data base for identifying the competencies or generic skills associated with NCO functions. However, the work being done in USAREUR and CONUS on NCO job functions was not completed in time for utilization in this project. Therefore, it was necessary to find other sources of task data for NCOs and to verify the task lists for both officers and NCOs to determine the adequacy of the data base before the development of job performance dimensions (JPDs) commenced. The current project was concerned only with common, non-technical leadership tasks and hence common, non-technical leadership JPDs. By definition, a JPD is a cluster of work-related tasks which together describe an aspect, portion, or dimension of a job. The major purpose of the task lists was to provide a rational basis for development of the JPDs. This report will describe the sources of job analysis data and the procedures used to revise, update, clarify, and verify this data for use as the basis for developing JPDs.
PROCEDURES

Literature Search

Extensive prior research provided a wealth of job task data for grades E5 through E8 and O1 through O6. Hebein, Kaplan, Miller, Olmstead, and Sharon (1984) identified leadership tasks, skills, and functions performed by NCOs in USAREUR. The Soldier Support Center-National Capital Region maintains lists of tasks (Comprehensive Occupational Data Analysis Programs (CODAP), 1981, 1982) performed by all skill levels. While these lists are not limited either to tasks involving leadership or to those performed only by NCOs, they do include both of these categories. Army Field Manual No. 22-600-20, The Noncommissioned Officer Guide (1980), discusses the primary duties or tasks of the NCO.

Batia and Kaplan (1981) extrapolated a list of NCO non-MOS specific leadership tasks for platoon sergeants, section leaders and squad leaders from a list of similar tasks for first sergeants developed by the U.S. Army Sergeants Major Academy. It was that list which ultimately provided the core of NCO leadership tasks utilized in this research. The list was expanded to include E5 tasks as well as tasks for all NCO grades from the other sources described above. Details of this expansion will be discussed in a later section of this report.

Sources for leadership tasks performed by officers were even more plentiful than were those for NCOs. Buchanan, Layton, and Schaefer (1978) performed a management study at the company level in which they listed the management or leadership duties performed by officers assigned to companies. Stewart, Christie, and Jacobs (1976) identified the leadership tasks performed by company commanders in a USAREUR research project. HumRRO Division #4 reported on a study performed in 1970 to identify the knowledges and skills (many of which were tasks) needed by Operations and training and by Logistics Staff Officers to successfully carry out their duties. Tasks performed by all principal staff officers at the division, brigade, and battalion level were reported by Baker (1970). In order to design a curriculum for the new Combined Arms and Services Staff School, the new faculty conducted a survey to learn which tasks performed by majors serving in staff positions; this list was published in 1982. Korotkin, Hadley, Davis, and Marsh (1976) reported on a set of duty modules with supporting tasks for five branches for officers in grades O1 through O6. The tasks, which were verified and listed in a task data bank, were not limited to those pertaining to leadership but were those common across branches for various duty positions.

The Review of Education and Training for Officers (RETO) performed in 1978 expanded the earlier work of Korotkin et al. to widen the list of duty modules to include all officer duty positions. As a result of the RETO study, the recommendation to continue the development of duty modules until all branches and all officer duty positions were included was modified and implemented to the extent that the Soldier Support Center-National Capital Region, which already had the mission of maintaining a CODAP task data bank for enlisted persons, was given the additional mission to create a CODAP task data bank for all officer positions. While not yet complete, these CODAP task lists for officers in grades O1 through O6 were made available for this research. The Korotkin et al. task data bank became the vehicle for constructing a leadership task list for officers.

Development of Survey Instruments

Officer task instruments. A task list survey instrument for officers was developed as follows:

The 1,648 tasks contained in the 161 officer duty modules compiled for ARI in earlier research (Hadley, 1979) were scrutinized by a subject matter expert (SME) to extract all tasks involving leadership with some commonality across branches, but not technical in nature. The first tentative list to be verified by incumbents contained 285 leadership tasks selected from the ARI duty modules.

The 104 duty modules developed by the RETO study group were next examined by the SME to extract additional common, non-technical leadership tasks that did not duplicate tasks already compiled from the ARI "duty module" task data bank. Seventeen new tasks were added to the tentative list as a result of this step.
Finally, the CODAP task lists of common tasks for field grade and company grade officers were examined by the SME to find additional common, non-technical leadership tasks not already found in the other sources for inclusion in the tentative comprehensive task list. Sixteen tasks for company grade officers and 72 tasks for field grade officers were added to the tentative list of leadership tasks.

Three members of the research staff, including the SME, reviewed this tentative list of 390 tasks to eliminate redundancies and combining tasks, where appropriate, to achieve a common level of specificity. The panel was able to reduce the number of leadership tasks to 183, which were divided into 112 tasks thought to be common across officer grade levels, 66 tasks thought to be unique to field grade officers, and five tasks thought to be unique to company grade officers.

Three separate survey instruments for officers were prepared. The first contained only the 66 tasks thought to pertain exclusively to field grade officers, the second contained the five tasks thought to pertain only to company grade officers, and the third instrument listed those 112 tasks thought to apply to all officer grade levels. Instructions were prepared for the moderator who was to discuss these tentative lists with SMEs in the field, together with an outline of the procedures to be followed by panelists and an explanation with examples of what is meant by a leadership-related task.

NCO task instruments. Concurrent with the development of the task list and survey instrument for officers by the contractor, ARI was developing a tentative list of common, non-technical, leadership-related tasks for NCOs in grades E5 through E7. Two associates of the COTR and an SME provided by the contractor analyzed the results of a test of methodologies conducted at Ft. Devens, Massachusetts, and combined, reworded, added and eliminated leadership tasks which had been extracted from the CODAP lists of common tasks for grades E5, E6, and E7, retaining separate lists by grade levels. The resultant tasks were typed on individual cards, and a set of six card stacks were prepared, one for each grade level. The E5 card stack contained 284 tasks, the E6 stack 188 tasks, and the E7 stack 180 tasks. Instructions were prepared for the staff member who was to collect data and a separate set of instructions was prepared for each incumbent who was to participate as a panel member in the field verification.

Data Collection

Officer task data from Ft. Lewis, Washington. The tentative lists of common, non-technical leadership related tasks for officers were addressed by six panels of incumbents at Ft. Lewis, Washington. The composition of the six panels is shown in Table 1.

Following an explanation of the purpose of convening the panel by a member of the research team, each panelist briefly outlined his/her principal duties. A second member of the research team recorded these duties. Panelists were told that following a detailed examination of the task list, the list of duties presented orally by them would be examined to determine whether all facets of the job were covered by the written task list in front of them.

The panel then discussed each of the 183 tasks on the three task lists to determine its applicability, commonality, and correct wording. Redundancies were noted, and closely related tasks were combined where appropriate. Following this discussion of the task lists, the notes taken during each panelist's outline of the duties associated with his/her position were read and each panelist was asked whether the task lists adequately covered the non-technical, leadership-related parts of the job. As a result of these discussions, 38 tasks were deleted from the list of tasks common across grade levels; one task was moved from the unique-to-field-grade list to the unique-to-company-grade list; five tasks were moved from the common-across-grade-levels list to the unique-to-company-grade list, 22 tasks were added to the common task list based on the recommendations of panelists; and 11 tasks were reworded or combined into others. The task list emerging from these discussions contained 156 tasks for officers in grades 0-1 through 0-6. The research staff retained a code that would identify the origin of each task (from a list unique to certain officer grades or common across grades) but the former three lists were combined into a single task list following the visit to Ft. Lewis.

NCO task data from Ft. Lewis, Washington. The stacks of task cards for NCOs were addressed by six panels of NCOs at Ft. Lewis, Washington, as shown in Table 2.

One panel of E8 incumbents and one panel of E7 incumbents sorted the stacks of task cards applicable to each grade level, E5 through E7, according to the criteria of importance, frequency, and level of difficulty, with a five-point rating scale for each criterion and recorded their results on an answer sheet provided.

Analysis of the NCO data collected at Ft. Lewis failed to reveal any selection pattern among panelists. This result can be attributed partly to the composition of the review panels, which were predominately maintenance, finance, military police and medicine. In addition, the CODAP common tasks from which the tasks were extracted tended to be more technical and more specific than the common leadership tasks developed for USASMA. A decision was made to develop a new set of task lists for NCOs based on the USASMA lists already addressed by three successive panels of incumbents and SMEs, and at about the same status relative to verification as the officer task lists following the visit to Ft. Lewis.

The USASMA task lists had been developed initially for tasks performed by first sergeants. Then tasks performed by platoon sergeants, section sergeants, and squad leaders had been extrapolated by a SME and the lists subjected to scrutiny by a series of SMEs. A military expert on the contractor's research staff screened the tasks on the CODAP printouts for each NCO grade, and compared the list with the USASMA list for that same grade. Any tasks on the CODAP printout but not on the USASMA task lists, and which appeared to have merit, were added to the USASMA lists. The USASMA task list for squad leaders (E6) was expanded to include tasks for assistant squad leaders (E5). Any tasks picked up in this manner were examined to see whether an appropriate task should be extrapolated for other NCO levels. The reverse process was used develop the USASMA task lists: a first sergeant's, platoon sergeant's and section sergeant's tasks might be extrapolated from a squad leader's task picked up from the CODAP task list. The same result might occur from picking up a section sergeant's or platoon sergeant's task from the CODAP task list. Simultaneously, the SME attempted to eliminate redundancy, achieve similar specificity of statement, and combine closely related tasks. As a result of this process additions/deletions were made in the USASMA task lists (Table 3).

Officer task data from Ft. Polk, Louisiana. Fifty-nine officers stationed at Ft. Polk addressed the non-technical leadership-related task list for officers. The characterization of the officer sample is shown in Table 4.

Respondents were given task lists reflecting the results of the Ft. Lewis panel discussions, containing 156 leadership-related tasks. They were requested to read through the list of tasks, mark all tasks applicable to their current duty position, indicate the percentage of their non-technical leadership tasks covered by the list, and list any tasks that should be added.

Table 5 reflects the coverage of leadership tasks afforded by the officer task list. Respondents recommended that 38 tasks be added to the consolidated list of officer leadership tasks.

NCO task data from Ft. Polk, Louisiana. As shown in Table 6, 46 NCOs completed questionnaires listing the non-MOS specific leader tasks performed by NCOs in grades E5 through E8.

Like the officers, NCOs were assembled in a theater. Unlike the officers, they were given lists containing only those tasks from the amended USASMA lists applying to their own grade; they were not given consolidated lists of tasks for all NCO grades. They were, however, given an additional list of those tasks applicable to first sergeants (E8) since the task lists for E7s, E6s, and E5s rated those tasks as "Not Applicable" in many cases to their grade. Respondents read through the list of tasks, marking all tasks applicable to their current position, indicating the percentage of their non-MOS specific leadership tasks covered by the list, and listing any tasks that should be added. In addition, E7, E6, and E5 respondents were instructed to turn to the first sergeant's task list each time the term "Not Applicable" appeared beside a task number on their list. They were to read the first sergeant's task bearing the same number, to see if they agreed that the task did not apply to them. If they agreed, they did nothing. If they did not agree, they were to circle that task number on their own task list.

Table 7 reflects the NCO evaluation of degree of coverage of non-MOS-specific leadership tasks afforded by the amended USASMA task list for various grade levels. Only one NCO listed any additional tasks; he suggested five tasks be added to the list to make it more comprehensive.

Data Analysis

Officer task data. An analysis was made of the responses by officers to the survey conducted at Ft. Polk. At least four officers responded positively to each of the 156 tasks on the officer task list. The 22 tasks receiving a relatively small positive response were examined individually to determine the reason for the small participation by incumbents. All 22 tasks were somewhat esoteric (e.g., #7, "Perform appellate functions for Article 15 appeals"). but were important enough for those who do perform the task to warrant their retention on the list. No tasks were deleted as a result of the analysis. However, 19 tasks labeled "field grade only" were changed to the "common" category, two tasks were changed from "field grade only" to "company grade only," and five tasks in the "company grade only" category were moved into the "common" category.

NCO task data. The survey instruments completed by NCO incumbents were analyzed following the collection effort at Ft. Polk. If no more than one respondent in a grade level indicated that a task was applicable to his/her position, the task was deleted from the list for that grade. If two or more respondents in a grade level indicated that a task on their own task list or on the first sergeant’s task list was performed by them, the task was retained or added for that grade. As a result of this procedure, no tasks were added or deleted from the E8 task list; 17 tasks were added and no tasks were deleted from the E7 list; 15 tasks were added and 35 tasks were deleted from the E6 task list; and 30 tasks were added and two were deleted from the E5 list.

RESULTS

Following the field verification and analysis of the lists of common, non-technical, leadership tasks for officers and of non-MOS-specific leader tasks for NCOs, a panel of experts was convened to consider the additional tasks recommended by incumbents for inclusion in the tasks lists and further refine the task lists based on their own judgment. The panel was composed of six retired Army colonels--four from combat arms, one from combat support, and one from combat service support--and two psychologists on the research team.

Officer Task Data

Panelists reviewed each task on the consolidated list for officers. They divided some tasks into two or more tasks combined some into a single task by rewording, eliminated some tasks because of redundancy, and added 20 tasks recommended by incumbents who had been surveyed at Ft. Polk. The final leadership task list for officers containing 163 separate tasks is presented in Appendix A.

NCO Task Data

The task lists for NCOs remained separate through field verification: one each for E8s, E7s, E6s, and E5s, to preserve compatibility with the USASMA list from which they were derived. Prior to being addressed by the SME panel, the four separate task lists were combined into a single list. The SME panel that had already examined the task list for officers next addressed the combined list of NCO tasks. Of the 304 tasks on the USASMA list, 88 were deleted by rewording and combining into other similar or related tasks. One task was added by the SME panel from the list of five recommendations of an incumbent, resulting in a total of 217 tasks on the final task list presented in Appendix B.
CONCLUSIONS

Although the population was relatively small for both officers and NCOs, the analysis of the data collected tended to confirm the validity of the task lists. This confirmation was weakest for first lieutenants in staff positions and second lieutenants in the position of platoon leader for officers, and for master sergeants and sergeants (E5) in staff positions and Platoon Sergeants, Section Sergeants and Squad Leaders in command support positions for NCOs.

At least some of the low incumbent ratings were due to misinterpretation of the question: "What percentage of your non-technical leadership tasks are covered by this list?" At least three respondents are known to have added the number of tasks which they had circled on the list and divided by the total number of tasks on the list. It is assumed that other respondents interpreted the question in a similar fashion. It can also be assumed that due to inexperience, second lieutenants and sergeants (E5) had greater difficulty distinguishing between leadership and non-leadership related tasks they perform. The sources of the task lists (ARI "Duty Modules," RETO "Duty Modules," CODAP task lists (over 90% complete for company grade officers), the USASMA list of non-MOS specific leader tasks for NCOs compiled in 1981, and the CODAP task data bank which has been in use by the Army for over ten years and is periodically updated) augmented by suggested additions from survey participants and scrutinized by a panel of experts, would hold up on their own even without the field verification which, overall, confirmed their validity.
