FOREWORD

Army studies are an important means of developing new opportunities and solving problems. This edition of The Army Study Program is a listing of study efforts programed for Fiscal Year 1975. The book serves as a management tool by providing visibility to programed studies, enabling decisionmakers to insure that study resources are used efficiently and appropriately.

Those charged with managing Army studies must continue to insure that the limited money and manpower available for this purpose remain directed towards studies which address real problems and have a reasonable chance to produce timely and usable results. By keeping the idea of applicability foremost, Army studies will provide the Army the best possible return from its efforts.

STUDY PLANNING GUIDANCE

Annually, the Secretary of the Army and the Chief of Staff issue Study Planning Guidance to the Army study community. This guidance identifies problem areas in which study is needed to assist in decisions to be made by the CSA, or higher authority, during the following two years.

These study areas are referred to as Priority Areas of Concern.

Study Planning Guidance gives direction to the total Army study program and is a basis for establishing priorities among study proposals. (Para 2-2, AR 5-5)

This chapter contains extracts from the Study Planning Guidance issued on 13 February 1974, and a table presenting the applicability of the FY 75 study program to the Priority Areas of Concern.

STUDY PLANNING GUIDANCE

1. Purpose. This constitutes planning guidance for FY 75 study proposals. The priority areas of concern, listed in paragraph 5, are areas wherein substantial change in program or policies is probably desirable, where the matter is of sufficient substance to require attention and eventually decision by CSA or SA, and where current information indicates that a concentrated study effort would provide substantial progress toward removing uncertainties and providing a basis for decision. Identification of such priority areas does not imply priority over on-going studies supporting other areas of responsibility and does not imply lack of interest or lack of support for other study requirements.

2. General. The FY 75 study program will continue to emphasize further development and efficient use of in-house study capabilities as the preferred alternative to contract support, which must be requested only to capitalize on skills not available within the Army or when the opinion of an outside organization is essential. Funds approved for contract studies will continue to decrease as in-house capabilities achieve their full potential.

3. Middle East War. In developing new study programs, and in implementing on-going efforts, emphasis will be placed on exploiting the knowledge and experience resulting from the 1973 Middle East War.

4. ...

5. Priority Areas of Concern. The study effort of the Army will emphasize the following areas:

a. Provide the quantity and quality of people needed in the Active and Reserve Forces.

b. Devise and test major improvements to the enlisted MOS system.

c. Determine the role of the Army in implementation of security assistance programs.

d. Examine alternate personnel and equipment replacement systems for a NATO contingency.

e. Improve the readiness of Active and Reserve Component forces.

f. Determine requirements for tactical nuclear forces and weapons and doctrine required by such forces.

- g. Improve anti-tank capabilities.
- h. Refine tactical air defense and counter-air defense concepts of operation and requirements.
- i. Improve and simplify DSU level logistics operations.
- j. Validate current combat consumption rates.
- k. Determine the adjustments required in view of future energy and resource shortages.
- l. Improve Electronic Warfare concepts and capabilities.
- m. Improve mid and long range planning and forecasting methods.
- n. Refine the weapons system acquisition process.
- o. Improve command and installation management of total resources.

AGENCY AND COMMAND STUDY PROGRAMS

This chapter contains alphabetical lists by sponsoring agency or command of studies programed to be conducted in FY 1975. Asterisks denote Directed Studies, a designation assigned to a limited number of carefully selected studies which have a high probability of requiring Chief of Staff or higher level decisions prior to the implementation of recommendations resulting from the study (App A, AR 5-5.)

The lists are current as of 1 July 1974. However, additions and deletions may occur at any time.

Information on the current status of any of the studies can be obtained from the Study Coordinator of the sponsoring agency or command. A list of these individuals is at page 4-1.
