Final Technical Report
ONR Award N00014-14-1-0320
“2014-2016 Ship Operations, Maintenance, Repair and Upgrade for the R/V KILO MOANA”
March 2014 – March 2017

Alexander Shor, Principal Investigator
University of Hawaii

University of Hawaii operates Research Vessel (R/V) Kilo Moana (AGOR 26), a SWATH vessel owned by the federal government and operated under Charter Party agreement N00014-13-L-0148 with the Office of Naval Research. The present award, N00014-14-1-0320 provided funds to operate, maintain and upgrade Kilo Moana during the 2014-2017 period. Specific accomplishments carried out during this 3-year period under the initial award and the subsequent seven increments included:

1. Planning and installation of a replacement for the vessel’s computerized control system. The control system on R/V Kilo Moana that was installed during construction of the ship (2001-2002) had pervasive and unpredictable problems that caused intermittent blackouts and propulsion failures, and necessitated progressive deactivation of the central control system’s automated features by ship’s engineers. Following many efforts to correct specific issues, a proposal was submitted to ONR and we were encouraged to pursue replacing the original system beginning in 2014. This proposal provided the support for that purpose. The design was completed in 2014-15, and the installation took place during two periods, one in early 2016, and the final work in early 2017. The project was successfully completed, and Kilo Moana has returned to normal operations.
2. Various repairs were supported under this funding, including work on the ship’s tail shaft and rudders, and replacement and repair of electronics in the original vessel control system to ensure continued operational status while the new control system was being designed.
3. Vessel operations in support of Navy-funded research missions were carried out as part of the research mission of the vessel. Operating costs are paid by the federal or state agency that funds the research, and during the period of this award most of the research carried out on Kilo Moana was funded by the National Science Foundation, which paid for that time through a separate cooperative agreement. Those projects funded by ONR for which ship operations were paid under this award were principally for researchers at Johns Hopkins University, involving support from Code 32 (ASW), and coordinated with other Navy assets from Pearl Harbor.

University of Hawaii continues to operate R/V Kilo Moana under successor award N00014-17-1-2267, also to PI Alexander Shor, received in April, 2017.
