EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

In the Spring of 1975 the fall of the Governments of Vietnam and Cambodia was a catastrophe of major proportions which was accompanied by the exodus of refugees escaping the Communist take-over of Indochina. During the period from 1 April to 28 April 1975, Operation BABYLIFT - an effort undertaken by international adoption agencies and under the sponsorship of the Department of State - evacuated approximately twenty-seven hundred Vietnamese and Cambodian children. Some eighteen hundred of the children who entered the United States were provided temporary shelter and medical care by the US Army at the Presidio of San Francisco, California; Fort Lewis, Washington; and Fort Benning, Georgia. Those children were among the first wave of new arrivals in what would be an evacuation of more than one hundred and thirty thousand men, women, and children. The Indochinese refugee program initiated by President Ford and administered by the Interagency Task Force for Indochina (IATF) addressed the needs of receiving and resettling these evacuees. This program, which allowed the refugees to be admitted into the United States under the parole authority of the Attorney General, was funded by a $405 million Congressional appropriation under Public Law 94-23.

To coordinate and manage the refugee program at national level, President Ford created IATF on 18 April 1975 under the direction of the Department of State and chaired by Ambassador L. Dean Brown and later under the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare with Mrs. Julia V.

Taft serving as the Director. The Department of Defense, functioning as a member of IATF, was tasked to provide transportation, operate refugee reception centers in the Pacific and the United States, and assist civilian agencies in the resettlement program as required. In the execution of its mission, DOD turned to the Military Services to implement the support mission for this program. In the Pacific, CINCPAC was charged with operating refugee reception and staging areas - Operation NEW LIFE. The role of the Army began on Guam with the operation of the Orote Point reception center under CINCPAC. Army support for Guam was drawn from Hawaii, Korea, Japan, and CONUS. US Army CINCPAC Support Group coordinated Army personnel and logistical support for Operation NEW LIFE. Concurrently, the Department of Defense, acting through JCS, commenced military support of Operation NEW ARRIVALS by tasking the Services to operate refugee reception centers in CONUS: the Army at Fort Chaffee, Arkansas; the Marine Corps at Camp Pendleton, California; and the Air Force at Eglin Air Force Base, Florida. Shortly thereafter, the refugee population on Guam reached capacity and as facilities became overloaded in the wake of the approaching typhoon season, the decision was made that the Army should open a fourth CONUS refugee reception center located at Fort Indiantown Gap, Pennsylvania.

Support to the Indochinese refugee program by Headquarters, Department of the Army, was under the staff management of the Director of Operations, Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations and Plans. Commander, US Army Forces Command (FORSCOM), was the primary operator in the field with responsibility for the two Army refugee reception centers in CONUS. Both of the Army centers were staffed by a task force with military and civilian components. The military was responsible for billeting, messing, medical support, and the security of the refugees, while the civilian agencies managed processing and resettlement.

Of the more than one hundred and thirty thousand refugees who passed through the reception facilities on Guam, the Army-run Orote Point center processed most of them during the period 23 April to 24 June 1975. In CONUS, Fort Chaffee received and processed over fifty thousand refugees during its operation from 2 May through 20 December 1975 while over twenty-two thousand refugees were received and processed at Fort Indian-town Gap from 28 May through 15 December 1975.

In summary, more than eight thousand members of the Total Army participated in Operations NEW LIFE/NEW ARRIVALS, supporting the reception and resettlement of fifty-five percent of the refugees who entered the United States after caring for more than one hundred and twelve thousand evacuees on Guam. The total incremental costs for Army refugee support were approximately $61.9 million; full reimbursement for this amount was received from IATF. The Army mission in these operations was performed in a highly professional and compassionate manner which was acknowledged by all levels of the US Government. This extensive role in the Indochinese refugee program constituted a unique yet highly challenging chapter in US Army history.

PART I - THE US ARMY ROLE IN OPERATIONS NEW LIFE/NEW ARRIVALS

A. Introduction

A. INTRODUCTION: THE GENERAL SITUATION

The political and military difficulties which beset the Governments of the Republic of Vietnam and the Khmer Republic during the first few months of 1975 were the cause of grave concern to those in the United States who had been charged with the planning and execution of sustained support to those two nations. Stemming from this pervading anxiousness about the stability of our allies in Indochina, the President dispatched the Chief of Staff of the US Army, General Fred C. Weyand, on a mission to Vietnam in the latter part of March in order to assess the situation. Upon his return, General Weyand reported to the President and, later, testified extensively before both Houses of Congress, warning that events in the immediate future could dictate the complete reversal of the nature of the US commitment to Vietnam and Cambodia. In essence, the balance of US support might have to be shifted radically from military assistance and economic aid to humanitarian relief and the support of the evacuation of a significant segment of the local population.

As reports and descriptions of the deteriorating state of affairs in Indochina continued to filter out of that beleaguered region, they began to trigger thoughts in the minds of many observers that there was a very real possibility of a refugee problem of undetermined dimensions: an exodus dependent on the ultimate outcome of the struggle and the suddenness of its conclusion. Sensitized by a chain of extremely dramatic and visible events -- particularly the fall of Ban Me Thout, the loss of the key province of Darlac, and the disarray and tragedy of the evacuation of Danang, all of which happened within a few weeks -- the likely consequences of a military defeat and a political capitulation for the Republic of Vietnam presented a pressing moral question and an obligation for the United States in regard to the evacuation of those Vietnamese who had been closely associated with our efforts in Indochina. The awareness of earlier movements of Vietnamese from areas threatened by Communist control in 1945 and 1954, the latter involving almost one million people, as well as the periodic chaos of refugee relocation in Indochina throughout the course of military operations over two decades, provided the vivid historical precedents from which perspective could be drawn on the implications posed by an evacuation. Already by the early part of April, the Commander in Chief, Pacific (CINCPAC), recognizing the magnitude of the incountry flight of refugees by sea, directed the establishment in Saigon of the Refugee Evacuation Center under the auspices of the Defense Attache Office (DAO) to assist in the management of US support in the southward flow of refugees from the northern and central coastal provinces. Later, it was this Refugee Evacuation Center which would provide the cadre for the operational staff that planned and coordinated the evacuation of tens of thousands of US, Vietnamese, and third country nationals from Saigon to safe havens in the Pacific. As these things were transpiring, Operation BABYLIFT -- the effort managed by private voluntary agencies, which was supported by the Agency for International Development (AID), designed to evacuate Vietnamese and Cambodian orphans to the United States and other countries where their continued care and safety could be guaranteed -- was in full swing with the Army and the other Services lending support. By the time Operation BABYLIFT was completed, just prior to the fall of Saigon, some twenty-seven hundred infants and children had been flown to various points of refuge in the United States or cared for while en route to destinations abroad.

Recognition of the fact that the orphan airlift could just be the first phase of a general evacuation effort, US Government officials within the Department of State and Defense were occupied with the task of preparing contingency plans. On 12 April Operation EAGLE PULL was executed at the direction of National Command Authority; this operation required the evacuation of the US Mission staff from Phnom Penh, Cambodia. Concurrently, a large number of people from Vietnam and Cambodia had taken to the sea in order to escape by whatever means at their disposal. Sampans, fishing boats, inland watercraft, and seagoing vessels -- literally anything afloat -- were pressed into service by those fleeing from the fear of an imminent "bloodbath" when the Communists took over. US Navy ships on station off the coast of Vietnam and Cambodia began the task of picking up refugees and escorting them to safe havens, which initially meant US installations in the Philippines.

On 18 April President Ford appointed Ambassador L. Dean Brown as his Special Representative for Indochinese Refugees and as the Director of of the Interagency Task Force for Indochina (IATF) in order to coordinate all US Government activities concerned with the evacuation from Southeast Asia, including those of the Military Departments and Services. Ambassador Brown immediately established a small staff of officers from various Federal agencies who began at once to operate on a twenty-four hour basis from the Operations Center of the Department of State. A larger body was also assembled from senior officials of the Departments of State; Defense; Justice; Health, Education, and Welfare; Transportation; Treasury; Labor; Interior; and Housing and Urban Development, plus representatives of the US Agency for International Development; US Information Agency; Central Intelligence Agency; Office of Management and Budget; and Immigration and Naturalization Service; which met daily to plan, execute, and manage the short- and long-range interests of the refugee program. IATF was given the mandate to coordinate at the national level the myriad of actions and programs undertaken by this ad hoc group of US Government agencies charged with the various tasks required to support Operations NEW LIFE/NEW ARRIVALS in the Pacific and in the continental United States: the reception and processing of evacuees from Indochina and subsequent actions taken to relocate and resettle them. Ambassador Brown was replaced on 27 May 1975 by Mrs. Julia V. Taft of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare who served as the Director, IATF, until its termination on 31 December 1975.

At the time that the organizational framework required to manage and support the refugee effort was being shaped, the admission into the United States of some 150,000 Indochinese refugees was granted by the Attorney General under his normal parole authority. This provision for refugee asylum is contained in the US Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, which authorizes the Attorney General, at his discretion, to parole into the US any alien on a temporary basis because of an emergency or other reasons that are in the public interest. Previous applications of the law allowed the entry of tens of thousands of Hungarians, Cubans, and others seeking refuge from persecution in their homelands. Extension of parole status to Vietnamese and Cambodian evacuees, and later in 1975 to refugees from Laos, permitted them to enter and reside in the United States without fear of expulsion or deportation, although they remained nonresident aliens. Only a change of their legal status through legislation could cause these parolees to be classified as aliens admitted for permanent residence -- the first requirement toward attaining citizenship and full integration into American society. As of the end of 1976, that initial step has as yet to be taken.

Added reception and processing centers were opened on Guam and Wake Island as the end of April 1975 approached, and upwards of 100,000 refugees arrived in the western Pacific by ship or were flown in from Vietnam via the Philippines aboard US military and chartered aircraft. Then, on 28, 29, and 30 April, Operation FREQUENT WIND evacuated US Mission personnel, designated local national employees, and others from Saigon, thereby terminating the presence of the United States of America within the Republic of Vietnam. As a member of the Interagency Task Force for Indochina (IATF), the Secretary of Defense was tasked to provide military personnel and logistical support for the refugee program through making transport and selected military installations available to relocate, house, feed and otherwise care for the physical needs of the evacuees, while civilian members of the IATF concentrated on the administration of refugee processing and the sponsorship program. To accomplish this mission, the Secretary of Defense created a Departmental level task force in April 1975 to oversee, monitor, and coordinate DOD activities in support of the Indochina refugee program. Mr. Morton I. Abramowitz, Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense (International Security Affairs) for East Asia and Pacific Affairs, initially headed this task force which gave direction and guidance to the Military Services. All major decisions affecting support of the Services to the refugee program were cleared through and approved by this DOD task force. Additionally, Mr. Abramowitz served as the DOD representative to the IATF. In May 1975, Mr. Erich von Marbod, the Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense (Comptroller), succeeded Mr. Abramowitz. In September 1975, Dr. Roger Shields, Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense (International Security Affairs) for POW/MIA Affairs, assumed responsibility for monitoring the overall DOD refugee effort and served as the representative to the IATF.

The Department of Defense, through the Joint Chiefs of Staff, tasked the Services to nominate military facilities as potential refugee reception centers. From those installations recommended by the Services, three locations were chosen: Camp Pendleton, California; Fort Chaffee, Arkansas; and Eglin Air Force Base, Florida. This process of selection provided a practical and politically acceptable geographical distribution of sites across the country and divided the housekeeping chores of refugee operations among the three Services. A fourth CONUS site was selected in the latter part of May 1975 at Fort Indiantown Gap, Pennsylvania, to be operated by the Army. Therefore, in addition to operating the largest evacuee center at Orote Point, Guam, the Army expanded its role in providing support to Operations NEW LIFE/NEW ARRIVALS by opening and sustaining two refugee reception centers in CONUS at Forts Chaffee, Arkansas, and Indiantown Gap, Pennsylvania. [See pages V-C-5 to V-C-8 for military command and staff relationships throughout operation of the refugee reception centers].

By the end of 1975, the Army had received and administered to 112,000 evacuees at Orote Point, Guam. Of the approximately 133,000 refugees who eventually entered the United States under Operation NEW ARRIVALS, the Army processed 72,843 (55%) of the refugees for resettlement at two CONUS installations - Forts Indiantown Gap and Chaffee, which functioned through 15 and 20 December 1975, respectively.

B. Preparation

B. PREPARATION AND PLANNING OF REFUGEE OPERATIONS

The ensuing discussion of those actions undertaken in the planning, operations, and termination phases of the Indochinese refugee program focuses on the role of the Department of the Army Staff. Within the Army Staff, the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations and Plans (ODCS-OPS) served as the overall coordinating agency. In practice, the Director of Operations, ODCSOPS, Major General Charles R. Sniffin, assisted by the US Army Military Support Agency, ODCSOPS, and selected members of the Army Staff, acted as the single manager for all phases of Army support of refugee operations beginning with an intensive effort during April and May 1975. This activity was initiated by oral tasking and later confirmed by a Chief of Staff Memorandum outlining DA Staff responsibilities in support of the refugee program on 23 June [see pp. V-A-51/52]. As orphans were being evacuated from Cambodian and Vietnam, prior to the massive surge of refugees from Indochina, those actions which would eventually serve as the points of departure for Operations NEW LIFE/NEW ARRIVALS began to take shape at the national level against the backdrop of preparatory planning and a wide range of international and domestic activities.

On 1 April 1975 the Department of State requested that the Department of the Army assist in providing temporary care for the Vietnamese and Cambodian orphans scheduled to arrive in the continental United States. The following day authority was granted by the Secretary of the Army to utilize Army facilities at the Presidio of San Francisco for that purpose. Subsequently, Fort Lewis, Washington, and Fort Benning, Georgia, were selected as additional installations for receiving the evacuated orphans. The US Army Military Support Agency -- later redesignated the Military Support Division, Operations Directorate, ODCSOPS -- was identified as the Department of the Army point of contact for this humanitarian effort, which became known as Operation BABYLIFT. The first flight of orphans destined for the Presidio of San Francisco arrived on 3 April. Both Forts Benning and Lewis had initiated contingency planning for the support of several hundred orphans at each installation, and liaison with adoption agencies was effected immediately. In all, the Army supported 1,853 orphans of the 2,715 who were evacuated to CONUS; of the remainder, 409 were under the sponsorship of the Holt Foundation and the balance was cared for the by the US Navy.

In the early part of April the orphan evacuation was beginning to be recognized as only the forerunner of what was in fact readily developing into an operation of much greater magnitude. While some members of ODCSOPS were engaged in crisis management of Army involvement in Operation BABYLIFT, others were simultaneously monitoring the emergency evacuation of US nationals from Vietnam. These actions were on-going at the same time as thousands of Vietnamese were exiting their country by their own efforts or by accompanying the orphan airlift, and there was every indication that many more would follow them. Furthermore, although at that time the Services had not received any formal tasking regarding the evacuation of Indochinese, the conclusion that a large refugee exodus eventually would cause the US to grant some sort of asylum requiring military support became more obvious.

Out of a sense of urgency created by this situation, preparations were set in motion by the Operations Directorate (OD). With other Army Staff agencies and in conjunction with the US Army Forces Command (FORSCOM) and other Major Army Commands (MACOM's), OD developed a contingency plan to serve as a point of departure when and if the requirement to support large numbers of refugees materialized. This plan, tentatively called Operation COMPASSION, envisioned that the refugees would at first be evacuated to predesignated safe haven centers in the Pacific where they would be medically screened and given necessary care, where families would be reunited if possible, and where administrative processing for movement to the continental United States would be accomplished. The second phase would involve one or more Army installations whose role would be to receive refugees and support them logistically while the appropriate US Government agencies arranged for their eventual resettlement. Copies of this concept plan were distributed to Commander, FORSCOM, and concerned DA Staff agencies for assistance in the development of requisite contingency plans.

With the formation of the President's special Interagency Task Force for Indochina (IATF) on 18 April 1975 [see pp. V-A-1/2], Department of Defense planning for the reception of an estimated 200,000 refugees began in earnest. The Deputy Secretary of Defense also established a task force within DOD to oversee and coordinate participation of the Services in support of refugee operations and to conduct liaison with IATF [see p. V-A-16]. The Assistant Secretary of Defense (ISA) was selected to head this effort and to serve as the representative of the Secretary of Defense on the Interagency Task Force for Indochina.

Guam and Wake Island were identified as safe havens in the Pacific. CINCPAC, which had been ordered to establish the sites on Guam on 23 April 1975, informed the Joint Chiefs of Staff that additional military manpower and logistical support would be needed if Guam was to be used as a safe haven. Subsequently, the Army was tasked to provide a control element and the necessary forces for the most enterprising refugee support effort at any single site on Guam in what was called Operation NEW LIFE. The Wake Island refugee facility was operated by a civilian contractor under the mission management of Commander in Chief, Pacific Air Force.

The Army headquarters in the Pacific that interfaced with CINCPAC was the US Army CINCPAC Support Group (USACSG), then commanded by Major General Donnelly P. Bolton. As such, USACSG served as the coordinating agency for all Army support to CINCPAC refugee operations. In addition to logistic support for Operation NEW LIFE on Guam, CINCPAC also called upon the Army to staff and administer the largest refugee center on Guam, the Orote Point camp, through which an estimated 112,000 refugees were eventually processed [see p. V-C-4]. On Guam, refugee centers were also operated by the Air Force at Andersen AFB and by the Navy at several sites. With approximately forty thousand refugees at its peak, the Orote Point facility, under control of the CINCPAC Representative, Guam, was operated by the Commander, 45th Support Group [see p. V-C-3]. Approximately two thousand Army personnel provided support, including one hundred members of the Women's Army Corps (WAC) attached to the 1st Battalion, 5th Infantry, 25th Infantry Division, the first such deployment of women personnel in the history of the US Army.

The dimensions of the mission facing USACSG can best be grasped when it is realized that the decision to accommodate large numbers of refugees at locations in the Pacific was not made until the evacuation from Indochina was underway. Nonetheless, USACSG had been alerted by CINCPAC on 20 April, for planning purposes, of the potential support requirement. On 22 April, CINCPAC informed USACSG of the directive issued by JCS to establish what was referred to as a refugee support center on Guam. A liaison officer was dispatched by USACSG to Guam on 23 April together with representation from the 25th Infantry Division in order to coordinate support requirements with the CINCPAC Representative, Guam. The 1st Medical Group (-) deployed from Fort Sam Houston, Texas, to Guam and arrived on 26 April, followed on the next day by the 25th Infantry Division Task Force, 45th Support Group Command Element, and the 1st Battalion, 5th Infantry (-). It was this group that erected the tents, the mess halls, the aid stations, and the hospitals, and other support facilities at what was to become the Orote Point refugee center. Refugees were received immediately, and as the population increased, additional support troops were needed. Individual members of the 411th Engineer Battalion (USAR), located on Guam, volunteered for Active Duty for Training (ADT) and became a welcomed asset. As was to be the case in the management of the CONUS centers, Federal agencies were charged with the actual task of processing the refugees, with the Military Services performing the housekeeping support. Since operations on Guam progressed at a rapid pace, one eye had to be kept on the current refugee population as the other was trained on the imminently approaching typhoon season. By 5 June the declining number of refugees in the PACOM area permitted redeployment of certain Army support elements, and finally on 3 July 1975, the Army completed its mission on Guam in Operation NEW LIFE. The only remaining US Army personnel were a small number of food service personnel who remained to assist the continuing US Navy support of the repatriates at Asan Camp, Guam. [A troop list and an inventory of supplies provided during the operation on Guam are shown on page V-B-1 and page V-B-5, respectively.]

While refugee operations were progressing in the Pacific, FORSCOM and other MACOM's concerned received tasking and planning guidance on 24 April from the Department of the Army for possible support of Indochinese evacuees in CONUS [see pp. V-A-3/9]. This message confirmed previous discussions and planning between DA and the MACOM's and permitted immediate development of contingency plans. The message stated that the current situation in the Republic of Vietnam dictated that contingency planning be initiated to receive, process, billet, and support evacuees at military facilities within CONUS in the event that safe havens outside CONUS became saturated. The message defined the specific areas of responsibility that would apply: the Department of State was to exercise overall control of the Indochinese refugee program and organize an Interagency Task Force to coordinate the operation; JCS (J-4 Logistics) would coordinate and direct movement of Indochinese evacuees to processing centers in CONUS; CINCPAC/MAC would move designated evacuees from Southeast Asia to CONUS ports of entry; and the Military Departments were to develop plans and procedures to accommodate the evacuees in CONUS. The incremental costs of each of these military requirements, if levied, would be funded by the Department of State with OSD directing the actual operational effort. FORSCOM was designated by DA to bear responsibility for the planning and execution of Army support of the refugees in CONUS. Other Major Commands were to provide FORSCOM with support as required and, furthermore, FORSCOM was to identify those installations suited for use as refugee reception centers and to submit concept plans for their utilization to Headquarters, Department of the Army, no later than 25 April 1975. Previously a preliminary survey of sites had been compiled by the DA Staff [see p. V-B-4].

As the momentum of Operations BABYLIFT and NEW LIFE and the commitment of the Military Services in support of CONUS operations increased, a DA response cell headed by MG Sniffin was formed on 25 April 1975 and situated in the Army Operations Center at the Pentagon [see p. V-A-10]. The function of this response cell was to provide the Army Staff with the capability to respond rapidly to the requirements which were beginning to be generated at an accelerated rate and which necessitated clear, definitive guidance and decisions by DA. The Director of Operations acted in the name of the Chief of Staff and the Secretary of the Army in all matters pertaining to Army support of refugees. Judicious use of this authority, coupled with the ODCSOPS designation as the Army single manager on refugee matters, greatly facilitated the responsiveness of DA in reacting to a rapidly changing situation. The major commander actually charged with establishing and supporting the Army refugee reception centers was General Bernard W. Rogers, Commander, US Army Forces Command (FORSCOM). Less than twenty-four hours after notification, FORSCOM submitted three plans to DA, one of which identified Fort Chaffee, Arkansas, as a possible site for a refugee reception center with Fort Sill identified as the installation to serve as the support base. The other two sites considered were Camp Roberts, California, and Fort Pickett, Virginia. It should be noted that until this time, despite discussions and contingency planning on the subject, neither JCS nor DA had been given definite authority to actually establish refugee reception centers. The decision on such matters was being made at the highest national levels with all information channeled through Ambassador L. Dean Brown, then IATF Director, to the US Government agencies involved, including the Department of Defense.

When the National decision came on 26 April directing the Department of Defense to establish refugee reception centers in CONUS, the Army was prepared to respond in a timely manner. The message dispatched on the above date to the Services from JCS stated that "higher authority has determined that shelter for refugees will be provided by military installations in CONUS, while volunteer agencies can arrange sponsors and then move refugees on" [see pp. V-A-12/13]. Further, the Services were each instructed to nominate two installations as reception centers with capacities suitable to hold up to 20,000 refugees per site. The selections were to be submitted to JCS Logistics Directorate (J-4) by 27 April. The contingency plans that had been developed by FORSCOM in conjunction with other MACOM's and submitted to DA on 25 April were thoroughly reviewed at Army Staff level by the response cell in the Army Operations Center and approved within twelve hours of their receipt, subject to continued refinement. No time was lost in notifying JCS of the nomination of Camp Roberts, California, and Fort Chaffee, Arkansas, as the two Army sites selected for refugee reception centers [see pp. V-A-14/15]. On 28 April JCS selected Camp Pendleton, California; Fort Chaffee, Arkansas; and Eglin Air Force Base, Florida, to be the three CONUS refugee reception centers. Travis Air Force Base was designated as a transit facility with a capacity to accommodate as many as one thousand refugees for twenty-four hours.

The openings of the CONUS reception centers were all carefully phased. Camp Pendleton was designated to be the first military installation to open with a capacity of 18,000 refugees. This selection was due to the location of Camp Pendleton on the West Coast and the fact that it could accommodate refugees initially under hard cover (barracks and Quonset huts). Additionally, it was an active Marine Corps installation demanding a minimum buildup of support troops; it also had support facilities in place and operational, such as a hospital, commissary, etc. However, this was not the case at Fort Chaffee, a semi-active installation, whose normal post complement was made up of sixty-two military and civilian personnel; a total of 1800 support troops of all types were required, including medics, cooks, clerks, military policemen, and other specialists. Also support facilities had to be opened, the hospital taken "out of mothballs," and food service facilities activated. An effective command structure and operational staff capable of assuming the mission of administering to an anticipated population of twenty thousand refugees also had to be organized. [A troop list of units which supported operations at Fort Chaffee will be found on page V-B-2]. Eglin Air Force Base was the third CONUS reception center opened, with a tent city having an initial capacity of 2,500. In consonance with this plan, Camp Pendleton was scheduled to receive refugees on 29 April, Fort Chaffee on 2 May, and Eglin Air Force Base on 4 May, a timetable to which the centers adhered, thereby commencing the CONUS segment of the resettlement phase of the Indochinese refugee program: Operation NEW ARRIVALS.

Leaving aside the discussion of the two refugee centers operated by the Marine Corps and the Air Force, the sequence of events at Fort Chaffee warrants detailed consideration. As alluded to above, close and continuous coordination existed between the Army response cell and the JCS (J-4) Logistics Control Center. After the Service nominations had been made and JCS selections announced, a hold was placed on preliminary actions being taken by FORSCOM to begin to implement the troop buildup at Fort Chaffee, where Brigadier General James W. Cannon had been designated as the Commander of Task Force NEW ARRIVALS. He was on station by 28 April with about three hundred support troops preparing the installation for the initial receipt of refugees. The delay in the FORSCOM execution of troop deployment orders was due to certain problems which had emerged at the national level. The selection of military installations as refugee reception centers was a sensitive political issue which required coordination with the Congressional delegations representing those States concerned. However, by late afternoon on 29 April, the difficulties had been resolved and, at 1624 hours EDT the same day, Commander, FORSCOM, was given the oral order to execute OPLAN NEW ARRIVALS for Fort Chaffee and to be prepared to receive the first refugees NLT 0900 hours CDT on 2 May. This decision was issued in a JCS message [see p. V-A-17] and the order was confirmed by a message from the Department of the Army [see pp. V-A-22/24] while the Department of State released a message outlining interagency relationships to be established at Fort Chaffee [see pp. V-A-18/21].

As the tempo of the refugee operations picked up on all fronts in the early part of May, it became apparent to the planners at the national level that the Pacific area refugee centers would soon reach a saturation point while the flow into and out of CONUS centers was not proceeding at the anticipated rate. Guam was a critical stage in regard to capacity with more refugees continuing to arrive each day and its outflow determined by the fixed capacities of CONUS facilities. It had been expected that the refugees would move through the reception and resettlement system much faster than the actual state of affairs demonstrated, a situation which was compounded by various administrative problems that surfaced as delays in refugee out-processing.

Limited relief was forthcoming when some refugees elected to be relocated to third countries that offered to resettle them.

The total refugee situation on Guam and in CONUS centers, aggravated by the approaching typhoon season in the Pacific, dictated that some action be taken immediately. One interim measure contemplated was an increase in the capacities of each of the three CONUS reception centers through the opening of additional buildings, the erecting of more tents, and the provision of similar type facilities. However, this measure did not suffice, and the need for a fourth CONUS refugee reception center was inescapable. On 13 May 1975 the Deputy Secretary of Defense appointed Mr. Erich von Marbod, Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense (Comptroller), as head of the Defense Task Force, replacing the Assistant Secretary of Defense (ISA) [see p. V-A-30]. Mr. von Marbod was very acutely aware of the situation in PACOM and readily became familiar with CONUS center sites through orientation visits shortly after his appointment. Discussions on the efficacy of a fourth refugee center were ongoing at this time and several locations were under consideration. When Mr. von Marbod visited Fort Indiantown Gap, Pennsylvania, on 14 May, he was impressed by what was described as an exceptionally well maintained post, conveniently located near a highway, with transportation to Eastern population centers. Additionally, it was judged to be suited for occupancy by at least fifteen thousand refugees. The Department of the Army was then informally advised on 19 May that Fort Indiantown Gap would be identified as the fourth reception center, and DA directed FORSCOM to develop an OPLAN pending the actual JCS notification that later came on 21 May [see

One advantage the Army had in the selection of Fort Indiantown Gap was the experience from having already opened and operated Fort Chaffee as a reception center. To capitalize on this experience in that situation, BG Cannon, Commander of Task Force NEW ARRIVALS at Fort Chaffee, was chosen to assume command of the military task force at Fort Indiantown Gap refugee reception center. This tasking, confirmed by a message on 22 May, stated that the Army should be prepared to accept refugees by the week of 26 May [see pp. V-A-36/38]. BG Cannon was accompanied from Fort Chaffee by the Commander, 46th Support Group, and selected members of Task Force NEW ARRIVALS staff at Fort Chaffee. This group arrived at Fort Indiantown Gap on 20 May with support troops drawn from several of the East coast installations [see p. V-B-3]. All command and support elements were on station at Fort Indiantown Gap and were operational by 22 May. The first plane load of refugees arrived on 28 May -- first of approximately twenty-two thousand refugees to be processed through that facility. Among those greeting the new arrivals at the Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, airport was Mrs. Julia V. Taft, the newly appointed acting Director of the Interagency Task Force for Indochina [see p. V-A-39].

Army operations on Guam were running as well as could be expected under the prevailing circumstances when the Army began operating centers in CONUS. The impressive element in this situation is the minimum lead time between when the order to execute the OPLANs was given and when the facilities became operational. The chart on page V-C-1 illustrates the the short time frame required to activate refugee facilities during that "crisis management" phase. In each instance involving the commencement of US Army support to Operations NEW LIFE/NEW ARRIVALS, the preparatory phase ranged from twenty-four to seventy-two hours. In fulfilling this mission, the short lead time caused many soldiers to work long hours and perform duties well outside their normal military specialties, but they still functioned with a high degree of efficiency. Also assisting in a variety of ways were a number of dependent wives and local civilian volunteers; and all those involved generously contributed their time and energy which greatly aided the accomplishment of the Army's mission.

C. Operation

C. OPERATION OF THE ARMY SUPPORTED CENTERS

Commander, US Army Forces Command (FORSCOM), was charged with the overall responsibility for the planning and execution of the Army support mission, in the field, to the Indochinese refugee program. As such, FORSCOM was responsible for two Army refugee reception centers in CONUS, while the facility at Orote Point, Guam, was under the direction of the local US Navy commander who represented CINCPAC. The following discussion deals only with the two Army refugee reception centers in CONUS-- Fort Chaffee, Arkansas, and Fort Indiantown Gap, Pennsylvania.

Fort Chaffee, a sub-installation of Fort Sill, Oklahoma, a TRADOC installation, is located just outside the town of Fort Smith, Arkansas. A World War II post with the current mission to support Reserve Component training, Fort Chafee, prior to becoming a refugee reception center, had only a normal military and civilian complement of sixty-two personnel during most of the year. Buildings on the post are mainly closed, and the hospital is in mothballs as part of the war reserve stocks. This was the status of the installation in late April 1975 when the order was given to use Fort Chafee as a refugee reception center with an initial capacity of 20,000 refugees. As contingency planning began, DA and FORSCOM were able to identify those areas where preparation of the post would be required in order to accomplish the refugee mission. One of the earliest actions was an evaluation to determine the environmental impact of the center if added sewage was introduced into the sanitary disposal system.

This question was of immediate concern because of the threat of pollution in the streams that run through and border on Fort Chaffee. The first major project undertaken by the Corps of Engineers was the upgrading of the sewage system. [This subject is treated in detail in Part III, pages III-A-1 and III-A-2.] Next, preparation of the barracks for habitation by families was undertaken through the installation of movable partitions and rearrangement of the furnishings. A typical World War II style two-story barracks was suitable for housing eighty to ninety people when re-configured into family or group living spaces. Washing machines and driers were installed in some of the barracks buildings, and several small company sized mess halls were converted into laundries equipped with washers and driers. The feeding of the refugees did not present a major problem, but a definite challenge was presented in ensuring that everyone was fed during the mess hours. Consolidated messes serving larger groups went a long way toward alleviating this problem; while some company-size messes were used, the majority of the approximately sixty-six thousand meals prepared daily at peak capacity were served in the consolidated messes. During the start-up phase of center operations, Army cooks and mess supervisors were used to staff the mess facilities. However, due to the Army-wide shortage of personnel with these occupational specialities, a manpower problem materialized. As soon as contractual food service could be negotiated, mess operations were awarded to a civilian firm that provided cooks, kitchen helpers, and supervisors, thereby alleviating the problem. Rations were distributed and accounted for through the standard Army channels on post, and tail-gate deliveries were made directly to the mess halls under a strict system of accountability. Senior military food service personnel remained available at the command level for supervision and inspection of the contract services. Assistance was also provided by refugees who volunteered to advise on means of adapting menus and preparing food in a fashion suited to the diet and tastes of the evacuees.

Together with the requirement to provide shelter and food was the need to administer health care to the refugees located at Fort Chaffee. This was done at an Army hospital of World War II design with seemingly endless corridors connecting long one-story buildings that comprised the complex. The hospital, designated for wartime use, was fully maintained in mothball status. That is, the building remained boarded up while the interior was arranged and prepared to become operational on short notice with equipment placed in long-term storage within plastic containers. Taken out of mothballs, the hospital quickly became functional, attending to such normal duties as recording births and deaths among the refugees. Staffing for the hospital was initially provided by Fort Sill, Oklahoma, and later by US Army medical units moved to Fort Chaffee from other CONUS stations.

As in the case of most natural disasters or human calamities, the need to clothe survivors exists, and in this respect refugee operations are no different. The majority of the Indochinese evacuees had fled their home country with only the clothes on their backs or, at most, a suitcase with a few personal effects. Donations of clothing poured into all the CONUS centers in addition to disaster relief stocks which the Salvation Army and Red Cross had on hand. These clothes were suitable for spring and summer, but autumn and winter would prove to be another matter. To remedy this problem IATF decided to buy winter clothing for the refugee population which estimates indicated would still remain at Forts Chaffee and Indiantown Gap when winter began. The Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) acted as the purchasing agent and point of contact with clothing merchandizers and suppliers. Procurement and distribution included winter shoes as well as other wearing apparel, all of which proved to be an indispensable investment in providing for the well-being of the refugees.

In addition to the responsibility to house, feed, clothe, and medically treat the refugees, the Army also had the mission to physically secure those areas where the refugees were located. The intention was not to constrain the refugees but rather to keep others out, thereby protecting the refugees from those who could possibly exploit them or jeopardize their safety. A very workable system of area control was innovated and implemented at each center, and no serious incident involving public safety occurred at either reception center. Crime among the refugees was almost nonexistent, and the actual altercations were few in number considering population density and circumstances.

Initial plans did not envision the Army playing a part in the resettlement processing of the refugees since this was an operation to be run by designated civilian agencies of the US Government with their own officials and field workers, aided by voluntary agencies, engaged in the resettlement activities at the reception centers. However, the sheer volume of refugees and the lack of time to prepare for the situation made it impossible for the civilian agencies alone to handle the processing and as a result the Army filled the gap with military personnel. This processing support ranged from meeting incoming aircraft and tagging individuals with identification to screening refugees regarding their job experience in order to determine their employment opportunities. It is not inaccurate to characterize the work of the Army processors as the saving factor that kept the system from faltering during the most critical processing periods. The military organization of the Task Force NEW ARRIVALS at each center indicates how the Army organized to perform its support mission [see p. V-C-11]. In the initial stages of the operation a Brigadier General commanded Task Force NEW ARRIVALS [TFNA]. [The mission statement of TFNA is included at page V-C-9 and the military and civilian functions of TFNA are to be found at pages V-C-10 and V-C-12, respectively.] Support personnel were drawn as individuals from the Army throughout CONUS -- including a number of USAR Civil Affairs and other Reserve personnel on special tours of Active Duty for Training (ADT) -- with the exception of those units that moved completely intact, such as Military Police companies and Engineer units. Including the post complement, approximately two thousand personnel were required to staff and run each of the two refugee reception centers operated by the Army.

The composition of the civilian component of Task Force NEW ARRIVALS, the counterpart to the military organization, comprising the US Government agencies and voluntary agencies (VOLAG's) which assisted in the resettlement and sponsorship effort is shown at page V-C-13. These civilian groups established procedures that were designed and frequently revamped to expedite the movement of refugees from reception and screening stations through sponsorship/resettlement stages of the processing chain with maximum efficiency. When it is recalled that this system was literally put together in a few days under very difficult circumstances and when the exact duties of each component were not fully defined, the successful accomplishment of the reception center mission is even more appreciated.

The interaction of the military and civilian agencies in operating the processing chain can best be illustrated by the following abstract adapted from the draft after action report prepared by the Senior Civilian Coordinator at Fort Chaffee. A representative story of a fictitious refugee family, it places in context the functioning of the reception center as it operated on a day-to-day basis.

"Nguyen van Thanh and his family of six arrived at the Fort Smith airport in the late afternoon in mid-May. His family and other refugees were welcomed by Red Cross volunteers and ushered to the Army bus waiting to take them to Fort Chaffee.

"After the trip to the center, Mr. Thanh and his family were taken to the in-processing center where they were welcomed by Vietnamese-speaking Americans offering refreshments. As the head of the family, Mr. Thanh was asked by an Army officer to identify each member of his group by name. This information was registered by the Army for the Department of Justice Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW), to be used in all their later processing. Each member of Mr. Thanh's family received an ID card with a number indicating the date of arrival at Fort Chaffee and the sequence of their arrival among that day's refugees. Mr. Thanh's number, for example, was 51690, to show he was the 90th person processed on the 16th day of the fifth month.

"After in-processing, the family was next housed in temporary accommodations for the one night and issued temporary meal cards until permanent meal tickets and quarters could be assigned.

"The next morning, Mr. Thanh and his family were escorted back to the in-processing center and a more thorough interview was begun. Although his English was fairly good, Mr. Thanh requested an interpreter's assistance for a clearer understanding. The purpose of the interview was to collect information for his family data form. Questions asked concerned their date of departure from Vietnam, job abilities of family members, dates of birth, and the relationship of each person in the group to Mr. Thanh. After this initial interview, the family was transported to their assigned permanent barracks, most of which housed eighty to ninety people. There, they were supplied with linen and personal items such as soap, toothbrushes, combs, razors, etc.

"After moving into their new quarters, the family returned to the NEW ARRIVALS processing center for ID photographs. For further identification, each member of the family had fingerprints taken. By this time, Mr. Thanh and his family had been at Fort Chaffee for almost 24 hours.

"Their second day in the center began at the US Army Field Hospital where everyone was given medical examinations. Through the combined efforts of Army and HEW's Center for Disease Control (CDC) representatives, a medical history was prepared for each individual.

"Mr. Thanh, his wife and two sisters were all over 14 years of age, so chest X-rays were required for each of them. Tuberculin skin tests were given to all other members of the family. If results were positive, X-rays were taken. Since all of Mr. Thanh's children were under 15 years of age, they were required to receive vaccines and inoculations necessary for children. An oral polio vaccine was administered along with the first series of diphtheria, whooping cough, and typhoid inoculations. The CDC representative issued an International Vaccination Certificate to Mr. Thanh and explained the follow-up required for the additional shots in the series. He was told to give the card to his doctor in the community in which he later resettled and that arrangements would be made by CDC for follow-up.

"Following a rest period that afternoon, Mr. Thanh took his family to INS to receive their Immigration I-94 forms (Arrival and Departure Documents). An interpreter explained the importance of this form; that it must be retained until the owner became a permanent resident of the United States. Also contained on the I-94 form was the alien number assigned to each refugee. Mr. Thanh's alien number, along with his wife's and sisters', was then sent to Washington with biographical information for a security clearance check. (This clearance would have to be approved by the Department of State, CIA, FBI, Defense Intelligence Agency, and Drug Enforcement Administration.) INS officials with the interpreter's assistance, asked Mr. Thanh and the members of his family over 17 years old to sign a sworn statement as to their financial assets. It was explained that this statement was needed for two reasons: (1) to determine ability to pay for his own and his family's transportation to his sponsor, and (2) to determine if he could be considered financially self-sufficient.

"May 18 was their third day at the center and they reported to the HEW complex for further processing. When Mr. Thanh's name was called, he was given a sheet of paper explaining in Vietnamese that he was about to receive his Social Security number and card from the Social Security Administration (SSA). The purpose of and importance of obtaining the card were also explained. After the SSA interviewer had collected all the information needed, Mr. Thanh was sent to get the rest of his family to sign the cards and forms. (Before leaving the area, his wife was given additional supplies of diapers and baby food for their youngest daughter.) Additional information for the family data file was obtained at that time concerning friends or relatives he might know in America or the possibilities of family reunification if some of his family was located in another center.

"At this time, also, a detailed explanation was given to him about the role of voluntary agencies and sponsorship requirements. The Social and Rehabilitation Service (SRS) interviewer handed Mr. Thanh a list of the voluntary agencies (VOLAG's) with which the US Government had contracted to resettle refugees. He was to choose one of the following:

- (1) Christian Missionary Alliance
- (2) Church World Service
- (3) Hebrew Immigration Aid Service
- (4) International Rescue Committee
- (5) Latter Day Saints Social Services
- (6) Lutheran Immigration and Refugee Service
- (7) Tolstoy Foundation
- (8) United States Catholic Conference

'Mr. Thanh decided to register his family with the Lutheran Immigration and Refugee Service (LIRS). He was then told that the in-processing stage was completed and that his file information would be sent to LIRS for the beginning of casework to find him a sponsor. He returned to his barracks to wait for LIRS to contact him.

"Three days later, on May 21, a note was delivered to him, at his barracks, asking him to report to LIRS at 1600 that afternoon. Mr. Thanh was interviewed that day by a LIRS caseworker where a system of matching was used to provide sponsor and refugee with the best possible matching. Mr. Thanh accepted the arrangements for the sponsorship, and the out-processing system began.

"LIRS issued their letter on 31 May to INS certifying the commitment of sponsorship. Upon receipt of the letter, INS verified that all the necessary security clearances were completed and stamped the LIRS letter 'VI-CAMP SPECIAL' indicating security clearance had been received. Three copies of this letter were also stamped and sent to different areas involved in the processing. One copy of the letter was sent HEW for retention in the master file for monitoring out-processing. This filing system, which was created in the early days of the center, contained the family data forms, medical clearances, and data processing information of all refugees located at Fort Chaffee. Mr. Thanh's file was pulled from the master file and checked to verify that the medical clearances had been received and that the security clearances had been obtained. It was then sent by HEW courier to the SRS desk at INS.

"While this checking procedure was carried out by HEW, LIRS received its copy of the INS-stamped VOLAG letter and sent a message telling Mr. Thanh and his family to report to HEW's SRS desk at INS where a caseworker would have their file. Upon arrival at INS, he and his family were directed to an INS official who stamped their Immigration I-94 forms 'Employment Authorized' to be used as working permits.

"The Task Force's travel office received the third copy of the LIRS letter and made airline reservations for the family. The travel office prepared an itinerary card and sent it to LIRS where they finally confirmed with the sponsor the refugees' arrival date and authorized incidental travel money for the Thanh family.

"This itinerary card was then sent to the Joint Operations Center which distributed it to the appropriate American area coordinator. An employee from the area center personally handed Mr. Thanh his itinerary schedule and made sure they members of his family would be prepared to leave on the departure date.

"Mr. Thanh reported his departure date and flight schedule to the Red Cross/Traveler's Aid in the travel office several days before leaving Fort Chaffee. This was done to assure his family of assistance from Red Cross representatives at the intermediate flight stops and the final destination.

"On the morning of 5 June, 21 days after arriving at Fort Chaffee, Mr. Thanh and his family prepared to leave. Area coordinators assisted them in returning their bed linens, with other final pre-departure arrangements and helped them to the Travel Office with their baggage. An HEW employee at the travel office made a final check to confirm that everyone had a ticket and that all luggage was loaded on the Army bus. At the Fort Chaffee main gate, all the ID cards were collected for departure data records and the family was driven to the airport where Red Cross workers were waiting to offer assistance to the refugees. Boarding the plane, the Thanh family completed the reception center phase of their life in the United States and entered America to journey to their sponsor."

The account basically outlines how the average refugee moved through the reception center system, from arrival to resettlement [see p. V-C-14]. A great deal of dedication and hard work was displayed by the civilians of the US Government and various voluntary agencies. The description of center activities at Fort Chaffee also applies to the conduct of the operation at Fort Indiantown Gap. The experience gained at Fort Chaffee passed to Fort Indiantown Gap since many of those who had established the Fort Chaffee reception center were sent to Fort Indiantown Gap to activate and operate that latter center.

Both internal and exteneral public affairs played an important role in the successful operation of the two Army supported reception centers. It was critical to keep the nation and the world informed of the situation of the refugees relocated to the United States and equally important to provide the refugees with information of what was being done to resettle them. The external public affairs was a standard operation conducted by the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense, Public Affairs [OASD (PA)], responsible for media relations and providing the press with current information as the program progressed. The Army supported centers attracted a good deal of media interest from both national and international correspondents covering center activities. Internal dissemination of information was handled through different channels. At both centers, as well as on Guam and at Eglin Air Force Base, detachments of the Army's 4th Psychological Operations Group from Fort Bragg printed leaflets, signs, and menus for the benefit of the Vietnamese and Cambodian refugees and, most importantly, prepared daily newspapers for the evacuees in their vernacular. This action enabled the refugees to be kept current on events in the outside world and supplemented their information within the center. It is fair to say that many reporters came to the centers expecting to find the worst, in terms of living conditions and human suffering, but found little to exploit in that regard. Other reporters and observers adopted a more positive note and relayed many of the constructive aspects of the operation. Good media relations were attributable to early decisions to be open and candid about what was being done and to allow access to the refugees for interviews. In the final analysis, the public affairs program at both installations was successful in all respects, both internally and externally.

Daily Vietnamese/English newspapers were one means to prepare the refugees for what was to come by introducing them to information about their new life in the United States and American customs. In fact, the newspapers were just part of a large educational effort conducted at both Army reception centers. The initial conception of what might be needed by way of instructional programs assumed that the refugees would not be in the centers very long and that only rudimentary English for the head of the household was required. This first estimate was proven somewhat shortsighted and caused revisions as the actual situation emerged. At both installations the need was quickly realized for a more formalized, long-term educational program that embraced the entire refugee population, from the youngest to the oldest, who were capable of learning. Spoken and written English was the core of the curriculum in this program. Reading, mathematics, and history were subjects related to the fundamental objective of getting as many refugees as possible acquainted with speaking and comprehending English. Military personnel at the Army centers taught English along with civilian instructors in both formal settings and informal settings that were conducive to learning. In sum, an extensive and successful educational program for all age groups was conducted in order to prepare the refugees for the life they were to face upon leaving the reception centers.

While these efforts were going on at the installation level, a look was being taken at what the Army and other Services could do in the area of assisting in refugee sponsorship. Mr. Eric von Marbod, PDASD(C), requested that each Service endeavor to promote the sponsorship and resettlement of former military counterparts and their families through individual and group efforts or by means of related organizations such as commands, social clubs, etc. [see pp. V-A-40/41]. As a result, the Joint Refugee Information Clearing Office (JRICO) was established under ODCSPER auspices and staffed jointly by Reservists, with the Army Element of JRICO comprised of members of the USAR on special tours of Active Duty for Training (ADT). JRICO provided all service members with a single clearinghouse for information on the location, sponsorship, and resettlement of former allies from the Armed Forces of the Republic of Vietnam and the Khmer Republic, and other Vietnamese and Cambodian relatives, associates, and friends [see pp. V-A-44/46].

Of the approximately one hundred and thirty-three thousand refugees who entered the United States before the termination of the program, some indicated their desire to return to Indochina while still in the refugee reception centers which posed a special problem. Repatriation was an alternative open to all refugees from the outset of the evacuation and resettlement program which had been articulated and publicized throughout each refugee reception center. No evacuee was compelled to remain in the United States. Representatives of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) were invited to Orote Point, Guam, and Forts Chaffee and Indiantown Gap, and refugees were made aware of the administrative steps to be taken toward repatriation. The total number of evacuees desiring repatriation who were located at the four CONUS centers amounted to approximately four hundred, divided almost equally between Vietnamese and Khmer. Just over 1,400 refugees on Guam stated their intention to return to Vietnam. After a few demonstrations at Fort Chaffee and Camp Pendleton, it was decided by IATF to consolidate all those electing to be repatriated in one area within the Camp Pendleton reception center. From there they were transferred to Guam, where Asan Camp was designated as the holding point for the repatriates until an agreement could be negotiated by the UNHCR for their reentry into Vietnam. During July and August 1975, the repatriates on the island of Guam became increasingly restive and began to agitate for their speedy return to Vietnam. This agitation resulted in several confrontations by the repatriates with the force of US Marshals and culminated in the burning of two buildings at Asan Camp during a demonstration in September 1975. The situation on Guam became politically volatile when threats were made by the repatriates; the US Marshals, attempting to keep the peace, were drawn into the exchange. Earlier, the suggestion had been made by the repatriates and others to use one of the Vietnamese evacuation ships -- there were nine in the harbor at Guam -- and let the repatriates take charge of the problem themselves. A demand for their own vessel became the theme of the repatriates' discontent. Meanwhile, the US Government was attempting to work through the established international channels of the UNHCR, which was engaged in discussions with North Vietnamese authorities that were progressing at a slow and laborious pace.

The situation among the repatriates became so tense during the latter part of September that the Department of Defense took action to prepare to control it under the provisions of GARDEN PLOT, the Department of the Army civil disturbance plan. The senior naval officer on Guam was appointed as the civil disturbance control task force commander, and two civil disturbance advisers were sent by the Army Staff to assist him in planning for the quelling of the repatriates if they caused a disturbance which the US Marshals were unable to control. Presidential approval would be needed if military forces were committed to cope with a civil disturbance. Fortunately, on 30 September 1975, what had become known as the "ship option" was approved by the US Government as a solution to the problem, and the potential for a violent civil disturbance was defused. The US Navy was given the mission of preparing the ship, Thuong Tin I, for the voyage to Vietnam. The refitted ship sailed on 16 October 1975 with a total of 1,546 repatriates and full provisions of food, medical supplies, and fuel plus a crew drawn from former naval and merchant seamen among the repatriates. It was reported that the ship arrived safely in South Vietnamese waters and that the repatriates disembarked with the permission of the North Vietnamese authorities [see pp. III-C-1/5].

While the repatriate problem monopolized a good deal of the time and effort of the Department of the Army's Indochinese refugee response cell, another problem loomed on the horizon. Action had to be taken to prepare the Army reception centers for continued operation during the winter months. The primary missions of the centers had been to provide support to Reserve Components of the US Army. Most US Army Reserve and Army National Guard training takes place at these locations during the summer months, and as a result there is a limited requirement for heated barracks space suitable for winter use. For winter occupancy by refugees, both installations needed modernized heating systems in addition to other modifications that would ensure a healthy and comfortable atmosphere. Planning for the winterization of Forts Chaffee and Indiantown Gap began in August, and approval for the expenditure of the necessary funds to accomplish the task was granted by IATF in September 1975.

In summary, the successful execution of the refugee support mission both at DA and in the field by FORSCOM was a result of the good working relationships between the two staffs. It was recognized at DA that CDR FORSCOM had the difficult mission of translating support requirements into actions on the ground that would create an atmosphere conducive to making the refugees feel welcome and secure. FORSCOM did just that and received high praise for the operation of the refugee reception centers at Forts Chaffee and Indiantown Gap.

D. Termination

D. TERMINATION OF ARMY SUPPORTED REFUGEE FACILITIES

Much in the same manner as comprehensive prior planning had saved DA and FORSCOM a great deal of trouble in commencing operations at the centers, the planning of the phase-out and closedown of the Army supported reception facilities proved to be advantageous. In July 1975 the Director of IATF forecast that all of the refugee reception centers would be closed by 31 December 1975. The plan called for the center at Eglin Air Force Base to close in September, followed by the phase-out of operations at Camp Pendleton in October. Fort Indiantown Gap was slated to close by late November or early December, with the final reception facility, Fort Chaffee, scheduled to release its last refugees in late December.

This forecasting constituted the basis for the IATF plan contained in a message released on 30 July 1975 [see pp. V-A-57/58]. Eglin Air Force Base refugee reception center was scheduled to close first because of the threat of the severe weather conditions that are prevalent throughout that section of Florida during the autumn. If unsponsored refugees remained at the center by the closing date, they would be transferred to Fort Chaffee. Camp Pendleton would be phased out by a process of attrition as the evacuee input to the program tapered off; on the closing date any remaining refugees would also be relocated to Fort Chaffee. The expectation that the Army would be operating Forts Chaffee and Indiantown Gap at least through the early part of winter required that plans be finalized to prepare those two reception centers for the winter season. Consequently, on 5 August DA notified the Commander, FORSCOM, to proceed with winterization preparations [see pp. V-A-59/61].

The schedule for the phased closure of the centers furnished those connected with the program target dates in managing support for the operation. It also provided a very effective motivating factor in promoting sponsorship by encouraging civic and institutional groups interested in sponsoring to make final commitments and, most critically, by giving voluntary agencies specific objectives for the resettlement of the refugees. The termination of center operations would not complete the entire task of resettlement, but it would mark the end of the initial processing and relocation phases of the effort. The months of September, October, and November of 1975 were a period of high output in terms of refugee sponsorships and departures from the centers. Furthermore, it was disclosed that no additional refugees would be admitted to the United States under the resettlement program administered by IATF after 31 October 1975. Thus, for the first time a fixed population figure could become the focal point of sponsorship and resettlement activities.

The procurement of winter clothing for the refugees became a matter of importance. Orders for clothing were placed in August based on projected residual refugee strengths. But the resettlement rate increased in early autumn. Therefore, when the clothing was delivered during late September and October, the reduced refugee population at the centers contrasted considerably with the original projection. To resolve this situation, IATF entered into a contractual arrangement with the Salvation Army to undertake distribution of winter clothing, through a mail order system based at Fort Chaffee, to those refugees previously released. The refugees were made aware of clothing issue through the IATF newspaper New Life and the local offices of the voluntary agencies or other refugee-related organizations. By using a simple order form, refugees already resettled in communities across the country were able to request clothing for men, women, and children by size, sex, etc. This highly successful operation by the Salvation Army served to get the clothing to those for whom it was originally intended.

With the closing of Eglin Air Force Base and Camp Pendleton on 15 September and 31 October, respectively, the only remaining reception centers still functioning were operated by the Army. At the Department of Defense level, this ended the participation of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in Operation NEW ARRIVALS, and on 3 November the Deputy Secretary of Defense appointed the Secretary of the Army as the Executive Agent for the Department of Defense in matters pertaining to military support of the Indochinese refugee program [see p. V-A-62]. This arrangement allowed the Army to deal more directly with officials of both the Department of Defense and IATF regarding the refugee operations.

At Fort Indiantown Gap during the month of November, a small group of Cambodians, approximately one hundred and twenty, refused to accept sponsorship arrangements and requested that they be repatriated. As in the case of the Vietnamese, representatives of the UNHCR, working under their mandate to aid those desiring repatriation, visited Fort Indiantown Gap and attempted to establish communication with officials of Cambodia. The Cambodian Government at that time would not discuss repatriation or indicate when it would entertain such a request. The repatriates were then relocated to a halfway house in Philadelphia under the auspices of the UNHCR to await word of their fate. Finally, in late Spring of 1976, it was reported that this group had departed for France where they hoped to increase the chances of negotiating for their repatriation through direct contact with Cambodian officials in Paris.

Another facet of this phase-out and closedown period was the process of determining the disposition of the property on hand that had been purchased, leased, or received on loan for the operation. In the case of military property, Army supply regulations provided adequate procedures for necessary actions to be taken, but the IATF property had to be handled under special instructions. Administering the latter task was resolved when the IATF property expert dispatched special guidance to the field on the subject [see pp. V-A-63/65].

Fort Indiantown Gap refugee reception center was closed on 15 December, having received and processed some 22,000 refugees. Five days later on 20 December Fort Chaffee reception center terminated operations, having received and processed over 50,000 evacuees. The two Army centers were responsible for the reception and resettlement processing of approximately 55 percent of the total of more than 133,000 refugees who entered the United States under Operation NEW ARRIVALS [see p. V-C-15]. With the departure of the last refugees from the centers, all efforts were concentrated on the disposition of IATF property and the creation of a system to handle the unclaimed baggage that had been left behind, lost in transit, or forwarded to Fort Chaffee from other centers. IATF requested the Army to resolve the problem under existing Department of Defense disposal instructions [see p. V-A-67].

As part of the termination of Army involvement in the refugee program, plans were requested from the Commander, FORSCOM, specifying the work to be done in order to restore the two Army installations to their pre-refugee condition. It had been agreed that IATF would fund restoring the facilities as an incremental cost of the refugee program. Plans were refined and then presented to IATF representatives. After a visit to both installations, the IATF comptroller approved the projects and funds required to complete the restoration. Restoration encompassed fixing the damage to building interiors, painting both the exterior and the interior surfaces of selected buildings, and repairing the road network within Fort Chaffee.

The participation of the US Army in Operations NEW LIFE/NEW ARRIVALS was duly noted by the Chief of Staff, General Weyand, in a message on 9 January 1976 when he stated: "With the resettlement of the last group of refugees and the closing of Fort Chaffee as a refugee reception center, I wish to commend all personnel involved in the planning and execution of Operations NEW LIFE, NEW ARRIVALS, and BABYLIFT for their exemplary performance" [see p. V-A-66].

On 1 June 1976 the Deputy Secretary of Defense, Mr. William P. Clements, Jr., issued a memorandum effective that date which notified the Secretary of the Army of the termination of the Army's role as the executive agent for DOD in matters pertaining to the administrative, operational, and logistical support for the Indochinese refugee program. Mr. Clements further conveyed the congratulations of the Secretary of Defense, Mr. Donald Rumsfeld, to all those civilians and military who contributed to the success of the refugee operations through their dedicated performance of duty [see p. V-A-68]. Thus ended the official participation of the Department of the Army in a most unique humanitarian endeavor of gigantic proportions.

A. OFFICE OF THE DEPUTY CHIEF OF STAFF FOR OPERATIONS AND PLANS (ODCSOPS)

The rôle of ODCSOPS throughout the Indochinese refugee program was significant. Beginning with Operation BABY LIFT and, subsequently, Operations NEW LIFE and NEW ARRIVALS, ODCSOPS personnel were deeply involved in the planning and execution of Army support to the total refugee effort. Operation BABYLIFT, a civilian endeavor which brought Southeast Asian orphans to the United States, was the beginning of ODCSOPS activity. The US Military Support Agency, ODCSOPS, was the DA focal point of operations during the early stages of this evacuation of orphans. Early and total involvement in Operation BABYLIFT presented ODCSOPS with a natural transition into planning subsequent Army support for Operations NEW LIFE and NEW ARRIVALS. The refugee reception center concept which the operations at Forts Chaffee and Indiantown Gap were predicated had its origin in contingency planning conducted by ODCSOPS. Planning and crisis management, in addition to day-to-day actions and coordination following the period of crisis, were the crux of the contributions of ODCSOPS to the refugee operations.

Concomitant with Operation BABYLIFT, it became apparent to ODCSOPS that a larger operation involving thousands of Vietnamese refugees could materialize. Elements of ODCSOPS were already engaged in monitoring the emergency evacuation of US nationals and their dependents from Vietnam. Although no formal tasking had been received from the Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS), it seemed certain that many of the refugees ultimately would arrive in the United States. Recognizing that a period of intensive DA management and decision making, which would require prompt and full staff coordination, was about to commence, ODCSOPS (specifically the Director of Operations) was directed to act as the single manager for the Army Staff for the forthcoming operation. As a matter of prudence, and with limited guidance, the Operations Directorate assisted by the US Army Military Support Agency, ODCSOPS, developed a concept plan and tasking message directing that contingency planning be initiated by US Army Forces Command (FORSCOM) with appropriate support from other Major Commands (MACOM's). On 24 April, Commander, FORSCOM, was directed to identify three Army installations that would be suitable as refugee reception centers. A plan for each installation was to be prepared and submitted to Department of the Army no later than the close of business on the following day, 25 April. FORSCOM was able to respond rapidly due to the advance planning that had been ongoing between ODCSOPS, HQDA, and ODCSOPS, FORSCOM.

Increasing actions generated by Operations BABYLIFT, NEW LIFE, and NEW ARRIVALS, and the rapidly expanding Army involvement required that a crisis management team response cell be established on 25 April in the Army Operations Center (AOC) to function in such a manner as to allow the Army Staff to respond quickly to new requirements. These requirements surfaced at an increased rate and demanded clear and detailed guidance from DA. The Director of Operations was delegated the authority to act in the name of the Chief of Staff for all matters pertaining to refugee operations, thereby greatly facilitating rapid responses to changing situations and enabling approval and initiation of unit deployment to PACOM and in CONUS within a matter of hours. An illustration of this expeditious handling of refugee operation actions was demonstrated in the process of site selection. In less than twenty-four hours after notification, FORSCOM submitted plans that identified Camp Roberts, California; Fort Pickett, Virginia; and Fort Chaffee, Arkansas, as potential refugee reception centers. Within twelve hours of receipt, all plans had been reviewed by the DA Staff and comments provided to Commander, FORSCOM. Shortly thereafter, Fort Chaffee, Arkansas, was selected by JCS for use as a refugee reception center. When in May 1975 Fort Indiantown Gap was selected as the second Army-operated center, the ODCSOPS-directed response cell was again deeply involved. These timely responses were attributable to the effectiveness of the DA response cell as well as the full support it received from the DA Staff and the MACOM's.

As the pace began to slacken and staff management returned to a more normal pace of operations, the response cell was dissolved on 28 May and refugee activities in the Army Operations Center were discontinued. The response cell concept, coupled with single manager authority, proved to be an effective organizational tool for the coordination of overall Department of the Army management for unique crises such as the refugee program and lends itself to tailoring as the situation dictates. The disestablishment of the response cell did not end ODCSOPS management of the refugee support mission. On a daily basis, the Operations Directorate, ODCSOPS, was the DA point of contact for all actions pertaining to continued Army support to the refugee operations. This encompassed dealing with OSD, IATF, the Joint Staff, and supporting the Commander, FORSCOM, who was responsible for the efficient operation of the two Army refugee centers. Subsequently, the potential civil disturbance by the Vietnamese repatriates on Guam introduced another situation when ODCSOPS and the Director of Military Support* (DOMS) in particular were called upon to exercise crisis management procedures. Once again a small team was brought together to manage the problem from beginning to end. In addition, ODCSOPS provided two officers at the request of CINCPACREP, Guam, to augment his staff and assist in civil disturbance control planning. The repatriate situation is discussed beginning on page III-C-1. The Director of Operations, ODCSOPS, issued a situation summary during the course of the refugee operation- initially daily and subsequently weekly. This summary apprised OSD, the Joint Staff, the Army Secretariat and the Army Staff of the current status of Army support to the program.

The net result, upon termination of the formal Army role in the Indochina evacuation effort, was the ODCSOPS-managed Army support of more than eight-hundred and fifty orphans from Vietnam and Cambodia, of approximately one hundred and twelve thousand evacuees at staging areas in the Pacific, of some seventy-two thousand Indochinese in CONUS, and of the repatriation of over fifteen hundred Vietnamese refugees through civil disturbance planning and advisory activities - all within the period of eight months.

*At HQ DA, the Director of Operations, ODCSOPS, also serves as the Director of Military Support as an additional primary duty.

B. OFFICE OF THE DEPUTY CHIEF OF STAFF FOR PERSONNEL (ODCSPER)

The range of activities undertaken by the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel in support of Operation NEW ARRIVALS consisted of the following concerns: personnel requirements for augmentation of deployed units, replacement of units, and the provision of special skills; support for Guam and CONUS refugee reception centers; extension of TDY personnel beyond 180 days (extensions beyond 90 days can be authorized by FORSCOM); temporary hire of civilians through installation Civilian Personnel Offices (CPO's); and tasking MACOM's to furnish fill for TDY personnel requirements when FORSCOM had exhausted resources in addition to filling some specific MOS's by use of USAR volunteer personnel.

The problems related to refugee operations which arose and were addressed by ODCSPER guidance fell in the following areas: restrictions on deploying station of choice (SOC) enlistees in support of the refugee operations, who have a twelve month stabilization guarantee of maximum 30-day deployment unless Army worldwide requirements necessitate under DA determination that enlistees be deployed for longer periods of time; cases involving refugees who were relatives of service members requiring individual consideration over questions related to the refugees joining their military sponsors stationed overseas; dependency status; the prohibition on Federal employment of paroled refugees in the fifty States and territories of the United States; the ineligibility of evacuees for enlistment because of the requirement of being admitted for permanent residency; and the issue of law enforcement as exercised at the refugee reception centers by Federal or State authorities in matters concerning criminal jurisdiction on the military installation or stations involved.

JOINT REFUGEE INFORMATION CLEARING OFFICE (JRICO)

The Joint Refugee Information Clearing Office (JRICO) was established in response to an appeal by the Office of the Secretary of Defense (OSD) for support by the Military Services in the effort to sponsor and resettle the refugees from Indochina. The principal role of JRICO was to expedite the refugee sponsorship process for service members by facilitating the location of Indochinese evacuees and to disseminate refugee sponsorship and resettlement information to the US military community. Initially, JRICO was instituted as a means of assisting service members who desired to offer sponsorship and other forms of aid to former counterparts, allies, and friends from the Armed Forces of the Republic of Vietnam and the Khmer Republic. As a result, JRICO was responsive to a wide range of concerns and inquiries raised by military and service-related individuals and groups seeking to help a broad cross section of the Vietnamese, Cambodian, and Laotian refugee population.

Operational from 4 June 1975 to 30 January 1976, JRICO had as its mission the following tasks: to provide information on the requirements and the procedures for becoming a sponsor; to provide information on the location and status of specific evacuees from Vietnam, Cambodia, and Laos; to conduct direct liaison with the Interagency Task Force for Indochina (IATF) and to maintain access to the IATF computer data files on refugees; to coordinate with OSD, refugee reception centers, Voluntary Agencies (VOLAG's), and other organizations on refugee affairs as deemed appropriate; and to respond as required to OSD, the Army Staff, and other agencies on matters pertaining to refugee location, sponsorship, resettlement, and related concerns in support of Operation NEW ARRIVALS.

Organized and coordinated as a joint activity, JRICO was composed of Army, Marine Corps, and Air Force Elements and maintained liaison with the Navy Indochina Clearing Office (NICO). All elements of JRICO, as well as NICO, were staffed by members of the Reserve Components of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force. The Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel (ODCSPER), Headquarters, Department of the Army, acted as host for this operation, providing facilities and administrative support and negotiating with IATF for on-line computer access to refugee records for JRICO use.

JRICO handled thousands of sponsorship and location cases and responded to numerous requests for information and assistance. The Army Element of JRICO received and processed 1,020 sponsorship or location cases involving queries on more than 3,500 refugees, refugee heads of household, or family groups. Members of the Army community made almost 500 offers to sponsor refugees, including more than 100 general sponsorship offers for 245 refugees. About 10 per cent of the total number of Army location and sponsorship cases involved searches for some 600 individuals who were related to service members or reported to be their dependents. Of the total 1,020 Army sponsorship cases, 123 originated from inquirers stationed outside of CONUS. In many instances service members sought to locate refugees and to sponsor evacuees without recourse to JRICO for assistance. Accordingly, the figures mentioned only present a profile of JRICO activities and are by no means intended to project the overall impact of assistance rendered by Army personnel in this humanitarian effort to sponsor and resettle Indochinese refugees.

In many other areas, JRICO provided an important informational function by making available policy and guidance that affected military sponsors by virtue of their status as service members. Such information included refugee benefits and entitlements (post exchange, theater, and health care), and extended to questions concerning the dependency status for related refugees.

C. OFFICE OF THE DEPUTY CHIEF OF STAFF FOR LOGISTICS (ODCSLOG)

This discussion of ODCSLOG participation in refugee operations deals exclusively with those logistical activities in support of Operation NEW LIFE performed in the Pacific, except for the Army Food Service Program provided at Forts Chaffee and Indiantown Gap for Operation NEW ARRIVALS. [See the FORSCOM after action report for other logistic matters concerning CONUS operations.]

Support for the refugee operation on Guam was provided in the following manner: Commander in Chief, Pacific Fleet (CINCPACFLT) - medical support, subsistence, sealift capabilities, and reception center construction; Commander in Chief, Pacific Air Force (CINCPACAF) - ground transportation, supplies, food, and immediate airlift; US Army Major Commands - field kitchens and Quartermaster bath, clothing, laundry, etc.; and US Army CINCPAC Support Group (USACSG) - units and equipment, with inabilities to provide support reported in turn to CINCPAC, JCS (J-4), and Department of the Army. Logistic support requirements were identified by CINCPAC, which requested that the Department of the Army prepare to provide PACOM shortfall. ODCSLOG advised the Defense Supply Agency (DSA) and General Services Administration (GSA) of tentative billeting, messing, and construction requirements and also alerted airlift activities. The Department of State/US Agency for International Development (USAID) guaranteed reimbursement for this support under Foreign Disaster Relief authority. CINCPAC validated USACSG requirements and advised the JCS Logistics Coordination Center (LCC), which in turn directed DA (ODCSLOG) to ship the items identified by Special Assignment Airlift Mission (SAAM) flights. Examples of the kinds of items airlifted to Guam follow: 100,000 sets of tee shirts and shorts; 45,000 folding cots; 100,000 bath towels; 100 field ranges; 2,300 tents; 100,000 yards of black and white cloth; 12,000 needles and over 160,000 yards of thread, and 1,000 scissors - plus loudspeaker systems, Vietnamese language typewriters, tools, utensils, kitchen equipment, etc. ODCSLOG arranged for fifty-six SAAM flights to move 4,436 passengers and 2,292 tons of cargo, in support of which the Military Airlift Command (MAC) flew 110 C-141 sorties and 15 C-5 sorties between 22 April and 30 June 1975 at a cost of $4 million.

The Army Food Service program at the refugee reception centers encompassed thirty dining facilities at Fort Chaffee for 25,000 persons, supported by 315 Army mess personnel who were later replaced through contractual food service, thereby easing the strain on Army personnel. Fifteen contractor-operated dining facilities provided for 16,000 refugees at Fort Indiantown Gap. A special fifteen-day menu was developed for use at the CONUS centers. The Army operated eight messing facilities at Orote Point, Guam, each one serving an average of 10,000 meals daily. Approximately 350 Army mess personnel were required to support this operation. A master menu was jointly developed by the Army and Navy which, in turn, was supported by the Navy commissary on Guam.

US ARMY MATERIEL DEVELOPMENT AND READINESS COMMAND (DARCOM)

DARCOM, formerly the Army Materiel Command (AMC), had been involved in an extensive ongoing military assistance program for Vietnam (Defense Assistance to Vietnam-Expedite or DAV-E). After the suspension of DAV-E, the DARCOM Deputy Commander subsequently reopened the DARCOM Operations Center on 24 April in order to meet any potential refugee support requirements levied by DA. DARCOM coordinated all Special Assignment Airlift Mission (SAAM) flights involving Defense Supply Agency (DSA) materiel - nine flights containing 1700 short tons. It supplied the following equipment for support of refugee operations in the Pacific: twenty lighting sets, nine public-address systems, four refrigerator vans, one delousing machine, five sprayer/fogger machines, and locking plates for M-16 rifles to be used for training and civil disturbance readiness on Guam incident to the repatriate situation discussed at III-C-1/5.

After the initial surge of activity when refugees were located in the Philippines and on Guam, the subsequent movement of evacuees to CONUS reduced the role of DARCOM to one of accounting for stock issued, examining and refurbishing equipment, and returning materiel to stock at the conclusion of the refugee operation.

MILITARY TRAFFIC MANAGEMENT COMMAND (MIMC)

The major participation of the Military Traffic Management Command involved the planning and phase-out/closedown stages of the refugee operations, with some support provided during the implementation phase. MIMC supported Installation Transportation Officers (ITO's) in preparing for refugee arrivals at Airports of Debarkation (APOD's) by alerting the commercial airline transportation industry. Group movement required arranging twenty one charter flights, including fourteen for refugees moved from Eglin Air Force Base to Fort Chaffee. Identifiable costs were absorbed under the normal operating budget, including the detailing of a systems analyst to the staff of the Interagency Task Force for Indochina (IATF).

D. OFFICE OF THE COMPTROLLER OF THE ARMY (OCA)

In order to provide a concise summary of funding, reimbursement, and accounting procedures for Operations NEW LIFE/NEW ARRIVALS, certain assumptions concerning contingency type operations which are unprogrammed requirements must be noted and appreciated.

The Office of the Secretary of Defense tasked Headquarters, Department of the Army, for an emergency cost estimate at the outset of the refugee operations by appropriation and element of expense for the purpose of initial planning. An initial cost estimate of $60 - $65 million was consequently provided to OSD. The actual expense of the operation at each facility is reflected in the chart of incremental costs incurred by the Army [see p. II-D-4].

The Department of the Army does not include reserve funds for contingency operations in its normal budget, neither does DA nor MACOM's retain funds for such operations. These operations are undertaken on the assumption that expenses beyond normal operating costs, i.e., incremental costs, will be reimbursed by the Federal agency outside of the Department of Defense making the request for military participation. Commands that provide assistance will absorb the costs initially from existing available funds utilizing automatic reimbursement procedures. Department of the Army funds are used temporarily to defray costs which accrue beyond normal Army operating expenses and which are directly chargeable to or caused by the contingency operations. Instructions on implementation of this policy were disseminated to all concerned Army comptrollers for Operations NEW LIFE/NEW ARRIVALS [see p. V-A-11 and pp. V-A-42/43].

Reimbursement requests (billings) were submitted to the organization whose directive caused the incremental cost of the assistance to be incurred with an indication of the location, code name, etc., of the expenses. An addendum sheet that specified an element of expense breakout by appropriation was attached to each bill. In the refugee program, expenses regarded as incremental costs encompassed the following expenses: temporary civilian help, overtime, travel and per diem of military and civilian Army personnel, consumable items issued, transportation (personnel, supplies, and equipment), port loading/off-loading, handling (air, ocean, and inland waterway), repair/reconditioning of returned nonconsumable items, nonreturned supplies or equipment), repair parts for operating areas, packing of supplies and equipment, and POL (including aviation POL). A breakout of incremental costs by object class is shown in the accompanying illustration [see p. II-D-5]. The prompt validation of all questionable charges must be determined for reimbursement purposes with outside agencies prior to the incurrence of any costs.

Procedures for installation accounting were established for contingencies in accordance with Army Regulations 37-108, 37-110, and 37-111.

The total value of charges was separately accumulated for each agency outside DOD. Charges and collections were recorded and reported in the normal manner as prescribed by regulations. Returned supplies and equipment were credited toward the applicable account of all returns to the Army Stock Fund. Billing was submitted on Standard Form 1080 with supporting documents to respective MACOM's who in turn consolidated bills for submission to Headquarters, Department of the Army.

The Office of the Comptroller of the Army maintained, managed, and sought reimbursement for all costs incurred by the Army in support of Operations BABYLIFT, NEW LIFE, and NEW ARRIVALS. Policies and guidance were established by OCA for financial management systems which handled estimated total obligations amounting to $61.9 million [see p. V-C-2].

E. OFFICE OF THE ASSISTANT CHIEF OF STAFF FOR INTELLIGENCE (OACSI)

The US Army Intelligence Agency (USAINTA) at the request of FORSCOM and direction of OACSI provided counterintelligence support to refugee operations by establishing temporary Resident Offices at Forts Chaffee and Indiantown Gap in order to carry on liaison with military and civilian agencies at each location. The mission was to develop any information where a reasonable basis existed to indicate a threat to Army personnel, facilities, or equipment. Maintenance of liaison, routine monitoring of demonstrations, interpreter assistance where possible, and coordination with investigative agencies were primary activities of the Resident Offices.

Units providing support to Operation NEW ARRIVALS were the 525th Military Intelligence Group at Fort Chaffee and 902d Military Intelligence Group at Fort Indiantown Gap, with the former organization also establishing liaison with the refugee center at Camp Pendleton. A variety of diverse actions was accomplished, including the location of specific refugees for interviews or debriefings, supply of information on illegal activities to civilian law enforcement authorities, assistance to the Secret Service during President Ford's visit to Fort Chaffee, intelligence liaison and briefings for Task Force NEW ARRIVALS, physical and document security for center Task Force headquarters, service as a military intelligence point of contact for civilian investigative agencies, and briefings on intelligence aspects of OPLANS. The Fort Chaffee Resident Office functioned between 29 April and 20 December 1975 employing nine special agents on a rotational basis, and the Fort Indiantown Gap Resident Office was operational from 20 May to 15 December 1975 utilizing a total of six special agents.

F. OFFICE OF THE ADJUTANT GENERAL (OTAG)

In a matter that was of significance to those service members who were sponsoring Indochinese refugees, the Adjutant General Center dispatched a message outlining both Post Exchange (PX) and theater privileges as they affected militarily sponsored evacuees. This guidance addressed the issue of both individual and group or unit sponsorships and provided policy for installation commanders in administering authorization of these privileges. A separate discussion of the actual Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) operations in support of the special requirements posed by the Indochinese refugee program follows.

ARMY AND AIR FORCE EXCHANGE SERVICE (AAFES)

In the Pacific, the Philippines Regional Exchange (PRE) rendered the first major AAFES assistance to the Indochina evacuees at Clark Air Force Base when cafeteria services were used to serve 6,000 to 7,000 meals per day for refugees who were overtaxing the base dining facilities. Bakery and dairy plants operated 24 hours a day to support 71,000 refugees processed through Subic Bay. The Hawaii Regional Exchange (HRE) provided merchandise from its stocks for evacuee requirements (e.g. personal items and accessories). The Guam Exchange (GE) supplied basic merchandise such as toothbrushes, toothpaste, baby bottles and nipples, towels, diapers, and washcloths. Fifty thousand packages of chopsticks were shipped to Guam. The GE supported the Air Force and the Navy refugee activities with bakery products including, "nutri-buns." Wake Island received merchandise from HRE to support its refugee operations.

In the United States, exchange support was provided in order for refugees to purchase basic items of convenience and necessity not supplied by the US Government through facilities at Forts Chaffee and Indiantown Gap (as well as Eglin AFB). AAFES menus were altered in an attempt to accommodate food preferences of the refugees. AAFES procurement channels were utilized to purchase $3 million worth of winter clothing for Fort Chaffee. The Oklahoma Area Exchange (OKAX) served Fort Chaffee through the activation of a total of 8 retail, 6 food, 1 service station, 8 concessions, and 63 vending facilities to accommodate refugees and center personnel in addition to supporting USAR and ARNG troops performing Annual Training (AT) and the supporting USAR and ARNG troops performing Annual Training (AT) and the normal retired and dependent community. Fort Indiantown Gap required renovation of facilities and modification of military buildings for retail operations, installation of a small snack bar, and operation of a "meals-on-wheels" program as well as barber, laundry, dry cleaning, and alteration services.

Attendance at free showings of 16-millimeter movies totalled almost one million patrons with IATF reimbursing AAFES for the service ($40,000). IATF also reimbursed AAFES a total of $43,000 for incremental costs incurred in providing exchange facilities at the installations concerned. The short lead time for ordering items, lack of personnel, and language problems - other than those overcome by improvised signs in Vietnamese - presented some difficulties in providing service.

G. OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF ENGINEERS (OCE)

The Office of the Chief of Engineers provided substantial assistance in the selection of suitable installation sites for US Army supported refugee reception centers. For this purpose information was developed by OCE on the following: location, acreage, troop and family housing, medical facilities, military and commercial airfield facilities, climatic conditions, and other pertinent data including problems related to the environmental impact of the center on site selection. Actual OCE representation was provided for several on-site review visitations.

in the area of logistics, the Corps of Engineers - through Facilities Engineers - provided base operations support for utilities, sanitation services, and in the upkeep of facilities.

The Fort Chaffee sewage system was increased from a maximum population capacity of 9,000 to 28,000 by construction of two sewer lagoons comprising 56 acres with the necessary aeration equipment also added. This work was accomplished in part by the Corps of Engineers and completed before the arrival of refugees en masse. At Fort Chaffee the natural gas supply contract for uninterrupted service was threatened by the prospect of prolonged use of the installation in cold weather. The Contract Office of the Office of the Chief of Engineers played a role in resolving this problem.

At Fort Indiantown Gap (FIG), OCE provided invaluable assistance and advice in repair and upgrading of the sewage system to preclude sanitation problems for the incoming refugees. When the decision was announced to extend the refugee operations beyond early fall, OCE immediately conducted extensive studies on the rehabilitation and/or conversion of the heating systems at both Forts Chaffee and Indiantown Gap relative to expediency and economy.

During the phaseout/closedown of center operations, OCE provided technical assistance on the restoration of facilities to pre-refugee conditions. This encompassed estimates on road repair, external and internal repair of buildings (including painting), and reconversion of buildings to their original status. Restoration activities of both installations also necessitated complex and extensive contractual negotiations, most of which were awarded and monitored by OCE.

H. OFFICE OF THE SURGEON GENERAL (OTSG)

Initial OJCS planning guidance called for 200,000 evacuees to be concentrated in two 100,000-person safe havens each having four subcenters of 25,000 refugees. Medical planning called for one divisional medical company or one separate medical clearing company per 25,000 refugees. Since the use of in-place hospitals was not anticipated, one 400-bed evacuation hospital or its equivalent was recommended in the planning guidance for each 100,000 refugees. Preventive medicine teams were also visualized as necessary during the initial planning phase. At a tri-service meeting on 25 April 1976, Guam was identified as a refugee safe haven with the Navy agreeing to provide inpatient care and preventive medicine support but requiring assistance in furnishing outpatient facilities and treatment. The Air Force would provide aerospace staging facilities at departure and entry points.

Army Staff plans were developed as a result of discussions among the Office of the Surgeon General, Forces Command, and Health Services Command. The need was identified to augment medical units on deployment with specially designed packages to meet the requirements of outpatient care for refugees, especially nursing care and preventive medicine, by adding personnel and special medical equipment to handle infants, children, and females. The following types of units from Forts Sam Houston, Ord, Jackson, Bragg, Meade, and Lewis were deployed: one medical group headquarters and headquarters company (command and control), six medical detachments (veterinary support, environmental sanitation, ambulance support, epidemiology service, entomology service, and medical maintenance), and two medical clearing companies (outpatient medical care). These units were supported by a specifically organized Army medical laboratory. Each medical company was also augmented by medical/surgical care nurses, pediatric nurses, pediatricians, and OB/GYN specialists, with community health nurses added to the epidemiology detachments. Tasking by a Department of the Army message (2510502 Apr 75, subject: Operation NEW ARRIVALS: Army Medical Support Requirement) caused the deployment of units to Guam within forty-eight hours of notification and identified key augmentation personnel.

Support by the Military Services of CONUS refugee centers included, but was not limited to, billeting, messing, essential medical treatment, transportation, installation security, and center administration. At both Forts Chaffee and Indiantown Gap inpatient/outpatient services, selected preventive medicine and veterinary support, plus the assignment of a social worker at Fort Indiantown Gap, were provided in addition to 100-bed field hospitals. For total health care, additional pediatrics, OB/GYN, laboratory, screening team, and preventive medicine specialists were included.

In summary, the two Army supported refugee centers provided total inpatient/outpatient services to the refugees. The only benefits not provided were artificial limbs, orthopedic aids, and special optical lenses. Dental support was limited to the screening of patients and emergency care. The Office of the Surgeon General dispatched messages which provided guidance on refugee eligibility for health care [see p. V-A-25 and pp. V-A-31/32], use of refugee medical and paramedical personnel in centers [see p. V-A-27], etc., with the Department of State and Office of the Secretary of Defense defining other areas of medical policy [see pp. V-A-28/29 and pp. V-A-47/48]. The total number of personnel of the Army Medical Department, including assets from both Forces Command and Health Services Command, participating in Operations NEW LIFE/NEW ARRIVALS consisted of the following:

	MC	DC	AMC	Other OFF	ENL	Total
Guam	21	0	9	24	323	377
Chaffee	12	2	50	17	244	325
FIG	11	7	38	19	202	277
Total	44	9	97	60	769	979

A ninety-day rotation policy allowed FORSCOM, in coordination with the Office of the Surgeon General, to alleviate personnel problems and to replace total medical units and/or required personnel with the development of TDA's instead of TOE's which allowed flexibility applicable to refugee center reduction and drawdown.

US ARMY HEALTH SERVICES COMMAND (HSC)

Four hundred and twenty-three HSC personnel (279 officers/144 enlisted) performed an average of 71 days TDY on Guam or at Forts Chaffee or Indiantown Gap in support of Operation NEW ARRIVALS for a total of 30,541 man-days exclusive of travel. Personnel came from every subordinate Medical Center (MEDCEN) and Medical Department Activity (MEDDAC) except Panama, Alaska, and Fort Stewart and represented a wide range of professional specialties. HSC support on Guam ran from 25 April to 15 July 1975, at Fort Chaffee from 29 April to 22 December 1975, and at Fort Indiantown Gap from 22 May to 15 December 1975. Medical material and back-up maintenance support were provided by Fort Sill in the case of Fort Chaffee and by Carlisle Barracks MEDDAC for Fort Indiantown Gap. The cost of medical supplies and equipment for Operations NEW LIFE/NEW ARRIVALS (not including credit for amounts returned at end of program) was as follows:

Guam	$ 78,281
Fort Chaffee	660,789
Fort Indiantown Gap	810,621

Health Care Costs	Guam	Chaffee	FIG
Outpatient visits	$255,849	$262,818	$124,617
Immunizations	32,736	30,564	1,874
Inpatient charges	-	193,365	142,360

US ARMY MEDICAL MATERIAL AGENCY (USAMMA)

As a field operating agency of the Office of The Surgeon General, USAMMA supported refugee operations on Guam by issuing a laboratory set from prepositioned war reserve stocks. Additionally, USAMMA monitored requisitions for line item shortages from medical clearing companies administering health care for the Indochinese evacuees.

ARMED SERVICES MEDICAL REGULATING OFFICE (ASMRO)

Identification of destination hospitals and cite numbers were provided by ASMRO for refugees requiring immediate medical treatment on arrival in the United States. Of the 352 refugee cases regulated, Fort Chaffee received 98, Fort Indiantown Gap 56, Camp Pendleton 112, Eglin AFB 85, and 1 case to the Public Health Service. Destination points for incoming patients were the refugee reception centers, with Public Health Service Hospitals used in cases where patients required long-term hospitalization.

I. OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF CHAPLAINS (OCCH)

Agency participation included planning chaplain coverage and religious ministries in refugee center operations and related activities in order to meet the special spiritual needs of the Indochinese evacuees. Chaplains and enlisted assistants were sent to Guam, Forts Chaffee and Indiantown Gap, served on staffs of the Army commanders, and provided ministries to the refugees as well as US personnel. This urgent and important task was in recognition of the value of sustaining the religious fiber of the refugee population in view of their immediate need for stability and coherence.

The Chief of Chaplains inaugurated the Chapel Indochinese Refugee Sponsorship Program whereby local chapel communities sponsored and assisted refugees, designated offerings of money and goods, and aided in other spiritual and material ways. This effort was undertaken in the spirit of the appeal by the Office of the Secretary of Defense for total support by the military community of the Indochinese refugee sponsorship and resettlement program.

The major tasks which were faced consisted of identifying refugee clergy, securing Vietnamese or Vietnamese-speaking clergy, crisis intervention, dealing with interfaith and intercultural issues, and providing information from the Department of the Army on evacuee religious groups. Of these major tasks, securing Buddhist clergy posed a special problem. Protestant and Catholic clergy could be found among the refugee population or provided from civilian or military sources. However, Buddhist monks of the proper sect were not available here in the United States and this affected a large portion of the refugee population. A partial solution was to contract for the services of four Buddhist clergy of different sects and this alleviated the situation to some degree. A similar problem had existed at Orote Point, Guam and was resolved in a like manner.

J. OFFICE OF THE JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL (OTJAG)

The Office of The Judge Advocate General provided legal advice to other Army Staff agencies in support of refugee operations. OTJAG was primarily involved with the crisis management team dealing with the disturbances on Guam by those evacuees seeking to return to Indochina; with assuring a continued natural gas supply to Fort Chaffee; with questions of military authority over the refugees; with the authority of Federal agencies and non-appropriated fund instrumentalities to hire refugees; and with the eligibility of refugees to enter the US Armed Forces. Of these legal issues, military authority over the refugees and the eligibility of refugees for non-appropriated fund hire or enlistment in the Services were subjects of frequent attention and general interest.

The degree to which the military could exercise police functions in regard to refugees housed on military installations was limited to the following areas: the authority to protect US Government property and personnel; the authority to exclude refugees from certain portions of installations unrelated to refugee processing; and the authority of the commander to maintain peace and order by suppressing riots or other disturbances. The Department of State did not initially recognize the limitations of military authority over civilians while they were present within the reception centers.

The authority of Federal agencies and non-appropriated fund instrumentalities to hire refugees as well as their eligibility for military service was affected by their immigration status. As parolees and, therefore, non-resident aliens, the refugees by law were ineligible to enlist in the Regular or Reserve Components of the Army. The same restriction applies to appointments as commissioned officers. Except for certain special jobs such as language instructors or intelligence consultants, parolees are ineligible for Civil Service employment. Parolees are, however, eligible to compete with citizens for jobs with nonappropriated fund instrumentalities. To adjust this situation and to allow for greater employment opportunities, statutory changes are required. A bill (s. 2239, 94th Cong.) was introduced to waive the restriction on the enlistment of parolees for a limited time, but did not pass.

K. NATIONAL GUARD BUREAU (NGB)

The participation of the Army National Guard was primarily restricted to the initial phase of planning the refugee operations. National Guard Bureau personnel augmented the Army Operations Center and assisted in determining the impact of the location of refugee reception centers at those installations normally used for National Guard annual training.

L. OFFICE OF THE CHIEF, ARMY RESERVE (OCAR)

Participation by the Office of the Chief, Army Reserve, in refugee affairs involved staff coordination by the Personnel Division, OCAR, in selecting volunteer members of the Army Reserve for duty with the Joint Refugee Information Clearing Office (JRICO), which was under the staff supervision of ODCSPER. Additionally, support of the requirement to provide selected USAR Civil Affairs personnel for utilization at the refugee reception centers was addressed by OCAR. Details of the implementation of these two actions are to be found in the JRICO and FORSCOM after action reports, respectively. Both requirements, illustrating USAR involvement in the humanitarian effort to aid Indo-chinese evacuees, commanded public affairs attention and attained media coverage through OCAR information channels.

M. OFFICE, CHIEF OF LEGISLATIVE LIAISON, OSA (OCLL)

The Office, Chief of Legislative Liaison, Office of the Secretary of the Army, was involved primarily in maintaining relations with the Congressional Delegations of those States (Arkansas and Pennsylvania) where refugee centers were located and coordinating Army Staff input for responses to Congressional inquiries.

N. OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF PUBLIC AFFAIRS (OCPA)

The Office of the Chief of Public Affairs was engaged in a full spectrum of activities in support of Operation NEW ARRIVALS. Planning, public information, community relations, and command information were conducted in conjunction with two programs: the demand to keep the general public informed on the status of the refugee program and the effort by the Services to assist the military community in matters pertaining to refugee location and sponsorship undertaken by the Army through participation in the Joint Refugee Information Clearing Office (JRICO) which was under ODCSPER auspices.

Planning and execution followed the basic guidance of the Departments of State and Defense with external programs accomplished by the major command concerned; FORSCOM, in the case of Army, prepared detailed plans and assigned Public Affairs Officers (PAO) in the grade of Colonel to each site. An annex to FORSCOM OPLAN NEW ARRIVALS provided instructions for the FORSCOM Information Officer (IO) and on-site DOD public affairs spokesman (a FORSCOM IO) while installation and reception center commanders outlined basic public affairs policy and guidance. This mission required providing maximum information to the public and internal audiences concerning the evacuation of refugees from Southeast Asia. Public affairs detachments issued press releases, conducted community relations, and carried out extensive internal information programs for the refugees (daily newspapers, loudspeaker, radio, etc.).

Command and control were exercised by the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense, Public Affairs [OASD(PA)], which established a special project team in coordination with the Department of State. This team issued guidance to Public Affairs Officers at each site and answered queries, with only peripheral Service involvement.

A specific issue that required an intensive information campaign was the one raised by the Army Reserve and Army National Guard that they might be displaced from their annual training sites at Forts Chaffee and Indiantown Gap because of refugee operations. Commander, FORSCOM, quickly solved this matter by erecting a tent city at Fort Chaffee that accommodated five of the six brigades scheduled for Annual Training 1975. One brigade chose to train elsewhere. At Fort Indiantown Gap, the problem was one of changing billets and opening up areas not previously used. Some military schooling normally conducted at Fort Indiantown Gap was temporarily moved to Fort Meade, Maryland, with minimum turmoil. The information program developed to inform the Army Reserve and the Army National Guard of the situation at the training sites was every effective.

A. NATURAL RESOURCES AND ENVIRONMENTAL CONSIDERATIONS

In the process of selecting the two Army installations in CONUS to be utilized as refugee reception centers, one of the first undertakings in evaluating the suitability of a site was the drafting of an environmental impact statement. The task of drawing up this type of statement compels the commander to critically examine and analyze the effect of the proposed action or mission on the environment. At both Forts Chaffe and Indiantown Gap it was found that the sewage systems were inadequate in light of the number of refugees that were anticipated to be located there under Operation NEW ARRIVALS. The problem at Fort Chaffe was that the sewage treatment facility had primary treatment lagoons that would be inadequate. It was determined that the outflow and seepage would pollute the receiving streams and local waterways. A two-cell lagoon covering an area of fifty-six acres was constructed using a military labor force at a cost of $250,000. This expense was not reimbursed by the Interagency Task Force for Indochina (IATF) but rather funded by DOD as a needed improvement to the total utility system of the installation. The situation at Fort Indiantown Gap was of a different nature and presented a more difficult engineering task: that of replacing the sewage line system. This was an improvement that had been included on the post list of projects to be funded during fiscal year 1976, and the Commander, FORSCOM, lacked the necessary means to undertake it during fiscal year 1975. In order to start this needed work, IATF in early June 1975 made the required funds available to the Department of Defense on a reimbursable basis. The project was completed at a cost of over $350,000 and IATF was reimbursed in fiscal year 1976. These two projects represent the type of upgrading or modernization of existing facilities that may need to be done to get a program operational, depending on the status of the installation sites selected and number of people to be accommodated.

Any type of contingency program tends to place unusual demands on other systems such as the natural resources available to any given area or facility. At Fort Chaffee the supply of both natural gas and water presented a problem. The maximum amount of gas allocated under contract for Army consumption was predicated on the full operation of the post for year-round training. The Army had not used or demanded that much natural gas for several years, and in the meantime, the suppliers, faced with an increased demand, extended service to additional customers. During the refugee operations at Fort Chaffee, as it became apparent that a number of refugees would remain there through the heating season, the gas supplier alerted the Army that it would be unable to fulfill the terms of the contract because of "transmission difficulties." This meant that the natural gas supplier apparently did not have the capability to put the requisite amount of gas through the existing pipeline system in order to accommodate all of the customers who used the system. The terms of the contract were stated in such a way that the Army demand for gas had to be satisfied even if some other customers suffered reductions or suspension in service. This situation contained the ingredients of a potentially controversial issue in that the customers most likely to be affected were the large industrial firms which employed many people in the area of Fort Smith, Arkansas. The Army proceeded on two tacks: first, continued discussions with the supplier in an attempt to bring about compliance with the original agreement without renegotiating the contract or constructing a new pipeline to improve the flow of gas and, second, an attempt to identify other sources of natural gas that could satisfy the requirement. Pursuing the latter option, a number of natural gas wells at Fort Chaffee had been leased by civilian firms under conditions which provided for the US Government to receive royalties in cash or in kind. An effort to have these payments made in natural gas for use at Fort Chaffee proved to be unacceptable to the Department of Interior, which served as the administrator of the lease. In the meantime, those facilities at Fort Chaffee that could be heated by other kinds of fuel were converted accordingly, and the overall need for natural gas diminished. As time passed and the refugee population at Fort Chaffee was reduced, the issue of the natural gas resolved itself. The relatively small number of days during October and November when heat was required also abated the anxiety over this situation, and by December, when the refugee population had become relatively small, the supply of gas was more than adequate.

Difficulty arose over the price rather than the supply of water to Fort Chaffee when the city of Fort Smith, Arkansas, as the water supplier, made it known that increased rates which had been in effect for all water customers would also apply to Fort Chaffee. As the Army contract negotiators took longer deliberating the situation than desired by the local officials, the area press carried publicity which reflected unfavorably on the Army position. The situation was rectified through the payment by the Army of the new water rates while negotiations were being continued to determine the obligations of the agreement between the city and the US Government.

The problems with natural gas and water at Fort Chaffee illustrate that nothing can be taken for granted in such cases and that a current, detailed evaluation of existing contracts and agreements must be made when planning and preparation for contingency operations such as the Indochinese refugee program are undertaken.

R. PREPARATION FOR WINTER OPERATION OF CENTERS

The need for the continued operation of the Army supported refugee centers into the winter months, once recognized, caused certain actions, including the improvement of the housing facilities at Forts Chaffee and Indiantown Gap, to be undertaken. Commander, FORSCOM, had been advised earlier of the possibility that operations would go on into the winter and both of the Army refugee reception centers had submitted their recommendations for winterization as directed. The Department of the Army forwarded these recommendations in a memorandum to Mr. von Marbod, PDASD(C), who subsequently obtained IATF approval to expend funds to execute the proposed winterization plans. On 5 August US Army Forces Command was directed to proceed with those actions necessary to prepare the two centers for sustained support of operations during the winter season. These preparations included installing or modifying heating systems, providing smoke detectors and alarms, hiring boiler firemen, and making arrangements for continued troop support.

The procurement of winter clothing for the refugees stemmed from a proposal which was advanced by the Army in July 1975. IATF agreed to the proposal, and estimates of the anticipated center population during the fall and winter were made. The Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) was requested to serve as the agent for IATF in developing clothing requirements for infants, children, and adult refugees.

through contact with suppliers and in generally overseeing procurement activities. Toward this end, clothing was ordered in August 1975 for delivery to Forts Chaffee and Indiantown Gap as soon as possible. However, from the time that population estimates were made and the order placed for the clothing to the actual arrival of the clothes at the centers in October and early November 1975, the refugee population had decreased significantly. The voluntary agencies (VOLAG's) matched sponsors and refugees for resettlement at a far faster rate than anticipated, which was beneficial to the program but left IATF with a great deal of winter clothing on its books. The late delivery of some of the clothing compounded the problem. To redress the situation, IATF contracted with the Salvation Army to operate a mail-order service from three warehouses at Fort Chaffee to process orders for clothing from those refugees already sponsored and relocated. Through the medium of the HEW refugee newspaper, New Life, and the voluntary agencies, plus other channels, the resettled refugees were informed of the availability of this clothing and instructed on how to order it. This mail-order procedure proved an efficient method of ensuring proper distribution of the clothing, guaranteeing that it reached those for whom it was intended. The Salvation Army distributed all of the winter clothing on hand in this manner and concluded the effort at Fort Chaffee in June 1976. In summary, procurement and distribution of clothing did present a problem at one stage, but the effort was managed in such a way that it offered all the refugees the opportunity to obtain proper clothing for the winter while simultaneously alleviating the financial burden of purchasing clothing which thousands of sponsors faced during the first few months of resettlement.

In another critical area, increasing the diet of the refugees in order to fortify them for the cold weather of an American winter was an essential planning factor considered in providing for the physical welfare of the refugees. Supplemental rations and other adjustments to the food services at the centers were consequently implemented to meet dietary requirements.

C. LEGAL JURISDICTION AND REPATRIATION

The legal status of the refugees from an immigration standpoint and the extent to which the military could exercise jurisdiction over them in the reception centers were two issues that surfaced early in Operations NEW LIFE/NEW ARRIVALS. Evacuees admitted to the United States under the terms of the Indochinese refugee program had been paroled into this country and consequently were both protected by and subject to its law. At the outset of Operation NEW LIFE on Guam, control was maintained by the military over the arriving refugees, but once the reception system was organized, Immigration and Naturalization Service officials and US Marshal Service personnel assumed the law enforcement role. The military controlled access to the installations, insuring that the refugee reception centers were secure from unauthorized entries [see p. V-A-26]. The US Magistrates or the local civilian courts located at or near the sites of the military facilities concerned heard cases that involved violations of Federal or local laws, respectively. It should be noted, however, that the actual number of incidents necessitating court attention were few in proportion to the refugee population and its predicament [see pp. V-A-49/50].

Repatriation was an issue that attracted a good deal of international attention during the course of the Indochina refugee effort. Repatriation -- return to the country of origin -- remained a viable alternative available to the evacuees at all times and remains an option to those refugees resettled in the United States. The refugees who desired repatriation made their decision known at various stages of processing; 1,400 refugees never went beyond the reception facilities on Guam because they declared their desire to return to Vietnam. From the outset, all repatriate matters were handled by representatives of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR). The US Government had no direct diplomatic channels with the Communist authorities in Vietnam and sought to use the established international avenue of approach offered by the United Nations in matters pertaining to the repatriates. In addition to the 1,400 potential repatriates situated on Guam, approximately two hundred evacuees at the four CONUS refugee reception centers expressed a desire to return to Vietnam. The repatriates at both Camp Pendleton and Fort Chaffee demonstrated in order to draw attention to their situation in an effort to expedite the repatriation process. North Vietnamese authorities and their provisional Communist government to the south conveyed via UNHCR representatives detailed questionnaires to be completed by the repatriates and forwarded to Vietnam where a decision would be reached regarding each individual's eligibility to return. It should be noted that the officials representing North and South Vietnam displayed neither enthusiasm nor any sense of urgency publically over the fate of the repatriates except in exploiting their plight for propaganda value.

During the months of July and August 1975, the repatriates on Guam agitated for a speedy return to Vietnam and blamed the US Government for the delay in action. At one point the repatriates burned two U. S. Navy buildings to the ground in their compound at Asan Camp and injured Federal Marshals. The growing seriousness of these incidents was reflected in the detailed guidelines on legal and security matters issued to the refugee reception center authorities [see pp. V-A-53/56]. The repatriates also launched a campaign aimed at gaining support for the proposal that they be allowed to sail one of the nine Vietnamese registered vessels back to Vietnam. These ships were located in the harbor at Guam and had served as the means of escape for many of the fleeing Vietnamese refugees.

September saw the relocation and consolidation of all identified repatriates on the island of Guam; those coming from the US mainland and those already on Guam totaled approximately sixteen hundred. This group was very restive and a constant source of concern for both civil and military officials and the US Marshals responsible for maintaining law and order. During this period of time the US Government requested UNHCR representatives to step up the effort to determine when the Vietnam authorities would permit repatriation to begin. In late September an UNHCR representative visited North Vietnam in an attempt to elicit Hanoi's position on the status of the repatriates. Simultaneously, the situation on Guam became potentially explosive and plans were made to cope with a major civil disturbance if the repatriates should riot as they threatened. The force of US Marshals on Guam received loans of equipment under the provisions of the Department of the Army Civil Disturbance Plan known as GARDEN PLOT, and the number of military personnel who could be called upon to support the US Marshals was increased in the event approval was granted by the President of the United States for their use. When US Government attempts to accomplish repatriation through established channels did not appear to gain any headway, consideration was given to what became known as the ship option, or allowing the repatriates to sail one of the ships anchored in the harbor back to Vietnam under their own control. Sufficient personnel to comprise a suitable ship's company could be formed from among the assembled repatriates.

Early on 30 September 1975, the UNHCR representative stopped at Guam on his return from North Vietnam and indicated that no final decision had been reached regarding the repatriates' situation and that no further developments on allowing them to return appeared to be forthcoming. By this time the repatriation crisis was such that a military task force had been activated to control any potential civil disturbance and Rear Admiral K. J. Carroll, Commander in Chief, Pacific Representative (CINCPACREP) Guam, was appointed task force commander. The staff of CINCPACREP Guam was augmented at his request by two officers from the Department of the Army Staff who were experts in civil disturbance policy, planning, and operations. Late in the same day, 30 September, word was received on Guam that the so-called ship option had been approved as US Government policy at national level. When this information was relayed to the repatriates, it served to defuse the critical situation.

The Department of Defense provided guidance on preparation of the ship Thuong Tin I for the voyage to Vietnam, and needed repairs and refitting began almost immediately. When repairs and outfitting had been completed and after satisfactory seatrials, a final certification of the ship's seaworthiness was issued by an independent ship surveyor from Lloyds of London. Fifteen hundred and forty-six repatriates sailed for their homeland from Guam at 1247 hours on 16 October 1975 on board the Vietnamese ship Thuong Tin I which was reported to have arrived in South Vietnamese waters on 31 October, thereby formally ending an unusual episode in the refugee operations.

D. EMPLOYMENT AND ENLISTMENT OF PAROLED REFUGEES

One of the major concerns confronting the Indochinese refugees following their processing, sponsorship, and release from the reception centers was employment. Unfortunately, the United States was experiencing economic difficulties to the extent that the labor market, affected by the high rate of unemployment, failed to offer Vietnamese and Cambodians resettling in this country the full range of opportunities that utilized their skills or satisfied their desire to be gainfully employed. This issue as it impacted on the Army had two perspectives: first, there existed within the refugee population a sizable number of evacuees, previously associated with the US Government in Southeast Asia as local national employees, contract workers, etc., who sought to secure similar positions or related jobs with Federal agencies including the Department of the Army. Second, among the Indochinese evacuees were many who formerly had been members of the Armed Forces of the Republic of Vietnam or the Khmer Republic and who aspired to serve in the US Armed Forces, particularly the US Army, with which many had fought side-by-side, been trained, or held close associations for a number of years in Indochina.

As far as civilian employment was concerned, Federal statutes and Civil Service Commission regulations governing the recruitment and employment of aliens precluded US Government agencies from hiring those Indochinese admitted to the US in parole status, save for a limited number of excepted positions. Attempts by concerned members of Congress to introduce legislation to change existing laws or waive regulations to favor the Indochinese were not forthcoming and, to this date, these refugees still are barred from Federal employment as long as they remain non-resident aliens in a parole status.

Paralleling the situation of those refugees desiring to be employed by the Federal Government was the circumstance which faced those Vietnamese and Cambodians who sought to enlist or be commissioned in the US Army or other Services. As in the case of US Government civil employment with Federal agencies, enlistment or commissioning is contingent upon an immigration status not enjoyed by those refugees who were paroled into this country. Admission to the United States as a permanent resident alien is a prerequisite for enlistment in the Regular or Reserve Components or for appointment as an officer in the Regular Army. Consequently, many refugees of varying ages and degrees of military experience were thwarted in their effort to be integrated into the US Armed Forces.

Therefore, until such time as the Indochinese refugees are granted the status of resident aliens en masse or unless special legislation is introduced and passed by the US Congress, save for a limited number of exceptions, none of the over one hundred and thirty thousand refugees admitted to the United States will be permitted to work for the Federal Government or allowed to enlist in the Armed Forces.

E. GENERAL ACCOUNTING OFFICE / CONGRESSIONAL OVERSIGHT

Based on periodic examinations of the Indochina refugee program, the General Accounting Office (GAO) prepared a series of reports for Congress [see Bibliography]. The areas of concern on which GAO primarily focused were the management of resources dedicated to Operations NEW LIFE/NEW ARRIVALS, interagency billing and reimbursement procedures for refugee support, and compliance with the intent of Congress by all agencies of the Federal Government vis-a-vis the expenditure of funds appropriated for the evacuation and resettlement effort. Within the overall context of these investigations, GAO was specifically critical of some aspects of Army participation in the total Department of Defense effort to support this humanitarian undertaking. Appropriate corrective measures were taken, although in some cases the Departments of Defense and/or Army were satisfied with both the methods and results of the action which had been pursued. It was to be expected that operations of this magnitude would come under close scrutiny and be monitored by Congressional watchdogs; therefore policy guidance was enunciated early in order to maintain control over all expenditures and the financial conduct of the operations. Fiscal planning and proper auditing resulted in accomplishment of the mission with the maximum conservation of personnel, material, and other resources.

The reports and hearings generated by the Subcommittee to Investigate Problems Connected with Refugees and Escapees of the US Senate Committee on the Judiciary contain numerous references to the participation of the Military Services in the Indochinese refugee program. One representative Congressional comment from among many in a similar vein states: "Special commendation should go to the particular military commanders who set up refugee [reception centers] in such a short time for so many people and to the members of our volunteer Armed Forces who toiled so diligently for so many hours to make the [centers] ready to receive these unfortunate Indochina refugees and to feed and care for them." In general, comments such as the one cited and the recognition accorded the roles played by the Army and the other Services in accomplishing Operations NEW LIFE and NEW ARRIVALS reflected a dominant attitude expressed in many quarters of the US Government and characterized the complimentary remarks from Congressional sources. Numerous hearings before various committees of both Houses of Congress provide historical information and evaluations of the efficiency and efficacy of the support and special assistance rendered the Indochinese refugees by the military. Documentation on this subject can be found in the legislative entries listed in the Bibliography for further reference.

F. MILITARY AWARDS AND RECOGNITION OF CIVILIAN PARTICIPATION:

In order to duly recognize the unique and important nature of the Indo-chinese evacuation and resettlement effort and the fact that it was for the most part a joint operation, the Department of Defense authorized the award of the Joint Service Commendation Medal (JSCM) to particularly deserving individual members of the United States Armed Forces who participated in Operations BABYLIFT, NEW LIFE, and NEW ARRIVALS. Approximately six hundred recommendations for the JSCM were submitted by US Army Major Commands of which 320 were approved. Another six hundred awards, including a limited number of the Legion of Merit as well as the Meritorious Service Medal and Army Commendation Medal, were presented to deserving Army personnel. Also, appropriate use was made of the Department of the Army Certificate of Appreciation for presentation to those soldiers whose individual performance, though exemplary, did not merit a higher award.

With the end of the refugee resettlement effort in sight, the Director of the Interagency Task Force (IATF), Mrs. Julia V. Taft, recommended to the President that a series of awards be approved in order to properly recognize those who had participated in the refugee evacuation and resettlement program. Among those awards mentioned by Mrs. Taft were a joint civilian and military (IATF and DOD) certificate of appreciation and a military humanitarian service ribbon. Approximately thirty-five hundred Department of the Army civilians, military dependents, and civilian volunteers who worked in conjunction with the Army were recipients of the joint Interagency Task Force for Indochina/Department of Defense certificate of appreciation. The award of a humanitarian service ribbon would recognize service in the refugee operations by members of all Components of the Armed Forces. After thorough consideration and a complete review of its merits, the recommendation by IATF for the creation of a humanitarian service ribbon was endorsed by the Department of Defense in response to the interest displayed by the White House, and retitled the Humanitarian Service Medal (HSM). In concept, this service medal for humanitarian action would be authorized for service members participating in support of major contingency operations directed from national level and having international dimensions, such as the Indochinese refugee program. The HSM was established by President Ford in an Executive Order signed on 19 January 1977. Department of Defense implementing instructions on the award of this service medal will follow.

PART IV - LESSONS LEARNED AND RECOMMENDATIONS

PART IV - LESSONS LEARNED

[Note: The comments incorporated in the ensuing analysis are divided into two general categories: a specification of significant planning factors and a discussion of problems accompanied by recommendations. Further, principles suggested by the Director, IATF, for coordinating refugee resettlement programs are included. Operations NEW LIFE and NEW ARRIVALS marshalled many of same resources common to the support of military operations and were unprecedented undertakings for the Army as well as the other Services. The significant planning factors which are offered for future consideration in the management of similar operations have as their bases a number of assumptions: to wit, that the Army would be called upon to provide support in the form of personnel, material, and facilities, to receive and care for a large group of foreign nationals evacuated to within the territorial limits of the United States. The section dealing with specific problems and correlative recommendations encompasses broad, general points which have application to Department of the Army and Major Commands rather than to either subordinate command or unit levels of consideration.]

A. SIGNIFICANT PLANNING FACTORS

The Indochinese refugee program dramatically illustrated that specific planning factors are essential to their successful execution. Recognizing the fact that all of the points discussed below would not be operative in every future situation, it is important that they be considered on a selective basis in view of unique requirements which potential operations may present.

(1) Organization

-- A national level organization must be established at the outset of a refugee program to coordinate relations and activities among all involved civilian and military agencies of the US Government.

-- Coordination among civilian and military task force elements, local government officials, civic and business leaders and with the news media should be achieved in order to facilitate productive public relations at refugee reception center level.

-- Refugee programs require the assignment of full-time Department of State, Immigration and Naturalization Service, and other Federal agency representatives. Although the Military Departments may be tasked with reception center management and support, it is the Federal agencies which ultimately must make all policy decisions that affect the refugees. On-site civilian liaison officers are indispensable in obtaining and disseminating guidance from US Government agencies.

(2) Refugee Welfare

-- It is essential that current data on the culture and the customs of the refugees be available for program planning and the orientation of US personnel.

-- Appropriate language instruction and an orientation on life in the United States should be commenced as soon as possible for all refugees.

-- Extensive recreational programs are important since they form an integral part of reception center activities

(3) Refugee Health Care

-- Vector control, a necessity when there is an influx of large numbers of refugees, and the requirement for the commitment of military entomologists prior to the arrival of refugees are crucial in order to control and minimize potential health hazards.

-- Procedures for medical screening and determining the disposition of ill and injured refugees prior to their arrival in the United States should be established.

-- Establishment during early processing of a system of priority for onward movement of infants, pregnant women, the aged, and other high medical risk refugees should be compulsory.

-- Early identification of immunization requirements is critical in order to preclude the possibility of serious diseases or epidemics.

-- Medical specialties should be provided on the basis of age distribution of the refugees. A large proportion of the Vietnamese and Cambodian refugees were children which resulted in the requirement for pediatricians and general medical officers in excess of those available.

(4) Refugee Legal Status

-- Both Federal and local jurisdiction over refugees must be determined and appropriate guidance issued prior to their arrival.

-- The immigration status of the refugees should be ascertained by the Department of Justice (Immigration and Naturalization Service) and disseminated to all agencies as soon as possible.

(5) Military Personnel

-- Every effort should be made to arrange for contract services in lieu of utilizing military personnel to support mess operations and refuse collection.

-- When assignment to a refugee operation of qualified linguists with current proficiency cannot be met by the military, arrangement for such services should be contracted immediately.

-- Use of qualified volunteer Reserve component personnel is encouraged once the refugee centers are in operation and operating procedures are established.

(6) Facilities

-- The impact of proposed refugee reception facilities on the environment should be promptly and fully evaluated.

-- Assessment of the condition of installation facilities should be rapidly completed in order that repairs and renovations can be made by the military and/or civilian contractors.

-- That a procurement team, the chief of which should have the authority of a head of a procurement activity, be detailed or assigned to each refugee reception center with sole responsibility for responding on procurement matters related to the refugee operation.

B. PROBLEMS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

(1) Areas of civilian and military responsibility

-- Discussion: Delineation of the official role of each senior civil coordinator and the scope of his authority was not announced in the early stages of the operation which caused some confusion in civilian and military chains of command over approval for projects.

-- Recommendation: Upon activation of a joint civilian and military task force, areas of responsibility and authority should be immediately ascertained and delineated for the benefit of all officials concerned.

(2) Population control and collection of demographic data

-- Discussion: Throughout the Indochinese refugee program, a number of methods for ascertaining statistical information and other data on the refugees was used. Simultaneous arrivals and departures of refugees from staging areas and centers kept population figures in a constant state of flux thereby hampering the development of an accurate program census. Complicating the problem were the periodic reports submitted by many of the agencies - both civilian and military - that utilized various formats and were compiled for differing purposes.

-- Recommendation: That a single agency, military or civilian, collect and disseminate refugee population and other data for use by all agencies in planning operations and resettlement efforts.

(3) Department of the Army Staff

-- Discussion: Army Staff activity for the Indochinese refugee program was managed and coordinated by ODCSOPS. A response cell under the direction of the Director of Operations, ODCSOPS, was formed in the Army Operations Center (AOC) at the outset of the operation with ODCSLOG establishing a supporting Logistics Operations Center in the AOC.

-- Recommendation: The response cell proved to be an effective crisis management tool and a similar concept should be employed in all future operations when rapid, coordinated staff responses are required.

(4) Continuity of civilian task force staffing

-- Discussion: The practice of civilian agencies which rotated key personnel on a thirty-day basis caused disruptions in directing the program activities. This lack of continuity was offset by the military in some instances but did not totally compensate for the problem.

-- Recommendation: Civilian agencies must determine personnel requirements for the duration and recognize the value of continuity in such operations.

(5) Congressional liaison and public affairs

-- Discussion: In commencing the operation of refugee reception centers, the Army experienced initial resistance from State and local political leaders who expressed concern over the impact of Operation NEW ARRIVALS on their communities. Although Congressional delegations had been briefed, the information had not filtered down to local level. To alleviate existing and potential misunderstanding and apprehension, Task Force NEW ARRIVALS personnel met with civic leaders and businessmen to explain the political, social, and economic ramifications of Operation NEW ARRIVALS. This flow of accurate information from knowledgeable official sources resulted in a general abatement of undue anxiety over the presence of refugee reception centers.

-- Recommendation: That in future operations, affecting any civilian community, appropriate public affairs emphasis be placed on the concerns of local leaders and groups in a timely manner which coincides with the pace of refugee planning and operations and that representatives of the news media be included in the coordination process as early as possible.

(6) Legal jurisdiction at refugee reception facilities

-- Discussion: The limitations of Military Police authority and jurisdiction over the refugees were never clearly established. Although the US Marshals Service had complete authority and jurisdiction over refugees, they were seldom present to exercise it because of other requirements. This void hampered the execution of routine Military Police duties. Indeed, the lack of clear-cut authority and jurisdiction was significant in that it could have been exploited by restive refugees or those seeking repatriation.

-- Recommendation: Authority and jurisdiction over refugee personnel must be clearly defined and thoroughly coordinated with all involved military and civilian agencies prior to the arrival of the refugees. A permanent contingent of the US Marshals should be assigned to the refugee reception center throughout its operation.

(7) Concessions for conversion of valuables

-- Discussion: Circumstances made it necessary to provide the refugees with facilities where gold could be converted to US currency. Guidance was not immediately available on this matter and considerable effort was expended formulating concession agreements for approving gold exchange operations on military installations.

-- Recommendation: That future operations provide specific guidance to installation commanders on conversion of valuables to US currency by refugees evacuated into the country.

(8) Qualified civil/military affairs personnel for internal control

-- Discussion: The shortage of trained civil/military affairs specialists developed as reception center population ceilings were increased and the average stay of refugees lengthened. The limited pool of active Army assets made the use of Reserve Component personnel essential in this area. Entire Reserve units could not be activated because of the lack of a declared emergency; therefore, individual Reservists who volunteered for Active Duty for Training (ADT) were assigned to Forts Chaffee and Indiantown Gap on a selected basis.

-- Recommendation: That authorization for the call-up of selected Reservists be considered in order to support humanitarian operations with requisite civil/military affairs specialties.

(9) Qualified linguists for refugee operation support

-- Discussion: The requirement exists for qualified linguists to support a refugee operation from its inception. A large percentage of personnel identified as linguists for use in Operation NEW ARRIVALS by specific levels of language proficiency in military personnel records were unable to speak or comprehend the languages. Since Federal law precluded the hire of refugees to act as interpreters, the problem was resolved by drawing on the world-wide assets of the Army to fill some of the requirements. With the number of linguists needed at the centers below strength, delays in processing were experienced.

-- Recommendation: Records of Army linguists should be reviewed to determine that proficiency ratings of all linguists listed are correct. Additionally, Federal hire of aliens should be authorized in emergency situations such as refugee operations.

(10) Use of refugee volunteers for support services

-- Discussion: DA guidance permitted refugees to perform self-help type work at the reception centers on a voluntary basis "in order to ameliorate their situation, maintain conditions essential to their health, safety, and morale, or related tasks considered essential for their well-being." However, attention had to be given to the manner and conditions under which refugees were utilized in order to comply with Federal labor standards, contractual agreements for services, etc.

-- Recommendation: Prior to engaging refugees in volunteer efforts, insure that all work projects: meet safety and working-condition requirements; receive labor standard exceptions from Department of Labor if necessary; preclude unauthorized use of refugees by contractors; fall under proper supervision; and maintain public relations images which accurately reflect the purpose and scope of the work to the local community.

(11) Natural resources at installations supporting refugee operations

-- Discussion: In the preparation of a selected Army installation for winterization, a review of requirements indicated that the existing contract for delivery of natural gas to the heating system was sufficient. However, the utility company informed the Army that it would be unable to supply the amount specified in the contract without interrupting service to industrial customers. Although the contract called for an uninterrupted supply of gas up to the required amount, the gas company initially refused to honor the terms of the contract.

-- Recommendation: That review of contracts for the continuance of essential services and resources be considered as part of the installation nomination process; that seasonal requirements for natural resources and their availability be considered as one of the determining factors for installation selection; and that judicial injunctions be pursued to preclude discontinuation or degradation of service during renegotiation of contracts.

(12) Planning for winter operation of reception centers

-- Discussion: The original concept of a short-term operation became obsolete once the magnitude of the refugee population was realized. However, IATF planning for winter operations, once the duration of the program was determined, did not begin until sometime later. This delay affected a number of decisions that should have been made earlier.

-- Recommendation: National level authorities must be advised that timely decisions are essential in planning the continuation of such on-going actions. Plans must be formulated and approved as soon as changes in the situation become apparent.

(13) Accountability of US Government property

-- Discussion: Many of the refugees departed the centers without turning in the personal documentation, bedding, blankets, etc.

-- Recommendation: Proper clearance procedures must be established and enforced to prevent the loss of government property and to insure the accountability of all departing individuals.

(14) Termination of reception center operations

-- Discussion: Planning for the closure of the refugee reception centers was not begun until late in the operation. Furthermore, the rotation of civilian personnel by Federal agencies resulted in conflicting views on requirements and responsibilities for the termination phase of the operation. This caused delay in the approval and the execution of restoration and termination projects.

-- Recommendation: Planning for the termination of operations should be initiated as soon as possible. Termination contingency plans should include basic guidelines on the scope of actions, agency responsibilities, and the type of projects authorized. These contingency plans should be coordinated with and approved by the agency charged with overall responsibility for the operation.

C. SUGGESTED PRINCIPLES FOR COORDINATING LARGE REFUGEE RECEPTION AND RESETTLEMENT PROGRAMS

[Note: The following observations are based on a series of comments prepared by Mrs. Julia V. Taft, Director, Interagency Task Force for Indochina (IATF), and reproduced with her permission. Within the context of this discussion, Mrs. Taft defines a large refugee movement as any program which encompasses more than 50,000 refugees. Attached to these recommended principles is a schema delineating Federal agency roles for future refugee operations.]

A. Organization:

- (1) A Presidential Task Force should be established, directed by a high level Government official. The Director should be appointed by and report to the President. Agency representatives to the Task Force should be senior officials who will be responsible for coordinating their respective agency's participation. Suggested member agencies should include at a minimum the following:

Department of State
US Agency for International Development (USAID)
United States Information Agency (USIA)
Department of Defense (DOD)/Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS)
Department of Health, Education, and Welfare (HEW)
Department of Justice (DOJ)
Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS)
Office of Management and Budget (OMB)
Department of Labor (DOL)
Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD)
National Security Council (NSC)
Intelligence Community

- (2) A mission order (Executive Order) should be issued immediately citing respective roles and memoranda of agreement should be promulgated immediately to flesh out the mission order.
- (3) Task Forces should be temporary in nature, not long term operations. The Task Force duration should extend as long as interagency resources are required, i.e., for duration of of centers.

- (4) One agency (State) should be designated as the Executive Agent to provide management support.
- (5) Task Force Director must have control over all staffing in support of the operations at Headquarters and centers. This can be done either through outside hire, retired annuitants, or reimbursable details. Personnel should be selected and assigned for the duration of the effort, and once assigned, should be released only with the approval of the Task Force Director. A statement regarding staff resources should be included in the Executive Order to ensure top priority.
- (6) Senior White House contacts are required for the NSC and domestic side.
- (7) Broad policy decisions relating to the refugee program must be coordinated through the Task Force Director.

B. Legislative Authorization:

- (1) Broad legislation should be promulgated to give the Executive Branch permanent authority to implement a refugee program. The Department of State and INS should propose such legislation now. Should a large scale refugee program subsequently need to be implemented, only appropriations legislation would be required.
- (2) Funds should be appropriated to President to provide operational flexibility.
- (3) Have early briefings with Congress and have a Congressional liaison office be an immediate component of the Task Force staff.
- (4) Encourage regular reporting to and oversight by Congress.
- (5) Senior center civilian should report to Task Force routinely on Congressional contacts.

C. International Aspects:

- (1) People from the Department of State assigned to the Task Force should go out to key Embassies (in countries in which refugees are stranded) to brief mission personnel on the program and their responsibilities.
- (2) Establish early focal point for discussions with other countries. Appoint a "prestige person" to stimulate foreign government interest in aiding refugees.

- (3) A Presidential or Secretarial directive should be issued to Chiefs of Mission citing guidelines for refugee disposition and directing them to encourage host governments to accept refugees.
- (4) To the extent they are willing (which was not the case with Indochinese refugees) deal with international VOLAGs in Geneva if we want to internationalize refugee movements.
- (5) Explore with ICEM and UNHCR mechanisms whereby international skill banks can be established and used for matching refugees with potential countries of refuge which have skill shortages. ORM/State should initiate discussions now.
- (6) Use ICEM for international movements of refugees unless crisis evacuation situation exists; then use DOD.
- (7) Work through UNHCR on the issue of repatriation. This problem will be less difficult if staging areas or reception centers are not on US territory.
- (8) Expose future foreign service officers to refugee matters through FSI training and management experience.

D. Media and Public Awareness:

- (1) The Federal Government should not solicit sponsors through its own resources i.e., toll free line, FRCs, as it is not possible for VOLAGs to verify such offers quickly. The Federal Government should not sponsor or resettle refugees without VOLAGs.
- (2) While a national media campaign to solicit sponsors is inadvisable, there must be sufficient information flow to the public regarding who the refugees are and how citizens can help. All offers of sponsorship should be referred to VOLAGs. A toll free line for information purposes is recommended as well as information packets to be mailed to each interested caller.
- (3) A national advisory committee to provide advice to the President and/or Task Force is not recommended, as the time frame is too short and the pace too quick. A national committee of eminent citizens, however, can reinforce the "national" effort aspects of the program and result in better acceptance. The function, however, should be to serve as an information link to national organizations and interest groups and to serve as a catalyst with those groups to provide services to the refugees. Members should be key representatives from labor, the professions (legal, health, education, etc.), civil rights, industry, who will generate interest and assistance from those sectors. The committee, if established, should report to the Task Force.

- (4) Receptivity on the part of State and local officials is essential. Early information from HEW regarding Federal funding of refugee support systems should be implemented. Governors should be encouraged to establish a State focal point for information and assistance; however, States should not be encouraged to assume direct sponsorship responsibilities if, by doing so, they detract from sponsor-generating efforts of VOLAGs. (In this matter, HEW non-concurs. With adequate technical assistance HEW believes State and local governments not only can mobilize supportive resources, but also can provide a challenge to the traditional VOLAGs. Consideration should be given to modest State grants for governments who wish to establish a coordinating body.)
- (5) Federal Regional Councils (FRCs) can provide an excellent vehicle for briefing State and local government officials. FRCs should not be asked to generate sponsorships. They should not provide technical assistance unless personnel are assigned full time to the effort and report frequently to the Task Force.

To ensure post-center resettlement coordination, FRCs should assign one person from each key agency to work at the HEW regional office to plan and implement coordinated support systems.

- (6) Media and publications services for the centers and Task Force should be contracted from outside Government. The essential factor is speedy information dissemination for which GPO has a less than perfect record. Newspapers and refugee orientation materials should cover at a minimum:

- News items about the country from which refugees escaped
- The sponsorship program and VOLAGs
- Center rules and procedures
- Cross-cultural awareness
- Domestic benefits program
- Orientation to society, i.e., taxes, business practices, schools, job procurement, driving, housing, recreation, health hygiene, and geography

E. Resettlement Agencies:

- (1) If possible, to keep refugee program internationalized, work with international resettlement agencies.

- (2) Make VOLAGs part of the team immediately. This could be done through regular meetings, a representative on the Task Force and/or on the staff, or a combination of both.
- (3) The Task Force should provide administrative and executive officers to each VOLAG at each center for data and file management.
- (4) If there is special VOLAG funding ensure VOLAGs not duplicate existing support systems. Special aides needed in medical care, job training and placement, E.S.L.
- (5) VOLAGs should be assigned quotas based on capability. Criteria minimal for sponsorship (and verification) should be spelled out in contract with minimum specified duration of sponsorship responsibility.
- (6) If Federal funds are given to VOLAGs to be passed on directly to refugees, a standard level of cash per refugee should be adopted and so stipulated in the contracts and in Congressional budget justifications.
- (7) Call VOLAGs "resettlement agencies."
- (8) VOLAG contracts should stipulate resettlement of people from centers; if there are "pick-ups" they should be covered by separate contract with the agencies. Also, the policy and procedures covering "pick-ups" should be developed and promulgated to give the widest publicity possible.
- (9) Be selective (if possible) on which resettlement agencies should participate.
- (10) Centers should monitor and control registration process from central distribution point.

3. Center Operations:

Each reception center completed after action reports outlining procedures and problems associated with center management. These are on file with ORM/Department of State, National Archives, HEW, and the former Director, IATF.

Some key points include --

- (1) Use the military for logistical support if rapid mobilization is essential. If overseas long-term staging centers are used and a processing center (not hastily developed) is envisioned for stateside logistical support can be contracted out.

- (2) A table of organization is essential.
- (3) There must be a clear delineation of roles between civilians and military at the centers. The Director, IATF Headquarters, must be the final decision authority, should a conflict of roles arise.
- (4) Specific guidance should be issued to civilians and military on key areas such as:
  - Physical layout of center
  - Public affairs
  - Repatriation
  - Comptroller functions
  - Intelligence
  - Unaccompanied children
  - Abortions
  - Movement to third countries
  - VOLAG management
  - Personnel hiring
  - Use of refugees as volunteers
  - Admission to center of volunteers, researchers, etc.
  - Law enforcement
  - Consular services
  - Computer operations
- (5) Center management structures will depend on the type of military reservation used. Therefore, there should be definitive guidelines spelling out civilian/military responsibilities in each of the above areas.
- (6) Counseling services are essential at the centers. An effective technique is to use refugees themselves who have a professional talent for evaluation, social work and/or counseling -- perhaps former US Government local national employees. Counseling should be provided for sponsorship assistance, family problems, orientation to new culture, explaining the resettlement process, etc.
- (7) Qualified management and controller type civilian personnel should be assigned to each center, and the center coordinators should be given full responsibility for the financial management of their operations. This should be done by giving each coordinator operating allowances or other financial guidelines as well as accountability for inventories, operational records, etc. These personnel should remain with the Task Force or the residual headquarters activity until all claims, disposition of resources, and other management aspects of the program are finalized.

- (8) Complete records of refugees in centers should be kept. No refugees should be released from the centers until they have been assigned Social Security Account Numbers, Alien Registration numbers, and I-94 forms. (Note: This would relieve us of the problem we now have of trying to clear up the status of the several thousand refugees who reportedly left centers without proper identification.)
- (9) Short term but intensive "survival English" should be required for all adults if the expected center stay will exceed 30 days. It is not advised that vocational training be offered; however, job counseling is important and each sponsor should consider employment for the refugee as the critical feature of resettlement.

G. Budget Preparations:

In building a total budget, the following factors should be taken into account --

- (1) The principle that the refugee influx should have no cost impact on the States. HEW should budget for 100% reimbursement for welfare, social services, and incremental educational costs. Separate medical coverage is advisable. The use of Medicaid poses problems because of varying State standards. Also, once refugees get Medicaid they are thrust into the midst of the welfare programs which encourage dependency.
- (2) Estimated stay in centers should realistically reflect the capacity of the Federal and Voluntary Agencies to gear up. (IATF experience showed an average center stay of 100 days.)
- (3) Multiple centers are preferable to one large center although cost factors do rise with multiple sites.
- (4) Military airlifts are more expensive than ICEM charters.
- (5) All senior members of the Task Force should be involved in the development of budget estimates with assistance from OMB. Reimbursement guidelines should be developed in writing as soon as possible with fund citations for each appropriate agency.
- (6) Stringent post-center reporting requirements should be made a part of each resettlement contract.

A special effort should be made to include in the appropriation authorization to hire refugees to assist in the various areas of the program, especially those who are former employees of the US Government overseas. (IATF experience showed former Vietnamese employees to be valuable assets to the program and they were victimized to the extent that they were hired on contract or other "pick-up" types of appointment and did not receive any retirement credit for this service.)

FEDERAL AGENCY ROLES

(1) Department of State:

-- To serve as the "institutional memory" and to develop standard operating procedures and contingency plans.

Get standby authority for greater fiscal flexibility, Executive Agent support - i.e., space, communications, linguists, personnel and contracting system, filing, and contracted data processing.

(2) US Agency for International Development:

-- Assist in preparation of initial budget, provide language and area specialists.

(3) United States Information Agency:

-- Staff public information offices, provide linguists and personnel who are specialists in cross-cultural communication.

(4) Department of Defense:

-- The only Federal agency capable of mass refugee movement and maintenance quickly. Should be tasked to perform evacuation mobilization. Center maintenance and setting up of logistical support should be done by DOD if time is critical.

(5) Department of Health, Education, and Welfare:

-- Public Health Service. Provide immunizations and disease surveillance at centers and with VOLAGS in order to make sponsors aware of Class I and II diseases. Be sure each refugee has a personal copy of health records upon release.

-- Social and Rehabilitative Services. Handle problems of destitute repatriated Americans. Assist center and VOLAGs on special placement problems, i.e., unaccompanied children, physically or mentally handicapped.

-- Social Security Administration. Issue Social Security cards using block numbers.

-- Headquarters, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. Have constant role in post-resettlement conceptualization, orientation and VOLAG contract negotiation and liaison. Develop SRS guidelines. Budget development.

(6) Department of Justice:

-- Provide legal counsel at headquarters and centers. Seek parole authority if it is beyond current statutory authority. Provide US Marshals for law enforcement beyond what DOD would provide. Establish protocol between DOD and Justice regarding law enforcement jurisdiction at centers. Delineate respective responsibilities for each center. Provide legal advice to refugees re: legal issues impeding their ability to leave centers but not general legal advice.

(7) Immigration and Naturalization Service:

-- Coordinate the nine agency computerized security clearances (DEA, FBI, CIA, DOD, State, INS, etc.).
-- Determine admissibility to the US.
-- Issue "A" numbers to all refugees; fingerprint and photograph.
-- Authorize employment.
-- Get affidavits (re: "never persecuting others") and the assets and liabilities certificates.
-- Issue refugee travel documents.
-- Adjust status.

(Great concern has been expressed about the term "parolee" and its negative connotations. INS should consider revising the terminology to describe the refugee status.)

(8) Office of Management and Budget:

-- Secure formal detailees from Federal agencies to work on Task Force. Assist in budget and legislative preparations. Serve as White House "domestic affairs" point of contact.

-- Key link to get Federal Regional Councils involved as information conduits with State and local governments.

(9) Department of Labor:

-- Provide job coding for each refugee. Analyze labor market needs and assist VOLAGs at centers. Ensure participation in budget preparation for refugee skill training and employment during post center resettlement.

(10) Department of Housing and Urban Development:

-- Handle problems related to housing shortages and provide advice to VOLAGs on available housing programs for refugees.

(11) National Security Council:

-- To be used as a lever to assign DOD specific logistical support tasks. Each assignment should be in writing.

-- Serve as White House "foreign affairs" point of contact.

(12) Intelligence Community:

-- To assist in security clearance processes. Provide information prior to and during evacuation if there is a US evacuation.

(13) Department of Transportation:

-- To assist in coordinating air transit services from center to final destinations.

(14) Department of Interior:

-- If staging areas are in Pacific territories, Interior can provide on-site support and coordination. Otherwise, minimal involvement.

(15) Department of Treasury:

-- Handle issues such as foreign currency exchange; IRS responsibilities and benefits to refugees and sponsors; foreign assets controls.

SUBJECT: MEDICAL POLICY FOR PROCESSING INDOCHINA REFUGEES

1. MEDICAL PROBLEMS ARE ANTICIPATED IN THE INDOCHINA REFUGEE POPULATION WHICH EITHER CANNOT BE HANDLED BY THE MEDICAL FACILITY ASSOCIATED WITH THE CAMP OR STAGING AREA, OR ONWARD MOVEMENT TO CONUS IS OTHERWISE INDICATED. THE FOLLOWING POLICY GUIDANCE IS PROVIDED TO ASSIST IN REGULATING THESE PATIENTS TO THE NEXT APPROPRIATE HOSPITAL.
  - A. ALL INDOCHINA REFUGEE PATIENTS REQUIRING ONWARD MOVEMENT TO CONUS WILL BE REPORTED DIRECTLY TO THE ARMED SERVICES MEDICAL REGULATING OFFICE (ASMRO). BASED ON BED AVAILABILITY AND REQUIRED MEDICAL CAPABILITY ASMRO WILL REGULATE TO THE MILITARY HOSPITAL PROVIDING PRIMARY SUPPORT TO THE CONUS RECEPTION CENTER TO WHICH THE PATIENT AND HIS FAMILY IS SCHEDULED FOR MOVEMENT. URGENT CASES REQUIRING INTRA-THEATER EVACUATION WILL BE REPORTED TO PACOM JOINT MEDICAL REGULATING OFFICE (JMRO) IN THESE LATTER CASES PACOM WILL REGULATE TO THE NEAREST MILITARY HOSPITAL HAVING THE REQUIRED MEDICAL CAPABILITY.
  - B. EVERY EFFORT IS TO BE MADE TO MAINTAIN FAMILY INTEGRITY WHEN FEASIBLE, ANY PATIENT 15 YEARS OF AGE AND UNDER WILL BE ACCOMPANIED BY A FAMILY MEMBER, PREFERABLY THE MOTHER. THE MOVEMENT OF FAMILY MEMBERS ASSOCIATED WITH OTHER PATIENTS

EVACUATED TO CONUS WILL BE DETERMINED BY THE FOLLOWING FACTORS:

{1} THE AVAILABILITY OF SPACE ON AEROMEDICAL EVACUATION AIRCRAFT AS NON-MEDICAL ATTENDANTS OR BEING ABLE TO MANIFEST THE FAMILY ON THE NEXT SCHEDULED FLIGHT TO THE CONUS RECEPTION CENTER.

{2} THE ABILITY OF THE RECEIVING LOCATION TO HANDLE REFUGEES WHO ARE IN NON-PATIENT STATUS.

{3} WHETHER THE ASSOCIATED FAMILY MEMBERS HAVE BEEN CLEARED FOR MOVEMENT.

~~* C. IN THE EVENT PATIENTS LOCATED IN CONUS REQUIRE CARE BEYOND THE CAPABILITY OF THE LOCAL FACILITY, ARRANGEMENTS SHOULD BE MADE TO TRANSFER THE PATIENT TO THE NEAREST FEDERAL HOSPITAL HAVING THE REQUIRED CAPABILITY. IF THE FAMILY HAS BEEN PROCESSED FOR FINAL SETTLEMENT THEN CONSIDERATION SHOULD BE GIVEN TO TRANSFERRING THE PATIENT TO A FEDERAL HOSPITAL OR OTHER APPROPRIATE HOSPITAL NEAR THE DESIGNATED RESETTLEMENT AREA. THE PATIENT IS ENTITLED TO CARE AT GOVERNMENT EXPENSE FOR THIS TERM OF HOSPITALIZATION IN FEDERAL HOSPITALS ONLY.~~

D. AS PREVIOUSLY INDICATED EVERY EFFORT IS TO BE MADE TO INSURE FAMILY INTEGRITY. SHOULD IT BE NECESSARY TO TRANSFER A PATIENT WITHOUT THE FAMILY IT IS INCUMBENT UPON THE RECEPTION CENTER ADMINISTRATION TO KEEP THE PATIENT AND FAMILY ADVISED OF EACH OTHER'S CONDITION AND LOCATION. IT IS IMPERATIVE THAT THE FAMILY BE REUNITED AT THE EARLIEST POSSIBLE TIME.

2. OTHER AGENCY COSTS ASSOCIATED WITH THESE ACTIONS WILL BE REIMBURSED BY STATE IN ACCORDANCE WITH STANDARD INTERAGENCY REIMBURSEMENT PROCEDURES.

AUTHORIZED TREATMENT SUBJECT TO ITS AVAILABILITY {AFTER ALL OTHER ELIGIBLE BENEFICIARIES}, AT MADIGAN ARMY MEDICAL CENTER UNTIL SUCH TIME AS HE CAN BE FOLLOWED FOR HIS MEDICAL CONDITION ON AN OUTPATIENT BASIS. AT THAT POINT HE WOULD NO LONGER BE ELIGIBLE FOR CARE FROM ARMY MTF. AS EVACUEES ARE ELIGIBLE FOR TREATMENT IN ALL FEDERAL FACILITIES INCLUDING THOSE OF THE VA NAD PHS UNTIL SUCH TIME AS THEY HAVE BEEN RELEASED FROM FEDERAL CUSTODY FOR RESETTLEMENT, IT IS IMPERATIVE THAT CIVIL COORDINATORS AT RECEPTION CENTERS BE ADVISED WHEN PATIENT MOVEMENT IS NECESSARY SO THAT RESETTLEMENT CAN BE CARRIED OUT EXPEDITIOUSLY. NORMALLY PATIENTS AND THEIR FAMILY WILL BE MOVED TO THE FEDERAL FACILITY CLOSEST TO THEIR RESETTLEMENT AREA AS IN THE EXAMPLE ABOVE. WHEN TRANSFER TO ANOTHER MILITARY SERVICES MTF IS DESIRED, NORMAL PATIENT REGULATING PROCEDURE SHOULD APPLY. WHEN MOVEMENT TO OTHER THAN A MILITARY SERVICES MTF IS CONTEMPLATED THE CIVIL COORDINATOR WILL BE RESPONSIBLE FOR COORDINATING ACCEPTANCE AT THE RECEIVING FACILITY. THEY WILL NOT BE ELIGIBLE FOR FURTHER TREATMENT, EXCEPT WHERE AUTHORIZED UNDER OTHER PROVISION OF AR 40-3, EXAMPLE: ADOPTED CHILDREN.
D. SF 1080, DD FORM 7 AND 7A PREPARED TO SUPPORT REIMBURSEMENT FOR SERVICES PROVIDED IN AMEDD FACILITIES WILL BE SUBMITTED IN SAME MANNER AS PRESCRIBED IN PAR 4 REF B, AND PAR 5 REF C.

1. I WISH TO ENLIST YOUR PERSONAL SUPPORT IN ORGANIZING AN EFFORT TO ENCOURAGE SPONSORSHIP OF VIETNAMESE {OR KHMER} FAMILIES ON THE PART OF OUR MILITARY AND CIVILIAN PERSONNEL, INCLUDING COMMANDS AND SOCIAL GROUPS {E.G., WIVES' CLUBS}. THE NAVY IS, I KNOW, ALREADY UNDERWAY WITH WHAT APPEARS TO BE A FINE PROGRAM. I WOULD LIKE TO UNDERSCORE THAT EFFORT AND OBTAIN A SIMILARLY COORDINATED EFFORT FROM ARMY, AIR FORCE, AND MARINES.

2. I AM PROUDLY AWARE OF THE MANY PERSONAL EFFORTS BEING MADE BY INDIVIDUALS IN THE SERVICES. BUT MANY MORE, WHO MAY EVEN HAVE VIETNAMESE FRIENDS, MAY SIMPLY BE UNAWARE OF WHETHER THEIR FRIENDS ESCAPED, WHERE THEY MIGHT BE, WHAT SPONSORSHIP ENTAILS, AND HOW TO GO ABOUT BEING A SPONSOR. FOR THESE PEOPLE AND GROUPS, I RECOMMEND ESTABLISHMENT EITHER COLLECTIVELY FOR SEVERAL OR ALL SERVICES, OR INDIVIDUALLY, REFUGEE INFORMATION CENTERS OR CLEARING OFFICES. THROUGH THESE CLEARING OFFICES INTERESTED MILITARY AND CIVILIAN PERSONNEL COULD INDICATE INTEREST, AND INITIATE SPONSORSHIP REQUESTS THROUGH THE INTERAGENCY TASK FORCE DATA SYSTEMS, INTERESTED PERSONNEL COULD ALSO OBTAIN INFORMATION ON

5. EACH COMMAND SHOULD HAVE AVAILABLE SUFFICIENT DOCUMENTATION TO SUPPORT THE AUTHENTICITY OF THE EXPENDITURES CLAIMED. COMMANDS MUST BE PREPARED TO FURNISH DA COPIES OF THIS DOCUMENTATION UPON REQUEST.

6. REFERENCES A AND B DEFINED INCREMENTAL COSTS AS THOSE ACTUAL/ ESTIMATED COSTS BEING INCURRED OVER AND ABOVE THE NORMAL OPERATING COSTS OF THE PERSONNEL AND FORCES INVOLVED IN THE OPERATION. THE FOLLOWING ADDITIONAL GUIDANCE IS PROVIDED:

A. NO REGULAR PAY AND ALLOWANCES FOR ON-BOARD MILITARY OR CIVILIAN PERSONNEL TO ASSIST IN THE EFFORT ON A TEMPORARY BASIS. SUCH COST IS A PROPER DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE REIMBURSEMENT.

B. THE MILITARY DEPARTMENTS WILL BE FULLY REIMBURSED FOR COSTS OF MILITARY EQUIPMENT SUCH AS TENTS, MESS GEAR, KITCHEN EQUIPMENT, BUNKS, BLANKETS, ETC., PURCHASED FROM SERVICES STOCK FUND OR ITEMS ISSUED DIRECTLY FROM THE STOCK FUND. SINCE ONLY 25 FLYING HOURS WERE NORMALLY PLANNED FOR MAY, THE DIFFERENCE OF 75 FLYING HOURS IS A PROPER COST FOR REIMBURSEMENT).

D. INCREMENTAL MEDICAL COSTS AT MILITARY FACILITIES WILL BE REIMBURSABLE AS FOLLOWS: INPATIENT CARE $23.89 PER DAY; OUT-PATIENT CARE $2.76 PER VISIT. THE INPATIENT CARE RATE WILL BE ADDED TO THE AEROMEDICAL TRANSPORTATION COST COMPUTED IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE ABOVE. MEDICAL CARE AT NONMILITARY FACILITIES WILL BE ACTUAL CHARGES.

E. INCREMENTAL COSTS WILL INCLUDE MATERIAL PRICED AT STANDARD RATES AND CHARGES FOR ACCESSORIAL COSTS IN ACCORDANCE WITH DOD INSTRUCTION 7510.4, "UNIFORM POLICY FOR CHARGING ACCESSORIAL AND/OR ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS INCIDENT TO ISSUES, SALES, AND TRANSFERS OF MATERIALS, SUPPLY AND EQUIPMENT."

1. THOUSANDS OF VIETNAMESE MILITARY REFUGEES ARE NOW IN RESETTLEMENT CENTERS IN THE UNITED STATES OR IN THE PROCESS OF BEING MOVED TO THE UNITED STATES FROM OVERSEAS STAGING AREAS. THERE IS A DIRE NEED TO ESTABLISH A VOLUNTEER SPONSORSHIP PROGRAM TO ASSIST THESE REFUGEES IN THEIR RESETTLEMENT INTO OUR SOCIETY.
2. THE PERSONAL EFFORTS OF MANY INDIVIDUALS ARE ALREADY UNDERWAY; HOWEVER, THERE ARE MANY INDIVIDUALS, ORGANIZATIONS AND ACTIVITIES THAT ARE UNAWARE OF THE PROCEDURES FOR SPONSORSHIP. IT IS EVIDENT THAT SOME DO NOT KNOW WHERE THEIR FRIENDS ARE AND IF THEY WERE SUCCESSFUL IN THEIR ESCAPE.
3. SECDEF HAS ENCOURAGED SPONSORSHIP ON THE PART OF INDIVIDUALS, SOCIAL GROUPS SUCH AS WIVES' CLUBS, AND COMMANDS AS REFLECTED IN REFERENCE A. HISTORICALLY THE ARMY FAMILY HAS RESPONDED TO HUMANITARIAN APPEALS OF THIS TYPE. A SPIRITED RESPONSE AT THIS TIME WILL EXPEDITE THE SPONSORSHIP PROGRAM AND HELP GET OUR FRIENDS OUT OF THE REFUGEE CENTERS AND RESETTLED IN THE UNITED STATES. THE ACTIVE DIVISIONAL ASSOCIATIONS, NG, USAR, AUSA, ROA, AND NCOA ARE ONLY A FEW THAT COULD LEND ASSISTANCE.

4. IN ORDER TO IMPLEMENT THE SPONSORSHIP PROGRAM, A JOINT REFUGEE INFORMATION CLEARING OFFICE (JRICO) IS BEING ESTABLISHED IN THE PENTAGON. THIS OFFICE WILL BE ABLE TO PROVIDE CURRENT INFORMATION ON THE STATUS AND LOCATION OF ALL REFUGEES AS WELL AS THE PROCEDURES TO BE FOLLOWED TO ENTER THE SPONSOR PROGRAM. WITH SUCH INFORMATION AVAILABLE, SPONSORSHIP WOULD EXPEDITE DEPARTURE FROM REFUGEE CENTERS.

5. THE JRICO IS TASKED TO:

- A. RESPOND TO QUERIES AS TO THE STATUS OF REFUGEES AND ASSIST IN ESTABLISHING CONTACT BETWEEN COMMANDS/INDIVIDUALS.
- B. ASSIST THOSE DESIRING TO SPONSOR REFUGEES AND THEIR FAMILIES.
- C. MAINTAIN LIAISON WITH OSD, INTERAGENCY TASK FORCE (IATF), IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICE (INS), REFUGEE CENTERS AND VOLUNTARY AGENCIES (VOLAGS) IN ORDER TO DETERMINE STATUS OF REFUGEES.

6. THE ARMY ELEMENT OF JRICO WILL OPERATE FROM PENTAGON ROOM BF762. TELEPHONE NUMBERS ARE: AUTOVON 227-5190/5191/5192/5110, COMMERCIAL (202) 697-5190/5191/5192/5110, AND WILL BE MANNED DURING NORMAL WORK WEEK. IT IS EXPECTED JRICO WILL BE OPERATIONAL FOR ABOUT 120 DAYS.

7. REFERENCE B DISCUSSES EFFORTS BY IATF IN CONJUNCTION WITH VOLAGS IN RESETTLEMENT OF REFUGEES AND OUTLINES REQUIREMENTS FOR SPONSORSHIP. ALTHOUGH SPONSORSHIP IS NOT A FORMAL, LEGAL COMMITMENT, THERE IS, HOWEVER, A MORAL COMMITMENT TO ASSIST THE REFUGEE TO THE BEST OF THE SPONSOR'S ABILITY. SOME OF THE LESS TANGIBLE ASPECTS OF RESETTLEMENT INCLUDE ADJUSTMENT TO A NEW CULTURE AND ACQUAINTING THE REFUGEE WITH US LAWS AND REQUIREMENTS.

8. SPECIFICALLY, A SPONSOR, IN CONJUNCTION WITH ONE OF THE VOLAGS, WILL BE EXPECTED TO:

- A. RECEIVE THE REFUGEE AND HIS FAMILY.
- B. PROVIDE SHELTER AND FOOD, UNTIL THE REFUGEE BECOMES SELF-SUFFICIENT. SHELTER NEED NOT BE IN THE RESIDENCE OF THE SPONSOR, BUT MUST BE ADEQUATE.
- C. PROVIDE CLOTHING AND POCKET MONEY.
- D. PROVIDE ASSISTANCE IN FINDING EMPLOYMENT AND IN SCHOOL ENROLLMENT FOR CHILDREN.

E. COVER ORDINARY MEDICAL COSTS OR MEDICAL INSURANCE.
F. ONCE EMPLOYMENT IS OBTAINED, ASSIST THE REFUGEE TO LOCATE PERMANENT HOUSING, ACQUIRE MINIMAL FURNITURE AND ARRANGE FOR UTILITIES.

9. SPONSORSHIP BY AN INDIVIDUAL COULD BE DIFFICULT WHEN LARGE FAMILIES ARE INVOLVED, HOWEVER, IF ASSUMED ON A BROADER BASE, I.E., ALL PERSONNEL IN A COMMAND, CHURCH GROUP, WIVES' CLUB OR DIVISIONAL ASSOCIATION, THE BURDEN COULD BE EASED. CONCEIVABLY, A LARGER ORGANIZATION COULD SPONSOR MORE THAN ONE FAMILY.

10. SPONSORSHIP REQUIREMENTS FOR RELATIVES OF AMERICAN CITIZENS AND PERMANENT ALIENS ARE MORE SIMPLIFIED. HEALTH EDUCATION AND WELFARE DEPARTMENT {HEW} ASSISTED BY THE RED CROSS, WILL VERIFY WILLINGNESS AND ABILITY OF THE NAMED RELATIVE TO SPONSOR AND RE-SETTLE REFUGEES. ONCE CONFIRMED, INS WILL RELEASE THOSE REFUGEES WITHOUT ADDITIONAL SPONSORSHIP REQUIREMENTS. IF HEW DECIDES SPONSOR IS UNABLE TO CARE FOR REFUGEES, CASE WILL BE PASSED TO AN ACCREDITED VOLAG FOR PROCESSING. RELATIVES OF US CITIZENS INCLUDE SPOUSE, PARENTS, GRANDPARENTS, CHILDREN, GRANDCHILDREN, UNMARRIED SIBLINGS AND HANDICAPPED DEPENDENTS.

11. REFUGEES WITH INDEPENDENT MEANS ARE THOSE WITH AVERAGE PER CAPITA RESOURCES OF FOUR THOUSAND DOLLARS, EXCLUSIVE OF TRANSPORTATION. THESE INDIVIDUALS/FAMILIES MAY BE DIRECTED TO RE-SETTLEMENT LOCATIONS WITH ONLY BRIEF COUNSELING, PROVIDED THAT THE INDIVIDUAL OR AT LEAST ONE ADULT IN A FAMILY HAS A FACILITY IN ENGLISH, VOCATIONAL SKILLS AND A GENERAL IDEA OF RESETTLEMENT LOCATION.

12. THE ARMY FAMILY IS ENCOURAGED TO GET BEHIND THIS HUMANITARIAN EFFORT AND SUPPORT THE SPONSORSHIP PROGRAM. HOWEVER, SPONSORSHIP IS VOLUNTARY AND INDIVIDUALS, COMMANDS OR ORGANIZATIONS WILL NOT BE PRESSURED TO SPONSOR REFUGEES.

13. REQUEST WIDEST DISSEMINATION.

<sup>b</sup>Individual space is normally computed on the basis of 90 square feet per person except under mobilization conditions when it is reduced to 40 square feet per person. The barracks and dormitory facilities listed were surveyed applying the 40 square feet factor and the yardstick for family housing units was based on six occupants per unit when calculated.

<sup>c</sup>Forts Chaffec and Indiantown Gap, the two US Army sites utilized as reception centers for Indochinese evacuees, had peak refugee populations of 25,055 and 16,809, respectively.

<sup>d</sup>Available spaces at Fort Lewis include 9,400 site facilities (tents and hutments) and all spaces at both Fort Hood and Fort AP Hill consist of site facilities exclusively.

<sup>e</sup>Fort Wolters and Amarillo AFB have been turned over to the control of local authorities and their utilization would consequently be subject to negotiation. Prior to its transfer, Amarillo AFB had 10,500 dormitory spaces computed on the criteria of 90 square feet per person.
