REGIONAL DISTRIBUTION SUMMARY

FOOD DISTRIBUTION SUMMARY

REGION I

Nearly 90% of the food consumed in FEMA Region I is warehoused within the region. The table below summarizes the source and magnitude of all shipments from warehouses to supermarkets within the region. Two states, Massachusetts and Maine, are largely self-sufficient, warehousing nearly 75% of their food supplies within their own borders. New Hampshire and Vermont are heavily dependent on out-of-state warehouses for food shipments, with only 34% and 25%, respectively, of their food supplies stored within the state boundaries. In the case of Vermont, a substantial portion (34%) of the state's food stocks come from another region (New York in Region II), highlighting a need for interregional coordination.

CONNECTICUT SUMMARY

The statistical profile of food distribution in Region I shows that Connecticut is dependent on warehouses outside the state for about half of its food supplies. Approximately 51% of the food currently reaching Connecticut residents is warehoused within the state. The chief out-of-state suppliers are a variety of distributors located in Massachusetts, which warehouse roughly 25% of Connecticut's food stocks. In addition, warehouses located in New Jersey and New York in Region II account for 21% of Connecticut's food supplies. These out-of-state and out-of-region suppliers primarily serve the risk areas of Hartford, New Haven and Bridgeport. Thus interregional as well as interstate coordination will be required in planning for the distribution of food in these risk areas.

Within Connecticut, 6 distributors account for half of the food stored for in-state consumption. Most of the food warehoused in other Region I states is in the hands of 5 distributors in Massachusetts, and 2 in Vermont and Rhode Island. Food supplies from outside Region I come mainly from 5 distributors in New Jersey (which account for 18% of the food consumed in Connecticut) and 5 distributors in New York (which account for 3% of Connecticut's food supplies).

The statistical profile describing food distribution in Region I, coupled with the FEMA food distribution guidelines, provide nuclear civil protection planners with a feasible approach for reallocating food supplies under conditions of crisis relocation. This statistical profile can be used to modify the Connecticut food support annex to include food distribution details which are consistent with regional food distribution patterns.

MAINE SUMMARY

The statistical profile of food distribution in Region I shows that the supermarkets of Maine are largely served by warehouses located within the state. Approximately 73% of the food reaching Maine residents is warehoused within Maine. The major out-of-state supplier is Massachusetts, which warehouses 22% of Maine's food, primarily serving the risk area of Portland. Thus there will be some requirement for interstate coordination in this risk area. Though Maine is not a major center for warehousing food for other states, warehouses located within its boundaries account for 12% of New Hampshire's and 10% of Vermont's food supplies.

Two of the top ten distributors, Hannaford Brothers Co. and Millikin Tomlinson Co., in Region I have warehouses in Maine. These two distributors account for 58% of the food consumed within the state. An additional 6 distributors account for 14% of Maine's food supplies. Most of the food warehoused in other states is in the hands of 5 distributors in Massachusetts, while the remaining food stocks come from 4 distributors warehoused in Connecticut, Vermont, New Hampshire and Ohio.

The statistical profile describing food distribution in Region I, coupled with the FEMA food distribution guidelines, provide nuclear civil protection planners with a feasible approach for reallocating food supplies under conditions of crisis relocation. This statistical profile can be used to modify the Maine food support annex to include food distribution details which are consistent with regional food distribution patterns.

MASSACHUSETTS SUMMARY

The statistical profile of food distribution in Region I shows that the supermarkets of Massachusetts are largely served by warehouses located within the state. Approximately 74% of the food reaching Massachusetts residents is warehoused within the boundaries of the state. The major out-of-state supplier is Connecticut, which supplies 11% of Massachusetts' food, primarily serving the risk areas of Pittsfield and Springfield. Thus there will be some requirement for interstate coordination in these risk areas. Massachusetts itself plays a key role in the food supplies of other Region I states, supplying over 20% of the food consumed in Connecticut and Maine, and over 40% of the food consumed in New Hampshire and Rhode Island.

Six of the top ten distributors in Region I have warehouses in Massachusetts. These distributors account for 50% of the food consumed within the state. An additional 7 distributors account for 19% of Massachusetts' food supplies. Most of the food warehoused in other states is in the hands of 4 distributors in Connecticut, and 11 in Vermont, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Maine, New Jersey, New York and Ohio.

The statistical profile describing food distribution in Region I, coupled with the FEMA food distribution guidelines, provide nuclear civil protection planners with a feasible approach for reallocating food supplies under conditions of crisis relocation. This statistical profile can be used to modify the Massachusetts food support annex to include food distribution details which are consistent with regional food distribution patterns.

NEW HAMPSHIRE SUMMARY

The statistical profile of food distribution in Region I shows that New Hampshire is heavily dependent on warehouses outside the state for its food supplies. Only 34% of the food currently reaching New Hampshire residents is warehoused within the state. The chief out-of-state suppliers are a variety of distributors located in Massachusetts, which warehouse roughly 40% of New Hampshire's food stocks, including the risk areas of Portsmouth and Manchester. Thus interstate coordination will be required in planning for the distribution of food to New Hampshire residents under crisis relocation conditions. In addition to Massachusetts, other Region I states (Maine, Connecticut and Vermont) supply 20% of New Hampshire's food, while states outside Region I (New York and Ohio) warehouse the remaining 6%.

Within New Hampshire, 3 major distributors (Associated Grocers of New England, Buy Rite Wholesale Grocery and Wetterau Foods Inc.) account for 33% of the food stored for in-state consumption. Most of the food coming from Massachusetts is in the hands of 9 distributors, while the remaining stocks warehoused in other Region I states come mainly from 6 distributors.

The statistical profile describing food distribution in Region I, coupled with the FEMA food distribution guidelines, provide nuclear civil protection planners with a feasible approach for reallocating food supplies under conditions of crisis relocation. This statistical profile can be used to modify the New Hampshire food support annex to include food distribution details which are consistent with regional food distribution patterns.

RHODE ISLAND SUMMARY

The statistical profile of food distribution in Region I shows that Rhode Island is dependent on warehouses outside the state for about half of its food. Approximately 53% of the food currently reaching Rhode Island residents is warehoused within the state. The chief out-of-state suppliers are a variety of distributors located in Massachusetts, which warehouse roughly 42% of Rhode Island's food stocks. Thus interstate coordination will be required in planning for the distribution of food to Rhode Island residents under crisis relocation conditions. In addition to Massachusetts, Vermont warehouses the remaining 5% of Rhode Island's food supplies.

Within Rhode Island, 3 distributors (Almacs Inc., Roger Williams Food Inc. and Valley Wholesale Grocery Inc.) account for 51% of the food stored for in-state consumption. Most of the food warehoused in other states is in the hands of 5 distributors in Massachusetts and 1 distributor (C and S Wholesale Grocers Inc.) in Vermont.

The statistical profile describing food distribution in Region I, coupled with the FEMA food distribution guidelines, provide nuclear civil protection planners with a feasible approach for reallocating food supplies under conditions of crisis relocation. This statistical profile can be used to modify the Rhode Island food support annex to include food distribution details which are consistent with regional food distribution patterns.

VERMONT SUMMARY

The statistical profile of food distribution in Region I shows that Vermont is heavily dependent on warehouses outside the state for its food supplies. Only 25% of the food currently reaching Vermont residents is warehoused within the state. The chief out-of-state suppliers are a variety of distributors located in New York, which warehouse roughly 34% of Vermont's food stocks. Thus interregional as well as interstate coordination will be required in planning for the distribution of food to Vermont residents under crisis relocation conditions. In addition to New York, New Hampshire supplies 17% of Vermont's food, while other Region I states (Connecticut, Massachusetts and Maine) warehouse the remaining 24%.

Within Vermont, 3 distributors (Cross Co., French and Bean Co., and C and S Wholesale Grocers Inc.) account for 25% of the food stored for in-state consumption. Most of the food coming from New York State is in the hands of 4 distributors, while the remaining stocks warehoused in other Region I states are scattered among more than 9 distributors.

The statistical profile describing food distribution in Region I, coupled with the FEMA food distribution guidelines, provide nuclear civil protection planners with a feasible approach for reallocating food supplies under conditions of crisis relocation. This statistical profile can be used to modify the Vermont food support annex to include food distribution details which are consistent with regional food distribution patterns.

SAMPLE REALLOCATION PLAN FOR THE BOSTON RISK AREA CONGLOMERATE

INTRODUCTION

Nuclear Civil Protection (NCP) Planning encompasses two strategies: in-place protection and crisis relocation. Under the crisis relocation strategy, people from areas threatened by a high risk of nuclear attack will be relocated to hosting areas judged to be safely removed from the hazardous effects of nuclear explosion. The existing food distribution system must then be adjusted and reconfigured to meet the needs of the relocated population.

This plan has been developed to provide a quantitative picture of food distribution networks serving the Boston risk area and its host counties before and after relocation. It discusses the adjustments and strategies entailed in the proposed reallocation plan. In addition, it addresses the problem of transportation stress experienced by major distributors as a result of the reconfiguration of the existing food distribution system.

BOSTON RISK AREA CONGLOMERATE
SUMMARY OF EXISTING FOOD DISTRIBUTION SYSTEM

Under crisis relocation conditions, approximately 1,782,000 residents currently living in the Boston risk area (which includes Suffolk county, and portions of Middlesex, Norfolk and Plymouth counties) will have to relocate to lower-risk host areas in Massachusetts, Maine and New Hampshire. Exhibit 1 illustrates the evacuation pattern of the Boston risk area.

The statistical profile of food distribution in the Boston risk Area Conglomerate shows that area residents are served by warehouses located inside as well as outside the conglomerate. Approximately 35% of the food currently reaching area residents is warehoused within the conglomerate. An additional 44% of the area's food stocks come from outside the conglomerate but within the boundaries of Massachusetts, mainly from Northborough, North Billerica and East Bridgewater. The remaining portion of the conglomerate's food supplies is scattered among a variety of distributors in New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Maine, Vermont, Connecticut, New York and Ohio.

Of the distributors serving the conglomerate, Sweet Life (Northborough warehouse), Stop & Shop (Boston), Star Market (Cambridge), and Food Center (N. Billerica) account for 57% of the food stored for in-area consumption. These four distributors supply close to two-thirds of the food consumed in the Boston risk area, and 27% of the food consumed in the host areas. Out-of-state suppliers contribute about a fifth of the conglomerate's food stocks. The current annual sales volume of each distributor serving the conglomerate is listed by county in Attachment A-1.

The market share of the four major distributors serving the Boston conglomerate ranges from 8% (Food Center) to 21% (Sweet Life). Star Market and Stop & Shop each supply 11% and 16% of the retail food stores. Exhibit 2 details the market share of these distributors in the risk and host areas. The geographic areas covered by these distributors overlap, serving primarily the major metropolitan areas in Massachusetts, including the risk areas of Lawrence-Haverhill, Lowell, Brockton, New Bedford and Worcester in addition to Boston. The service area of all four distributors extend into New Hampshire, including the risk areas of Nashua and Manchester. About a third of Stop & Shop's food stocks are reserved for residents in Connecticut, primarily those living in the risk areas of Hartford, New Haven, Bridgeport and Bristol. In addition, portions of Sweet Life's, Star Market's and Stop & Shop's supplies are shipped to Rhode Island, primarily to the Providence-Pawtucket-Warwick risk area.

BOSTON RISK AREA CONGLOMERATE
PROPOSED FOOD DISTRIBUTION SYSTEM ADJUSTMENTS FOR CRISIS RELOCATION

The chief adjustment in the food distribution system in support of the crisis relocation strategy entails the shift of supplies from risk area retail outlets to host area retail outlets and mass feeding centers. In general, wholesale warehouses serving the Boston risk population before evacuation will continue to do so after evacuation by shifting deliveries from their risk area stores to their host area stores. The market share of each of the four major distributors serving the Boston conglomerate under relocation is displayed in Exhibit 3. Food will be delivered to relocatees through a combination of retail outlets and mass feeding centers. Wholesale warehouses with no host-area outlets will supply mass feeding centers directly. Major food processing activities in the risk area will continue operations throughout the evacuation period. Detailed reallocation plan for each distributor serving the conglomerate may be found in Attachment A-2.

In addition to the redirection of flow suggested in the plan, distributors should consider using a shuttle system in which full trailers are left in the host area as storage depots, emptied, and replaced with another trailer load on the return trip. This mode of operation would alleviate much of the need for additional storage space, but it could also increase the requirement for trailers as much as 100%, depending on the transportation stress level experienced by individual warehouse. Another modification of the food distribution system would involve redirecting incoming shipments to available warehouse space in the host areas. Emergency warehouse space can be converted from available unused buildings or commandeered from less critical industries in the host areas. NCP planners surveying the host areas should be on the lookout for suitable warehouse space.

Exhibit 4 shows the revised distribution plans for the four major distributors serving the Boston conglomerate. These plans have been expressed both in terms of a percentage increase in shipments to the distributor's stores in individual counties, and in terms of the estimated increase in tonnage of essential commodities going to each county. Host area residents and evacuees lodged with host area residents, will obtain food through their customary retail outlets. Evacuees lodged in congregate care facilities will obtain food through a combination of mass feeding centers and retail outlets.

Section 3.B.2 also shows the percentage of truck capacity by weight and volume devoted to the shipment of critical foodstuffs. As an additional planning aid, this information is broken down into case- and pallet-loadings for two truckloads capable of feeding 3,800 citizens (See Attachment B). Suggested shipping guidelines on essential foodstuffs for wholesalers serving the host area retail outlets may be found in Section 3.B.1.

Although the total post-relocation demand for food in each county can be estimated in advance, the exact split between mass feeding centers and retail outlets will not be known until the relocation is accomplished. The need for mass feeding centers is largest in those areas hosting a proportionally large number of evacuees and in those areas whose risk area outlets are not served by the same distributors supplying the risk area. In the case of the Boston risk area conglomerate, mass feeding centers will be required in Kennebec and York counties in Maine; Merrimack, Hillsborough, Grafton, Strafford and Belknap counties in New Hampshire; and Franklin county in Massachusetts. Host areas located in these counties shelter 68% of the total risk population. The demand for food in these host areas is likely to exceed the capacity of the local retail outlets. The outlets of Sweet Life, Stop & Shop, Star Market, Food Center, First National, James Ferrera, Cressy Dockham and Buy-Rite in the host areas will experience demand increases equal to or in excess of 500% in the absence of mass feeding centers. Hence the establishment of mass feeding centers should be an integral part of the planning process in these host areas.

BOSTON RISK AREA CONGLOMERATE TRANSPORTATION STRESS

To explore quantitatively the extent of the strain placed on the local delivery system of a warehouse as a result of crisis relocation, a transportation stress factor (defined as the ratio of post-evacuation ton-miles to pre-evacuation ton-miles) has been estimated for the four major distributors serving the Boston conglomerate. From the standpoint of the Boston conglomerate, the transportation stress factor can be considered to have two components:

- (1) Additional mileage imposed by the movement of Boston residents away from their normal source of supply.
- (2) Mileage requirements imposed by the continued operation of the remaining distribution network, some of which will be reconfigured in response to other risk area movements.

The transportation stress imposed by the relocation of Boston alone ranges from 2.3 for Food Center to a high of 8.8 for Star Market. Sweet Life Foods and Stop & Shop Inc. would experience a stress factor of 3.9 and 5.4 respectively. These stress factors would be cause for concern if they represented the entire distribution volume of these warehouses. However, food shipments into the Boston risk area conglomerate account for less than half of the sales from Star Market's Cambridge, Sweet Life's Northboro and Food Center's North Billerica warehouses, and only a quarter of Stop & Shop's Boston operation. Remaining shipments from these warehouses are scattered throughout Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Vermont, Maine, New Jersey and New York, and are not significantly affected by crisis relocation. The relative stability of these long distance shipments will serve to offset the effects of massive movements out of the Boston risk area. In order to assess the consequences of crisis relocation on a particular warehouse, the transportation stress factor must be computed for the entire geographic area served by the warehouse.

Although the detailed evaluation of other risk conglomerates served by these warehouses was beyond the scope of the current study, it is possible to develop a rough estimate of transportation stress for the remainder of each distributor's service area by using approximation techniques developed in earlier SYSTAN work (Food System Support of the Relocation Strategy, September, 1975). Using this technique, the total transportation stress for the four major distributors serving the Boston conglomerate can be estimated (See Exhibit 4). Food Center and Stop & Shop would experience a stress level of 1.4 or less, while Sweet Life Foods and Star Market Co. would incur stress factors of 2.0 and 2.5 respectively. Since research has shown that existing transportation equipment is not generally used to capacity, driver and vehicle productivity can be increased by relaxing regulatory constraints (e.g. relaxing driver restrictions and weight limitations) and improving utilization of existing equipment (e.g. shipping only full-pallet loads; eliminating slack in current vehicle schedule; relaxing maintenance requirements; shipping only essential items; and eliminating light loads). By implementing these productivity improvements, it is estimated that no increase in drivers or equipment is required for Food Center and Stop & Shop, while a 30% increase in drivers is called for at the Sweet Life Foods' Northboro warehouse. For Star Market's Cambridge operation, an increase of 71% in drivers and 18% in equipment is required.

Whenever trailers are shuttled and used for host area storage, it is estimated that one additional trailer will be needed for each trailer employed for storage if the transportation stress level experienced by the warehouse exceeds 1.8. As the stress level falls below 1.8, some existing trailers may become available for host area storage. The number of trailers which can be used in this fashion increases as the stress level drops. At a stress level of 1.0, it is estimated that as much as 50% of the existing trailer fleet could be used for on-site storage in the host areas.
