Summary

TRAC-LEE conducted a resource requirements analysis to identify those items of personal and organizational clothing and individual equipment which are the minimum essential items for the soldier on the battlefield. Based upon the Common Table of Allowances (CTA) 50-900 and several Supply Bulletins (SB), we developed lists for desert, tropical, temperate, and arctic environments. With assistance from USAFISA, we identified the number and types of personnel in a heavy division. Using additional SB and a database from the Defense Personnel Supply Center (DPSC), we developed estimates of the cost for thirty days of supply (personal and OCIE) for this heavy division. In addition, we developed estimates of the cost, weight, and volume for thirty days of supply (personal and OCIE) for a complement of 1000 soldiers. The following table summarizes the estimates for the 1000 soldier complement.

Estimates for 1000 Soldier Complement

Climatic Zones	Estimated Cost	Estimated Weight	Estimated Volume
Desert	$1,027,000	52.2 tons	10,061 cubic feet
Tropical	$972,000	51.5 tons	9,890 cubic feet
Temperate	$1,771,000	71.8 tons	13,564 cubic feet
Arctic	$1,140,000	56.4 tons	10,995 cubic feet

Personal and Organizational Clothing and Individual Equipment (OCIE) on the Battlefield

Resource Requirements Analysis

1. PURPOSE

This Resource Requirements Analysis identifies the minimum personal and organizational clothing and individual equipment (OCIE) needed to resupply the soldiers on the battlefield. The information will be used as part of an operational concept for issuing organizational clothing and individual equipment (OCIE) and personal clothing to soldiers during wartime operations. The resources identified may also apply to operations other than war (OOTW).

2. OBJECTIVE

Identify the personal and OCIE needed by the soldier on the battlefield, along with the costs associated with the resupply of those items.

3. PROBLEM and BACKGROUND

a. The Army has a long standing deficiency in its capability to replace OCIE and personal clothing on the battlefield. This deficiency dates back to the early 1980s when selected logistics capabilities were scaled back or eliminated under the Army of Excellence (AOE) initiative in order to generate personnel spaces for combat units. Specifically, the deletion of the personnel resources which operated the central issue facility (CIF) in each division eliminated the only capability within the divisions for issuing OCIE and personal clothing on the battlefield.

b. The need to re-establish the capability for this critical supply function surfaced during Operation Just Cause, Operations Desert Shield/Storm, and, to a lesser degree, military operations in Somalia and Haiti. Only through ad hoc procedures was the Army able to achieve marginal success in providing replacement OCIE and personal clothing during these actions. This replacement should not be left to an ad hoc procedure which must be re-visited each time soldiers deploy into an operational area. There must be clearly defined procedures, an adequate force structure, and sufficient stockage of supplies (including tariff sizes) to meet the needs of the soldiers on the battlefield.

c. This resource requirements analysis addresses the stockage of supplies (personal and OCIE) needed to support the soldiers on the battlefield.

4. SCOPE

a. This analysis considered those items of personal and OCIE specified by the Common Table of Allowances (CTA) 50-900.

b. Climatic zones I through VII were grouped by desert (zones I and II), tropical (zones I and II), temperate (zones III through VI), and arctic (zone VII) conditions.

c. Historical data was used for replacement factors (Supply Bulletin (SB) 10-496) and size tariffs (SB 10-523). No new statistical data was developed.

d. The analysis did not include special items for Army band members, rank/insignia items, or specialized equipment, such as survival kits for use in aircraft. Only the basic chemical protective items were included.

e. The analysis covered 30 days of supply for a generic heavy division and a complement of 1000 soldiers.

5. LIMITATIONS

a. The total costs, developed in terms of dollars, weight, and volume, are rough estimates based upon the best available data and should be tailored and updated before being applied to any specific situation.

b. The size tariffs provided are based upon a worldwide Army population. Based upon Headquarters TRADOC guidance, for smaller forces, quantities should be increased by 5 percent to 10 percent to accommodate statistical variances. For example, for the heavy division, all quantities for sized items should be increased by 5 percent; for a brigade sized unit, the increase should be closer to 10 percent. These increases are not included in the estimates provided since the populations evaluated are designed to serve as building blocks for any specific force structure. The impact is discussed in the section of this report on the findings.

6. ASSUMPTIONS

a. Data from SBs and from the Defense Personnel Supply Center (DPSC) is reasonably accurate and appropriate to use for the analysis.

b. Historical replacement factors are valid predictors of future requirements and newer items of clothing and equipment will follow similar trends.

c. The worldwide Army population is similar enough to smaller segments of the force to allow for extrapolation of quantities for tariff sizes with appropriate adjustments for statistical variance as outlined in paragraph 5b above.

7. METHODOLOGY

a. Identification.

(1) Using CTA 50-900, dated 1 September 1994, we developed comprehensive lists of personal and organizational clothing and individual equipment (OCIE) with the basis of issue (BOI) for each item for four environments. The desert and tropical lists both cover climatic zones I and II, while the temperate list covers zones III through VI, and the arctic list covers zone VII. These lists do not include special items for Army band members, rank/insignia items, or specialized equipment, such as survival kits for use in aircraft. Subject Matter Experts (SME) reviewed the lists for the appropriateness of both included and excluded items. Their recommendations for additions and deletions were incorporated.

(2) Each clothing or equipment item has a set of replacement factors associated with it which are dependent upon climatic zone. The replacement factor for a specific item in use in the designated climatic zone(s) is the estimated percentage of clothing or equipment in use that will need to be replaced each month due to wear and tear, enemy action, pilferage, abandonment, and other causes. Separation of personnel from service is not considered. The factors were taken from SB 10-496, Supply Control Wartime Replacement Factors and Consumption Rates for DLA/GSA Assigned Items, dated August 1988. The Office of the Project Manager (PM)--Soldier provided us with an updated, unpublished set of 1993 factors. This updated list included several items which were not in the supply bulletin (SB). For those few items which did not appear in either the SB or in the updated list, we used rates from comparable items in accordance with the guidance from paragraph 5b of the SB. Additionally, after SME review, the replacement factor for the belt buckle, black, LIN C32045, was changed from .125 to .025, i.e., from 12.5 percent to 2.5 percent per month, for all climatic zones. The SME review found all other factors to be reasonable.

(3) Using SB 700-20, Army Adopted/Other Items Selected for Authorization/List of Reportable Items, dated 1 September 1994, we cross-referenced national stock numbers (NSN), line item numbers (LIN), and nomenclature. Individual costs also were taken from this SB. Where multiple NSN and/or costs existed for a single LIN—usually due to a separate NSN for each size—we used the highest cost value and recorded all NSN. The database from DPSC provided an additional cross-reference for NSN, costs, and nomenclature, as well as providing the weight and volume for individual items. Where multiple values for weight or volume appeared for the same items—again, usually due to several sizes—we selected the most likely values, favoring the larger values.

(4) Personnel numbers for a heavy division were taken from a personnel report for ITOE 87000L300, dated 14 March 1995, provided by USAFISA. The heavy division was used as a starting point at the request of MG Guest, Commandant of the Quartermaster School. Table 1 shows the significant personnel totals and subtotals used to develop the estimated cost for 30 days of supply of personal and OCIE for the heavy division. For those few items which are gender specific, we assumed that 11 percent of the division was female. This takes into account the higher density of females in the division rear and support areas. The same personnel types were used to develop a listing for a complement of 1000 soldiers.

Table 1. Heavy Division Personnel Totals

Categories <sup>1</sup>	Number of Soldiers
Division total	18,272
Officers/Warrant Officers	1,607
Enlisted	16,665
Ground Troops (Includes all Combat Units)	8,837
Infantry	2,661
Infantry--not BFV	771
Combat Vehicle Crews (includes BFV, tanks, self-propelled artillery)	5,165
Pilots/Flying Status	248
Mechanics	4,498

1 These categories are not mutually exclusive.

b. Costing.

(1) The estimated cost to supply a heavy division for thirty days in a given environment is the total of the estimated cost of each item of personal and OCIE for that environment for thirty days. The estimated cost of each item is the number of that item that is required to support the division for the time period multiplied by the individual cost of the item. The required number of each item is the percent of that item requiring replacement each month times the number of months—in this case one—multiplied by the basis of issue (BOI) of the item, multiplied by the number of soldiers affected. The same calculations, with weight or volume replacing the cost, yield an estimate of the total weight or volume for thirty days of supply. These individual calculations were incorporated into electronic spreadsheets for each climatic condition.

For example, in a desert environment, the computation involving mechanics' coveralls is:

required number of coveralls = replacement factor x 1 month
x BOI x number of mechanics required number of coveralls = .167 x 1 x 2 x 4498 = 1502.332 *

estimated cost of coveralls = required number of coveralls
x unit price

estimated cost of coveralls = 1502.332 x $22.10 = $33,201.54

* Fractional values were not rounded at this point since rounding up would unduly inflate the estimates and rounding down would understate the requirement. In addition, we also developed a cost estimate based upon 1000 soldiers that can be used to build an estimate for varying force structure. In that case, any fractional values need to be retained and consolidated.

(2) We used the same methodology and another set of spreadsheets to develop an estimate of the cost of personal and OCIE for thirty days of supply for a population of 1000 soldiers. For high use items, i.e., items which are used by 1000 or more soldiers in the heavy division, we set the number of soldiers affected to 1000 and used the computation outlined above. For low density items, i.e., those items which are used by fewer than 750 soldiers in the heavy division, we rounded the actual number affected from the heavy division personnel computations to the nearest ten and then proceeded as above. For those items for which the requirement is defined in terms of a percentage of the end strength, the requirement was based upon a percentage of the 1000.

c. Tariff sizes. Tariffs, the quantities required for sized items, came from SB 10-523, Size Tariff for Clothing Equipment and Footwear, dated 1 June 1992. We developed a consolidated list of sized items for all climatic zones, showing the tariff per 1000 items.

8. FINDINGS

a. Table 2 summarizes the cost estimates for a heavy division for thirty days of supply for the various climatic zones. A summary of the heavy division force structure upon which these estimates were based is at Appendix A. The detailed listings for these estimates are at Appendix B. The temperate zone estimate includes coverage for hot and cold weather and would need to be tailored to accommodate the local climatic conditions for the duration of the specific operation.

Table 2. Heavy Division Cost Estimates

Climatic Zones	Estimated Cost
Desert (I & II)	$15,750,000
Tropical (I & II)	$14,752,000
Temperate (III-VI)	$19,603,000
Arctic (VII)	$17,681,000

b. Table 3 summarizes the estimated cost, weight, and volume for a complement of 1000 soldiers for the various climatic zones. The detailed listings for these estimates are included in Appendix C.

Table 3. Estimates for 1000 Soldier Complement

Climatic Zones	Estimated Cost	Estimated Weight	Estimated Volume
Desert	$1,027,000	52.2 tons	10,061 cubic feet
Tropical	$972,000	51.5 tons	9,890 cubic feet
Temperate	$1,771,000	71.8 tons	13,564 cubic feet
Arctic	$1,140,000	56.4 tons	10,995 cubic feet

c. The listing for size tariffs is at Appendix D. The effect of a 10 percent increase in sized items on the estimates for the 1000 soldier complement in a desert environment is shown in Table 4. Since the sized items are only a part of the overall requirement, the estimates increase by less than 10 percent. The cost increases by approximately 9 percent, while the weight increases by approximately 6 percent and the volume increases only by 4 percent. There would be a similar effect on the estimates for the remaining climatic conditions. In actual practice, for those items which have relatively few sizes and where size is not critical, such as the belt, socks, or t-shirts, the increase could be reduced to 5 percent with no adverse effects. In a theater where there were multiple divisions and corps assets included, the increase could be limited to 5 percent for all sized items. (See paragraph 5b for a discussion on tariff sizes.)
