INTRODUCTION

✓ In preparing this bibliography our immediate objective was to compile as complete a listing as we could of currently published Latin American military journals and, in those cases where journals have been available for inspection, to provide brief annotations to help readers select the journals most relevant to their interests.

The bibliography is also intended to serve a broader aim: to facilitate the study of Latin American military establishments and thus, given the social and political roles of the military, Latin America generally. ✓ There are, no doubt, more important sources for the study of military establishments than the journals they publish. Nonetheless the student who ignores these journals is losing a useful source of information on Latin American military life.

BACK TO T&C

It is, perhaps, apparent that we attach more importance to the journals as a source for the study of the Latin American military than as a body of technical literature on professional military subjects. This is indeed so, partly because of our own interests in the Latin American military as a social institution, and partly because much of their material on professional military subjects can be found in other journals more readily available in this country. Naturally, in the field of Latin American military and naval history, in some areas of military medicine, and on topics where Latin American military experience has been distinctive these journals provide an especially valuable source of professional discussion.

Like military journals in most other parts of the world, those of Latin America serve both as a means for disseminating knowledge of professional military subjects and as "house organs." These objectives are pursued sometimes by a specialization of different journals along one or the other of these two lines and sometimes by a diversification of the contents of individual journals to cover both interests.

Both types of journals and materials contribute to an understanding of the Latin American military. The professional articles--ranging from elementary or basic training material for recruits to highly technical papers--throw light on the professional interests, skill levels, and educational problems of different military establishments and their several services. Editorials and articles on national security problems and national and international military affairs contribute to the understanding of internal political-military problems and of relations with other states. Feld's^{*} use of United States service journals to study military self-images in the United States suggests one way in which such materials, and the present bibliography, might be employed in studies of the Latin American military.

The institutional ("house organ") materials provide information on other interesting aspects of the military: its schools and facilities, educational and civic action programs, social and cultural life and recreation, personalities and career lines, inter-American contacts, and ceremonial occasions and activities. Even the photographs, which many of the journals provide in generous numbers, convey information and impressions that contribute to our knowledge and understanding.

Naturally the use of these journals is dependent upon their accessibility. Only a minority of the currently published journals are received by libraries in the United States. Holdings as of 1960 are given in the Union List of Military Periodicals, Air University Library, Maxwell Air Force Base, Alabama, 1960.

We hope that the present bibliography will assist librarians, particularly military librarians and those at centers of Latin American studies, to increase their holdings; and that it will help researchers in the United States and in Latin America to make more extensive use of an interesting body of material.

* * *

The sources and procedures that we have employed are as follows.

We began by building up a list of Latin American military journals from various bibliographical sources. The most important of these was the Union List of Military Periodicals (see above) prepared by an interservice committee of military librarians and edited and published by the Air University Library. This source provided us with a list of 69 journals held by 39 libraries in the United States and Canada. Additional titles were provided by the Directory of Current Latin American Periodicals prepared in 1955-56 by the Pan American Union for UNESCO (Paris, 1958); Library of Congress, New Serial Titles, 1962 Cumulation (1963) and Aeronautical and Space Serial Publications, a World List (1962); Irene Zimmerman, A Guide to Current Latin American Periodicals: Humanities and Social Sciences (Gainesville, Florida, 1961); Guide to Latin American Scientific and Technical Periodicals prepared by the Centro de Documentación Científica y Técnica de México for the Pan American Union, 1962. The Library of Congress, the New York Public Library, the Air University Library, and the Army Library were kind enough to go over our list and to check it against their own holdings.

The foregoing sources provided us with a list of more than 100 journals. Through the assistance of the United States Air Force, our list was sent to the United States Air Force attachés in the Latin American countries with a request for sample copies of those military journals currently being published and for copies of any other current military journals that we had not listed. From the attachés we received a small library of current Latin American military journals. Included were a number of journals we had not known existed, as well as those that appeared on our list but which were unavailable in libraries in the United States. Without the journals we received in this manner, it would not have been possible for us to prepare an annotated bibliography.

Occasionally, the journals we received provided leads to still other journals, either through editorial references or from lists of exchanges (canjes) between journals. Some additional titles, but more especially an opportunity to inspect recent issues of some journals that we had not received, were provided by consulting the holdings in the Biblioteca Nacional del Perú, the library of the Centro de Estudios Histórico-Militares del Perú, both in Lima, the Biblioteca del Ejército, Mexico City, the Library of the Inter-American Defense College, Washington, D.C., and the Simón Bolívar Memorial Library, United States Air Force School for Latin America, Canal Zone.

We have presented the journals by country of origin. Within each country we have divided our material into two parts. Part I is an annotated bibliography of those military journals that we have personally examined in one or more copies. The annotations usually include the title of the journal, the issuing and/or editing agency, frequency of publication, year of founding or, more usually, the volume and/or issue number of the last issue examined, approximate number of pages per issue, and a brief description of the contents.

Part II under each country lists the titles of additional military journals. We have not seen copies of these journals, but we believe that most of them were recently in existence and are still being issued.

We have relegated to an Appendix a list of military journals that, to the best of our knowledge, have been discontinued.

Table 1 gives the number of journals, by country of origin, in each of the three foregoing categories.

Despite the generous cooperation that we have received, the present bibliography suffers from a number of limitations and deficiencies. The user should keep the following points in mind:

1. It is almost certain that our lists are incomplete. New journals are in constant process of formation, and we are not at all confident that our list is complete even with respect to the older journals.

2. The mortality rate of military journals also seems to be quite high; it is probable that a number of the journals listed are no longer being published or have changed their names. This is more likely to be the case with journals we have not personally inspected (Part II). Those journals that have been annotated (Part I) can only be assumed to be in existence up to the date of the last copy inspected. Most of them, no doubt, are still being published but perhaps for complete accuracy the bibliography should be considered as a listing of "recently and currently" rather than of "currently" published journals.

* Includes one journal published in Guatemala for the Central American Defense Board.

3. We have not adopted any rigorous definition of a "military journal." Most of the journals are published by military establishments, in many cases primarily for military personnel and their families but not infrequently for the general public as well. In some cases it is clear that the journals are intended to interpret the military or a particular service to the public. We have included journals published by national police forces and a few journals dealing with aviation and maritime affairs.

4. We have generally given the issue designation of the last issue inspected or some equivalent information from which the probable age of the journal can be inferred. These inferences are uncertain since the terms used (tomo, año, época, número) do not seem to have an entirely uniform acceptance. Epoca, however, generally signifies that there have been interruptions in the publication of the journal. Thus "Epoca III" means that the journal resumed publication after two interruptions.

5. We have usually been able to give the name of the ministry or military office issuing the journal. It is our impression that this is subject to rather frequent change but that it will very likely suffice for purposes of correspondence. Specific addresses are sometimes given by the journals, but we believe that these become obsolete too rapidly to include them in the annotation.

6. Our brief summaries of the content or character of a journal have generally been prepared after consulting three or four issues. This number was not always adequate to establish the regularity of certain features or interests of a journal. Besides, editorial policy itself may undergo change. When only one issue was available for inspection, this is generally stated.

* * *

We wish to record our indebtedness and express our gratitude for the very generous, and often indispensable, assistance we have received: to the United States Air Force and to the air attachés of the United States embassies in Latin America for the receipt of sample copies of military journals; to the Library of Congress, the New York Public Library, the Air University Library, the Army Library, the library of the Inter-American Defense College, the Biblioteca Nacional del Perú, the library of the Centro de Estudios Histórico-Militares del Perú, the Biblioteca del Ejército, Mexico City, and the Simón Bolívar Memorial Library, United States Air Force School for Latin America, Canal Zone, for assistance in checking our listings and in providing journals for our inspection; and finally to the bibliographers of Latin American periodical literature whose listings provided the initial basis for our work.

We will greatly appreciate receiving corrections and additions from readers for incorporation in any later edition of the bibliography that may be issued.

ARGENTINA

I^{*}

ARMAS Y TIRO

Published every two months. Under its present name, Año 1 is 1963. Formerly published as the Revista de Tiro and still earlier as Tiro Nacional Argentino (founded in 1910). About 70 pages.

"The journal 'Armas y Tiro' is devoted specifically to shooting in all its forms and aspects. Consequently it deals with ballistics, the mechanics of arms and their mode of use, shooting both in war and in sport, and finally shooting in connection with hunting and its associated activities, such as outings and camping.

"The aims of 'Armas y Tiro' in the broadest sense are to benefit the nation and thus in addition to teaching and informing, it orients our youth and creates a sense of civic responsibility.

"'Armas y Tiro' is thus an effective aid to National Defence, for which reason the Dirección General de Tiro is the patron of this publication in so far as it identifies itself with its aims and in this respect acknowledges it as its spokesman and organ of publicity." (From Armas y Tiro.)

* See Introduction, p. 5.

ARGENTINA--continued

AVIACION Y ASTRONAUTICA

Privately published every second month. The November-December issue of 1963 is Año V, No. 38. About 55 pages.

Publishes technical articles on aviation equipment, navigation, and other operational problems and on developments in space flight. News articles on air shows, aeronautical congresses, aviation industry, flying clubs.

BOLETIN DEL CENTRO NAVAL

Issued quarterly. The issues of 1963 are Año LXXXII, Tomo LXXXI, the last issue of that year being No. 657. About 150 pages.

This journal publishes articles on naval operations and materiel; on technological and scientific problems; on geopolitical and military-political subjects. A section is devoted to notes on military and political affairs in Argentina and abroad. Necrology. Notes on activities of the Centro Naval.

MANUAL DE INFORMACIONES

Published every second month by the Departamento de Acción Psicológica del Ejército. The 1963 issues are Vol. V. About 60 to 125 pages.

"Intended to aid military personnel in some of their professional duties. The contents include articles intended to make available to cadres material related to information and cultural activities in a succinct and popular form. Thereby we hope to bring to our readers, especially those in distant garrisons, information on those affairs that are attracting public discussion." (Editorial comment.)

Articles on information media, psychological warfare, communism, technology; military and political news; illustrated novelettes, cartoons; hobbies.

MARINA

Published monthly by the Liga Naval Argentina. The December 1963 issue is Año XXVIII, No. 323. About 50 pages.

This journal publishes news and other information bearing on the interests of the Argentine Navy and the shipbuilding and shipping industries. Contains considerable information on naval personnel--promotions, assignments, decorations. Coverage of ship construction, launchings, and the general state of the Argentine merchant marine.

REVISTA DEFENSA NACIONAL

This illustrated journal is published three times a year by an editorial board chiefly composed of retired officers. Founded in January 1962, the journal has undergone a number of changes in format and size (the four issues examined varied from 64 to 143 pages in length). The January-April 1965 issue is Año IV, No. 10. No. 6, September-December 1963, contains an index for Nos. 1-6.

Contains articles of general interest by both military and civilian authors. Recent issues have dealt more or less equally with matters of historical, military, international, political, and general cultural interest.

REVISTA DE LA ESCUELA DE COMANDO Y ESTADO MAYOR

Published quarterly under the supervision of the Director of the Argentine Command and General Staff School. About 100 pages.

The journal contains mainly technical military articles by recent graduates of the school. Occasional articles also deal with broad strategic or international political issues. Issue No. 40-41, 1964, is a double issue of 213 pages devoted to self-propelled missiles and rockets.

REVISTA DE LA ESCUELA SUPERIOR DE GUERRA

Published quarterly by the Secretary of War. The May-June issue of 1965 carries the designation Año XLIII, No. 359. About 150 pages.

A 1963 issue (No. 349) was devoted entirely to an analytical history of "The Indo-Chinese War: 1945-54." The May-June 1965 issue was devoted to the "personality and works of German political-military thinkers and leaders." Notes on activities of the Escuela Superior de Guerra.

REVISTA DE LA SANIDAD MILITAR ARGENTINA

Founded in 1891 and published quarterly by the Technical Department of the Dirección General de Sanidad. There were presumably some lapses in publication since a 1963 issue carries the designation Año LXII.

The one issue available for inspection contained approximately 75 pages devoted to technical medical papers, including an epidemiological study of Bolivia, and to abstracts of articles from other medical journals; reports on technical advances; summaries of papers delivered at medical meetings; announcements; necrology; book reviews.

REVISTA DEL CIRCULO MILITAR

Issued quarterly. The April-June issue of 1964 is Año 64, No. 672. About 150 pages.

Publishes articles bearing largely on broad problems of national security and the role of the military in national life. Articles on economics, civic action, civil war, geopolitics, military history. Brief reports on activities of the Círculo Militar. Necrology.

REVISTA DEL SUBOFICIAL

A publication of the Secretariat of War and issued quarterly by the Comando en Jefe of the Army. (Formerly issued by the Inspección General de Instrucción.) No volume or year designation. The April-June issue of 1963 is Nos. 527-529. About 80 pages.

This publication provides instructional material on problems common to all services. Material is presented in succinct training manual style and covers such topics as use of various weapons, drill, combat. A 1958 issue dealt largely with problems of the individual soldier, discipline, and leadership.

REVISTA DE PUBLICACIONES NAVALES

Published quarterly by the Servicio de Informaciones Navales of the Secretaria de Marina. The January-March issue of 1965 is Tomo XCVII, Año LXV, No. 556. About 125 pages.

As the title indicates this journal mostly republishes (in Spanish translation) articles and notes from other naval journals. The articles republished are largely technical papers on operations, logistics, weapons, navigation, technology; articles also appear on naval power and political-military affairs relating to naval power. Each article carries a subject category code for filing and identification purposes. Selected book acquisitions by various Argentine naval libraries are listed.

REVISTA MILITAR DE VETERINARIA

Published every two months by the Dirección General de Remonta and Veterinaria. Issues published in 1963 carry the designation Vol. X.

Issues average about 50 pages and carry three or four technical articles, together with abstracts of articles appearing in other technical journals. The issues examined contained material on biological and chemical warfare and on radioactivity affecting food of animal origin. Personnel notes; necrology; retirements.

REVISTA NACIONAL AERONAUTICA Y ESPACIAL

Official publication of the Círculo de Aeronáutica. Issued monthly. The April 1965 issue carries the designation Año XXV, No. 275. About 65 pages.

Reports on developments in civil and military aviation and in the aviation industry. Material on and of interest to aero clubs. Technical articles on equipment; on civil and military flying experiences in foreign countries; and on space flight. Brief book reviews and summaries of journal articles. Index of advertisers. Editorial.

EL SOLDADO ARGENTINO

Published by the Secretary of War, edited by the Army Information Service. Double number 671-672 (Vol. 41, 1962) and double number 673-674 (Vol. 42, 1963) contain about 100 pages each and were issued in printings of 50,000 copies.

"The magazine 'El Soldado Argentino' was first published on July 15, 1921, and since its first number has been a moral guide for young conscripts, offering them a friendly hand and timely advice."

This magazine for young soldiers contains reading material of an inspirational character: patriotic, religious, and political; jokes, cartoons; popular articles on subjects of general interest. Vol. 41 was a "número extraordinario" devoted entirely to a complete reproduction of Martín Fierro.

BOLIVIA

REVISTA AEREA MILITAR

Official journal of the Bolivian Air Force. The 1963 issues are designated Año VI. The last issue of that year, dated December, was No. 14. The journal appears to be issued three times each year. About 100 pages.

Articles are brief and not highly technical. A number of them have been reproduced from other journals. One section of the journal is devoted to historical papers, another to articles of more direct professional military interest. There is a photographic section and a section devoted to institutional Air Force news. Necrology. Personnel news. Editorial.

REVISTA MILITAR

Official organ of the Army. Founded in July 1885. Issues of 1963 are marked Año LXXVI, Epoca VII. The issue of November 1963 is No. 263. Some issues receive multiple numbers. Appears quarterly. Normally about 100 pages.

In addition to articles of technical military character, considerable attention is given to broad national security problems and speeches of political leaders. Material on civic action. Personnel and other institutional news of the Army. Photographic section.

MENSAJERO AERONAUTICO

BRAZIL

A ANCORA

Official organ of the Associação dos Suboficiais e Sargentos da Marinha (founded 1907). Published quarterly. Issues of 1963 are Ano XXXV, that of July-September being No. 176. About 30 pages.

This journal publishes information on the administration, finances, and facilities of the association; news of the cultural, athletic, and other activities of its members; notes of social activities and ceremonies; necrology. Occasional brief articles on subjects of general interest.

AVIACAO E ASTRONAUTICA

Privately published monthly. The December 1963 issue is No. 308 of Vol. XXV. About 16 pages.

Publishes articles and news items on civil and military aviation in Brazil and abroad.

BOLETIM DO CLUBE NAVAL

Published quarterly. The third issue of 1964 is No. 179. A 1963 issue is designated Ano LXXV; 160 to 200 pages.

This substantial journal publishes articles both on broad national security and international political-military subjects and on naval warfare and maritime problems. Book review section and summaries of other military, especially naval and maritime, journals.

BOLETIM DO INSTITUTO BRASILEIRO DE AERONAUTICA

Submitted as a current journal, but the only issues available for examination were from 1961 (Ano 9). Published monthly. Mimeographed. About 50 pages.

Highly technical papers on aviation equipment and operations. Brief articles on commercial, civil, and military aviation developments in Brazil and abroad.

A DEFESA NACIONAL

Published by the Ministry of War. Founded in October 1913. A special unnumbered issue marking the 50th anniversary of the journal and providing information on its development appeared in October 1963. The March-April issue of 1963 is No. 594. About 100 pages.

Publishes articles on broad subjects bearing on national defense. Geopolitical, economic, and historical studies predominate.

BRAZIL--continued

A MARINHA EM REVISTA

Published every two months by the Navy. The November-December issue of 1963 is Ano XVI, No. 180. About 50 pages.

The journal publishes articles and news of broad general interest concerning the activities of Navy ships, units, installations. Annual (?) calendar of Brazilian historical and naval events. Personnel news covers officers and ratings. Social notes. Reports of ceremonial occasions.

NOTICIARIO DO EXERCITO

Published daily by the Ministry of War. Issues of January 1964 are marked Ano VII, that of January 25, 1964, being No. 1592; 4 pages.

An Army newspaper carrying mostly official notices and announcements. Presidential decrees, personnel transfers, promotions, decorations. Announcements of various Army administration offices. Some social and sports news.

REVISTA DE AERONAUTICA

This well-presented journal is published every two months by the Clube de Aeronáutica. The July-August issue of 1964 is Ano 6, No. 27, and is 60 pages. Illustrated.

Although primary emphasis is given to news and articles concerning the Brazilian Air Force, space is also given to general political and military problems.

REVISTA DE INTENDENCIA DA AERONAUTICA

Published every second month by the Diretoria de Intendência da Aeronáutica. Issues of 1963 are Ano XII, and that of May-June is Nos. 141-142. Issues range from 75 to 175 duodecimo pages.

Apart from an editorial and a directory of the offices and personnel of the Intendência, this journal is devoted to the publication of laws, presidential decrees, and official announcements relevant to military administration.

REVISTA DE INTENDENCIA DO EXERCITO BRASILEIRO

Published by the Quartel General de Intendência do Exército. Founded March 1926. Submitted as currently published, but the only issue seen is No. 107, September-October 1959, Ano XXXIII.

Articles on finances, administration, and supply (especially as related to foodstuffs). Institutional news and general economic notes.

REVISTA DE MEDICINA MILITAR

Submitted as currently published but the only issue we have seen dates from 1952. It was then a quarterly and in Ano XLI. The journal is authorized by the Ministry of War and published by the Diretoria de Saúde do Exército.

Publishes articles on technical medical subjects and on Brazilian military medical installations. Summaries of articles from other military medical journals. Considerable information on personnel and activities of medical organizations. Official decrees.

REVISTA DO CIRCULO DE ENGENHARIA MILITAR

The Círculo was founded in 1938. Issues of 1963 are Ano 25, the April-September issue being No. 61. Issued about three times per year. About 80 pages.

Most articles are on technical subjects and generally on science and applied science topics (electronics, propulsion, nuclear reactions, etc.) and not on operational military engineering problems. Some articles on weapons and on research organization and engineering training. Reports of meetings, speeches, and affairs of the Círculo de Engenharia Militar and of the Instituto Militar de Engenharia.

REVISTA DO CLUBE MILITAR

A 1963 issue is No. 163. No indication of month, ano, or frequency of publication. Founded in 1926. Issues range between 30 to 60 quarto pages.

This journal publishes articles on broad military subjects of general interest and on Brazilian economic developments and institutions. Considerable space is devoted to cultural matters, army institutional news, and social activities.

REVISTA DO INSTITUTO DE GEOGRAFIA E HISTORIA MILITAR
DO BRASIL

The Institute, founded in 1936, is by a decree of 1949 the official advisory organ to the government on matters of geography and military history of Brazil. Its journal, in 1963, carried the designation Ano XXII, Vol. XXX and Vol. XXXI (Nos. 43 and 44). Three issues examined ranged from 75 to 140 pages.

Articles are almost exclusively on the military history of Brazil. Any interest that the Institute may have in geography as a professional discipline does not seem to be reflected in the issues inspected. A few articles deal with diplomatic history, biography, and current military organization; occasional historical documents are reproduced. Review articles. Each issue contains a list of members and officers of the Institute.

REVISTA MARITIMA BRASILEIRA

Published quarterly by the Ministry of the Navy. The issues of 1963 are Ano LXXXIII. About 200 to 220 pages. The first issue of each year carries an alphabetical index to the issues of the preceding year.

Historical studies and technical articles on naval operations. Also articles of general military interest and bearing broadly on problems of national security. A substantial section (Revista de Revistas) reprints and summarizes articles from other military journals or cites titles of principal articles. Each issue contains a special section on air and submarine warfare. Naval and marine news notes reprinted from Brazilian newspapers. Brief news notes on Navy affairs and on administrative acts. Necrology.

REVISTA MILITAR BRASILEIRA

Published by the Ministry of War. The one issue examined (1963) is marked January-June and the journal is presumably issued twice annually. This issue is marked Ano L, Vol. LXXV, and is a substantial volume of 280 pages.

Articles are on broad professional military subjects: psychological warfare, personnel selection, military doctrine, military instruction; and on military history. Brief reprints from other journals. A final section is devoted to institutional news. Articles are accompanied by brief biographical sketches of the authors.

REVISTA MILITAR DE REMONTA E VETERINARIA

Organ of the Diretoria Geral de Remonta. Founded in 1938. Issued quarterly. About 100 pages. Submitted as currently published but the only issue available for examination was that of July-December (Nos. 3-4), Ano XIX, 1959.

Articles of a professional and technical character on veterinary subjects.

BOLETIM PERIODICO DO CORPO DE OFICIAIS DA AERONAUTICA

MILITIA

ANUARIO CIEN AGUILAS

Yearbook of the General Bernardo O'Higgins Military Academy, published by the cadets. The 1964 issue covers the academic period from November 1963 to November 1964.

This substantial volume, in addition to the usual yearbook caricatures and photographs commemorating the social and athletic activities of the Academy, contains complete career biographies of the officers in the chain of command of the school and a complete list of the graduating lieutenants of 1964, apparently in order of academic standing. Additional personnel information, including necrologies.

MEMORIAL DEL EJERCITO DE CHILE

Official organ of the General Staff of the Army. Published every second month. The November-December 1963 issue is No. 316. Issues are approximately 120 pages.

Publishes articles related "directly or indirectly to National Defense." Articles consequently cover a wide range of subjects: political-military posture, strategy and tactics, military history, logistics, military law, military education. On the occasion of the sesquicentennial of national independence, an entire issue (September-October 1960, Año LII, No. 298) was devoted to a history of the Chilean Army from its founding until 1910. A number of articles are translations from foreign journals. Necrology.

REVISTA DE LA FUERZA AEREA

Published quarterly by the Ministry of National Defense and edited by the General Staff of the Air Force. First published in April 1941. The July-December issue of 1964 is Nos. 94-95.

This professional journal of approximately 100 pages publishes technical articles on air operations, aviation materiel, rockets and space developments; also papers on general strategic, geopolitical, and political-military matters. A substantial number of the articles are translations from American, Spanish, French, and British sources. There is a section devoted to brief notes on aviation developments in various countries. Notes on personnel, ceremonial occasions, necrology. Editorial. No. 76, January-March 1961, was entirely devoted to the history of the Chilean Air Force, on the occasion of its thirtieth anniversary as an independent service.

Published every second month by the General Staff of the Army for use of noncommissioned officers of the Army. The 1963 issue is Año V. Each issue contains approximately 100 pages.

"The center of gravity of the Journal will be articles of a professional character bearing on the military establishment and which will principally serve its instructors." In addition to instructional material on military techniques, the journal contains articles of general interest: historical, geographical, scientific, literary. Much of the material is written by noncommissioned officers.

REVISTA DE MARINA

Published every two months by the Chilean Navy. Founded in 1885; in 1965 was publishing its 81st volume. Issues contain about 160 pages. Illustrated.

Most of the articles are on naval history and naval strategy and on technical and scientific problems relating to naval affairs and operations. A number of articles pertain to general military strategic problems and military-political affairs. Little of the material deals specifically with contemporary Chilean military or naval affairs. Articles generally carry a brief biographical on civic action, the role of the military in the nation, news of world military affairs, sports, social notes.

REVISTA DE LA INFANTERIA

Published by the Infantry School of the Armed Forces. The issue of July 1963 is Año III, No. 5. Approximately 130 pages.

"In arriving at its fifth issue, the Infantry Review has shifted its effort toward the area where the principal problems of the nation unfold themselves: violence. Fully convinced of the great need to attain quick and decisive results in the field of guerrilla warfare, the journal's collaborators have completely dedicated themselves to penetrating the various problems that a theme of such great magnitude presents to military thought...."

In conformity with the foregoing editorial comment, the articles in issue No. 5 are devoted entirely to guerrilla warfare. The articles are classified under the following headings: Editorial; Revolutionary War; Operations against Guerrillas; Civic and Psychological Action; Instruction and Techniques in the Use of Arms; Cultural (historical and literary material on guerrilla warfare).

REVISTA DE LAS FUERZAS ARMADAS

Published every two months by the Comando General of the Military Forces. The 1965 issues are Vol. XI, the May-June issue being No. 32. About 230 pages.

Articles are classified under the following headings: Editorial Notes; Military Studies; Strategy and History; Juridical Problems; Social Studies; Scientific Contributions (almost entirely medical); Miscellaneous and Foreign; Bibliography. Most of the articles carry a brief biographical sketch of the author.

REVISTA DEL EJERCITO

Published every two months by the Military Forces. The 1963 issues are Vol. III. About 170 pages.

The journal classifies its articles under the following headings: Editorial Notes; Military Themes; Various Articles (these are generally on economic and military-political affairs); Guerrilla Warfare (articles on this subject also appear under Military Themes); Geography (in the issues examined this section was represented by an encyclopedia style article on a particular Latin American country); History; Episodes of World War II; Bibliography. Most articles carry a brief biographical sketch of the author.

REVISTA POLICIA NACIONAL DE COLOMBIA

Founded March 1912. Published every second month by the National Police. Publication was interrupted five times and in each case resumed, the last time in 1951. The July-August 1963 issue was the 100th issue since 1951 and the 325th issue since 1912. Issues are currently in printings of 32,500 copies. About 110 pages.

Founded originally as a police journal but "in time acquired a cultural character also and became well known in the whole country and abroad." In each of the three issues examined, a substantial part of the journal was devoted to a particular area of Colombia, with articles on the geography, economy, people, and customs of the area. The journal also contains articles on various police responsibilities such as crime prevention and detection, civic action. An institutional section deals with police school activities, personnel matters, regulations, sports. Photographs.

GUATEMALA

ANALES DE LA ESCUELA POLITECNICA

Yearbook of the Guatemalan military academy.
Published annually by the Guatemalan Army. Profusely illustrated.

The 1964 issue, 84 pages, contains photographs of the military and civilian instructors and of the cadets.
There are also general accounts of activities at the academy, including sports and social activities and a brief description of studies.

EJERCITO

This magazine of sixteen pages, published monthly by the Army, began publication in September 1962. The August 1965 issue is Año III, No. 36.

This is an army newsmagazine containing editorials, speeches by military figures, reports of military meetings with other Central American republics, material on civic action, military school activities, social notes, sports, and a short story. There are numerous photographs.

GUATEMALA--continued

REVISTA AEREA DE GUATEMALA

Published by the Guatemalan Air Force. The one issue examined, for December 1960, was Vol. II, No. 2. About 80 pages.

This journal carries reports of Air Force ceremonial occasions, social events, personnel, necrology, and articles and news notes on technical aviation problems.

REVISTA CONSEJO DE DEFENSA CENTROAMERICANA*

The only issue of this new journal we have seen is Año 1, No. 1, published in April 1965 in Guatemala by the Comisión Permanente of the Central American Defense Board, which announces the journal as its official information organ.

The first issue, which is 70 pages, commemorates the founding meeting of the Central American Defense Board in June 1964 by publishing texts of the speeches and plans of the Guatemalan, Honduran, and Nicaraguan military representatives present at that meeting.

Future issues, it is said, will contain sections dealing with News, Doctrine, History, and Social Notes; officers of the Central American military and police forces are invited to contribute.

* Although published in Guatemala and therefore grouped with the Guatemalan journals, the reader is reminded that this is a Central American, and not a Guatemalan, military journal.

Published by the Guatemalan Army under the direction of the Servicio de Relaciones Públicas, Cultura y Acción Cívica of the Army. The April-June issue of 1965 is Vol. 50. Bibliographical citations indicate that the journal was probably first published in 1923/24.

Regular (quarterly) issues contain about 130 pages and are divided into two principal parts: a literary and technical section accounts for a little more than half of the journal; the remainder is a news and photographic section.

Literary and technical section: historical articles, almost all on non-Latin American subjects, comprise about one-third of these pages. Another third is accounted for by papers on general strategic, political, and geopolitical subjects. The remaining third comprises papers on operational and technical subjects, on military education and military schools, and on civic action.

News and photographic section: this covers, with well-reproduced photographs, military school events, meetings with foreign military personnel, civic action events, sports, training exercises, assignments, and other personnel news.

REVISTA MILITAR DE HONDURAS

Official organ of the Armed Forces. Published twice annually by the General Staff. About 50 pages. The January-June issue of 1964 is Año V, No. 8.

The Revista covers a wide variety of subjects: technical military papers, reports on military and economic affairs, school and organization activities, civic action, guerrilla warfare. Editorial.

Apparently published regularly since 1960 and irregularly before then. An undated and unnumbered quarto issue was published shortly after the military coup of October 21, 1956, and is devoted entirely to the coup, including editorial material, chronology of events, biographies of junta leaders, and texts of speeches and proclamations. A similar issue published during 1957 contained thirty-four brief articles largely related to current political-military events.

ARMAS: REVISTA MILITAR

Published every second month by Editorial "Armas."
Registered with the Mexican Post Office for mailing purposes in May 1940. The January 1964 issue is No. 184.
Issues range from about 75 to 115 quarto pages.

The contributors to this magazine and the president of the editorial council are high-ranking military men.
The director-manager is a civilian.

The magazine combines technical military articles and historical military-political papers with the function of a newsmagazine reporting and commenting on the military affairs of the nation. Major political addresses are reported and discussed. Ceremonial occasions involving the military and their accompanying speeches are reported, usually well illustrated with photographs. Numerous advertisements.

BOLETIN JURIDICO--MILITAR

Although apparently currently published, the latest issue we have been able to examine is Vol. XIX, Epoca II,
Nos. 11-12, November-December 1955, which contains pages
443 to 528 of Vol. XIX. Founded 1935.

The twentieth anniversary issue contained an editorial underscoring the contribution of the journal to the study of the Code of Military Justice, military retirement and pension legislation, and military life insurance legislation.

Issues examined contain considerable material on military justice and general Mexican law by both military and civilian lawyers. The question of the competence and jurisdiction of military tribunals is frequently discussed.

EL LEGIONARIO

Organ of the Mexican Legion of Honor, founded in 1951 and distributed to retired officers and to veterans of the revolution. Edited in the Ministry of Defense. Monthly. The November 30, 1964, issue is Vol. XIV, No. 165; 100 pages.

This is an important source for the military history of the Mexican Revolution. Each issue contains much anecdotal and other information in articles about and memoirs of the revolution, whose military survivors are the chief audience and contributors. Also, texts of speeches, general history, poetry.

REVISTA DEL EJERCITO

Published monthly under the auspices of the Secretary of National Defense. The 1965 issues bear the designation: Tomo XX, Epoca XI; the journal was, however, registered with the Mexican Post Office for mailing purposes in July 1936.

Issues contain about 80 pages. Somewhat less than half of the space is devoted to articles on military subjects both of an historical and analytical character. The larger part of the journal is devoted to several different forms of news and official announcements, often accompanied by photographs: reports of ceremonial occasions; promotion lists; military school openings in foreign military schools with rank and age qualifications; news concerning technical developments and notes on materiel and procurements by foreign military establishments. Editorial.

REVISTA DEL HEROICO COLEGIO MILITAR

Published by the Military Academy at Popotlá. The latest issue we have been able to examine, Tomo XII, No. 1, consists of 107 pages and is for January 1952.

Academy activities; essays on general military themes; history; poetry.

REVISTA DE SANIDAD MILITAR

Official publication of the Medical Service. Issued every two months. In 1963 the journal was publishing its 17th volume. Issues are approximately 60 pages.

Articles on technical medical subjects with some emphasis on disorders more especially relevant to military medicine. Occasional army epidemiological studies and articles on administrative problems. News notes and announcements.

REVISTA ECUESTRE MILITAR: REVISTA DE CABALLERIA

Published monthly by the Secretaria de Defensa Nacional. First issue appeared in 1960. The latest issue reviewed is Año IV, No. 41, October 15, 1963. About 50 pages. Illustrated.

This is a newsmagazine covering both equestrian events of general interest (racing, polo, horse shows) and news and notes concerning the activity of different cavalry units. Occasional brief regimental histories. Military news, which initially accounted for less than half of the material, accounted for almost the entire contents in the last issues examined.

REVISTA GENERAL DE LA ARMADA DE MEXICO

Published by the Second Section of the General Staff, this naval journal had reached Vol. 4, No. 19, in December 1963, the last issue examined. The issue was of 96 pages plus the last 32 pages of a book on naval organization, whose serialization had begun in No. 9, February 1962.

The journal publishes articles on naval history, technology, and methods, some of them translated from U.S. journals. It also carries a continuing series of translations and analysis under the title of "Post-War Politico-Military Literature," dealing largely with the literature of World War II.

TRANSMISIONES: REVISTA DE RADIO, TELEVISION Y ELECTRONICA

Published monthly as the official organ of the Servicio de Transmisiones del Ejército. The 1963 issues carry the designation Año XVIII, Tomo XXXII. The December 1963 issue is No. 193. Approximately 50 pages.

This journal is devoted to technical articles in the areas indicated by the title. Substantial space is given to detailed descriptions of apparatus.

The initial pages of the journal carry a limited amount of information on Signal Corps personnel (promotions, decorations, sports).

GACETA PRE MILITAR

This journal "is the official organ of the Inspección General de Instrucción Pre Militar in the service of the nation's students. Its aim is to affirm the basic principles of the Peruvian nation, to disseminate healthy doctrines and to instruct young Peruvians attending primary and secondary schools and institutions of higher learning in those matters related to their preparation for the civil and military defence of the Fatherland." The first issue of 1963 is marked January-July, Año XX, No. 54, but other issues indicate an irregular appearance. About 50 pages.

In addition to articles on the organization and activities of premilitary instruction, the journal contains regular sections on Peruvian geography and history, accounts of famous military events, notes on Peruvian and Latin American Spanish usage, accounts of ceremonial occasions. Issue No. 49-50, 1960-61, contains statistical summaries of premilitary instructional activity for 1960 in the nation's schools.

GUARDIA REPUBLICANA DEL PERU

Published quarterly since 1961 by the Press and Publication Department of the Republican Guard. The third issue of 1964 is No. 12.

A general organ for the Republican Guard, the journal is largely devoted to institutional news, inspirational

DISCONTINUED JOURNALS

To the best of our knowledge the following journals are no longer being published. However, Latin American military journals sometimes resume publication after a lapse of several years. Thus it is possible that some of the journals listed in the main body of this bibliography are continuations of discontinued publications.
