SUBJECT: Audit of the Delegation of Contract Administration to Defense Contract
Management Command International - Europe and the Middle East
(Project No. 4CK-5045)

Introduction

We are providing this report for your information and use. The audit was requested by the Commander, Defense Contract Management Command International (DCMCI), to ensure that all contracts that required delegation to DCMCI - Europe and the Middle East for administration were appropriately delegated by the contracting organizations. The DCMCI is a subordinate command of the Defense Contract Management Command and is responsible for providing management direction and control over contract administration services (CAS) at contractor facilities outside the continental United States.

Audit Results

Contracting organizations appropriately delegated contract administration to DCMCI - Europe and the Middle East for contracts that required the performance of CAS at or near contractor facilities outside the continental United States.

Audit Objectives

The audit objective was to evaluate the delegation of contract administration to DCMCI - Europe and the Middle East. Specifically, we determined whether Army, Navy, Air Force, and Defense Logistics Agency contracting organizations appropriately delegated CAS to DCMCI - Europe and the Middle East.

Scope and Methodology

Universe and Sample. We derived the audit universe of 2,653 contracts from a list of more than 14,000 contracting actions, each valued at over $25,000, with a principal place of performance in Canada, Europe, or the Middle East.

We obtained the list of contract actions using the DD Form 350, "Individual Contracting Action Reports," data base for FYs 1993 and 1994. We eliminated the following items from the original list of contracting actions:

- contracts administered by DCMCI that were identified in DCMCI offices' data bases,
- subcontracts, and
- multiple contracting actions for the same contract.

Additionally, we eliminated contracts for supplies and services specifically excluded from the delegation of CAS by the Defense Federal Acquisition Regulation Supplement subpart 242.203, "Retention of Contract Administration." The regulation allows contracting organizations to retain contracts for specific supplies and services such as:

- base, post, camp, and station purchases;
- construction and maintenance of military and civil public works;
- subsistence supplies; and
- consultant support services.

We visited DCMCI offices in Canada and Europe. Through discussions with DCMCI office individuals and review of contract records, we excluded contracts that those offices administered but that did not appear in DCMCI offices' data bases. We grouped the remaining 2,653 contracts into 87 geographic clusters based upon the organization that awarded the contract. The Quantitative Methods Division of the Analysis, Planning, and Technical Support Directorate, Office of the Assistant Inspector General for Auditing, DoD, selected a sample of 20 geographic clusters that consisted of 2,215 contracts awarded by 90 contracting organizations.

Contracts Reviewed. We reviewed 687 contracts at 27 contracting organizations in 11 of the sample geographic clusters inside and outside the United States. At those organizations, we reviewed policies and guidance regarding delegation of CAS and determined whether contracting organizations were complying with established regulations. Through discussions with contracting personnel and review of contract records, we determined whether contracts required the performance of CAS at or near contractor facilities and whether the contracting organizations appropriately retained or delegated the contracts for administration. After visiting 27 contracting organizations and reviewing 687 contracts, we decided not to review the entire sample because additional audit costs would have outweighed the benefits. Consequently, no statistical projections were made from the sample.

Audit Period, Standards, and Locations. We performed this economy and efficiency audit from July 1994 through March 1996 in accordance with auditing standards issued by the Comptroller General of the United States, as implemented by the Inspector General, DoD. We limited our review to contracting organizations' delegation of contract administration to DCMCI for contracts that required the performance of CAS at or near contractor facilities in Canada, Europe, or the Middle East. We conducted the audit at DCMCI offices in Canada, Europe, and the Middle East, and at randomly selected contracting organizations in the United States and Europe. See Enclosure 1 for a list of organizations visited or contacted.

Use of Computer-Processed Data. To achieve the audit objectives, we relied on computer-processed data in the DD Form 350 data base. The reliability of that system was not the audit's primary objective; consequently, alternative testing of the system was not done to establish data reliability.

We also used data from DCMCI offices' data bases in our initial screening to develop our audit universe. Review of contract files at the DCMCI offices and at contracting organizations demonstrated that those data bases were incomplete. The DCMCI was implementing a computer system, called System for Integrated Contract Management, at DCMCI offices to improve contract accountability.

Prior Audits and Other Reviews

No prior audits covered the area of delegation of contract administration to DCMCI.

Audit Background

Consolidation of DoD CAS. The Defense Contract Management Command, a subordinate command under the Defense Logistics Agency, was established in February 1990 as a result of a DoD initiative to consolidate and streamline CAS within DoD. The consolidation was implemented to avoid or eliminate overlapping or duplication of Government effort and provide a more consistent treatment of contractors. The Defense Contract Management Command provides worldwide CAS through geographically aligned district and field offices. The DCMCI is the field office responsible for providing international CAS to contracting organizations worldwide. The DCMCI administers contracts for depot maintenance, foreign military sales, Defense fuels, and other contracts that require the performance of CAS outside the continental United States.

CAS Functions. The scope of CAS encompasses all functions associated with the performance of the contract from postaward to contract closeout. The functions include contract management, quality assurance, production surveillance, scheduling, ensuring contractor payment, and accepting products on behalf of the U.S. Government. In addition to the standard CAS functions, DCMCI manages the unique aspects of international CAS, such as resolution of politically sensitive issues, cultural diversity, a different workload baseline, and nonstandard support and administrative requirements.

Discussion

Delegation of Contract Administration. Contracting organizations appropriately delegated contract administration to DCMCI offices in accordance with the Federal Acquisition Regulation part 42, "Contract Administration." The regulation requires contracting organizations to delegate contract administration to cognizant field contract administration offices when contracts require the performance of CAS "at or near contractor facilities." Of the 687 contracts reviewed, 162 contracts required delegation to DCMCI offices because the contracts required the performance of CAS at or near contractor facilities outside the continental United States. The contracting organizations appropriately delegated 160 of the 162 contracts to DCMCI offices. The two contracts that were not delegated were inadvertently retained by a contracting organization. The remaining 525 contracts* reviewed did not require delegation to DCMCI because the contracts:

- did not require the performance of CAS at or near contractor facilities outside the continental United States;
- were for supplies and services specifically excluded from the delegation of CAS by the Defense Federal Acquisition Regulation Supplement 242.203;
- were excluded by host nation agreements; or
- were awarded before the establishment of DCMCI.

Contract Accountability. The DCMCI offices could not readily account for all contracts delegated to them for administration because their contract data bases and contract records were incomplete and inaccurate. We could not identify all contracts that DCMCI offices administered because DCMCI offices did not maintain accurate records of the contracts that they administered. Our review of contracts at the contracting organizations identified contracts that had been delegated to DCMCI offices but did not appear in DCMCI offices' contract data bases or contract records. To improve contract accountability, DCMCI was implementing a new computer system, the System for Integrated Contract Management, at DCMCI offices. We believe that the system will improve contract accountability; therefore, we are not making any recommendations.

Retention of Contract Administration. Contracting organizations did not always properly retain for administration contracts not requiring the performance of CAS at or near contractor facilities. The Federal Acquisition Regulation subpart 42.203, "Retention of Contract Administration," states that contracting organizations shall retain for administration any contract not requiring the performance of CAS "at or near contractor facilities." The contracting offices inappropriately delegated 116 contracts to field contract administration offices that did not require the performance of CAS at or near contractor facilities. As a result, the contracting organizations and their respective field contract administration offices incurred unnecessary costs for the reproduction, distribution, processing, and storage for the 116 contracts. Because the scope of the audit was limited to the delegation of contract administration to DCMCI for contracts requiring the performance of CAS at or near contractor facilities in Canada, Europe, or the Middle East, we could not accurately determine the magnitude of the problem, and we are not making any recommendations in this report.
