Conclusions

- Pakistan increasingly fragile
- Islamist extremism is spreading
- Pakistan has replaced Afghanistan as the base for terrorism in West (al-Qaida)
- Pakistan wants a friendly regime in Afghanistan to counter India
- Islamabad has long used militant groups as proxies, has lost control, but has persisted in this policy
- Balochistan key command and logistics centre for Afghan Taliban; Islamabad unlikely to act against them
- Bomb-making expertise and material widely available in Pakistan, cross border easily
- Militants in Pakistan have been more determined than government, army and society
- Afghan Taliban and allies will likely retain (Pakistan) sanctuary crucial to insurgency in Afghanistan
