June 1991

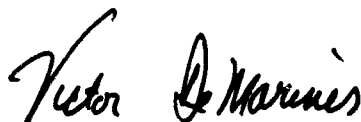

The MITRE Corporation is an independent not-for-profit organization devoted to research, development, engineering, and scientific activities in the public service. The company does not manufacture products or compete with industry.

After a reorganization in 1990, MITRE expanded from three to five operating centers. Personnel from two of the centers are located primarily at our headquarters in Bedford, Massachusetts (with one technical division located in the Washington area). These two centers are the Center for Air Force Command, Control, and Communications (C³) Systems and the Center for Intelligence and Special Programs. The remaining three operational centers are based in McLean, Virginia: the Washington C³ Center, the Center for Advanced Aviation System Development, and the Center for Civil Systems.

The Center for Intelligence and Special Programs supports the Air Force Electronic Systems Division (ESD), the Army and Navy, a wide variety of intelligence agencies, and the Unified and Specified Commands. The Center provides system engineering support to components of the intelligence community, particularly in the areas of networks, information security, artificial intelligence, and workstation technologies.

This publication is an overview of the professional activities of the Center for Intelligence and Special Programs for the 1990 calendar year. As in past years, our employees have made valuable contributions to the technical and scientific communities through their documents, journal articles, presentations, and participation in group activities. Many of our staff teach in local colleges and universities. Unclassified reports generated within the Center for Intelligence and Special Programs are listed here, as well as participation of our staff in professional and honorary organizations.

We are proud of our employees and their many professional activities, successes, and contributions to the community. We are pleased to recognize them in this Summary of Professional Activities publication.
